Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, December 17; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, December 16; Calcutta, December 15.

FROM the Bombay Famine Report for the week ending December 8 we learn that the numbers on relief works had fallen to 9,570, and on charitable relief to 11,461. The only works besides the Dhond-Manmar Railway on which any large number of persons were employed were the Ashti and Matoba Tanks. In the Native States relief works have been closed everywhere save in Kolhapur and the Southern Maratha Country. There was "continued improvement in the general situation, but one more good fall of rain throughout the affected districts would greatly enhance the prospects of the season." The last weekly statement would be issued on December 22.

THE latest famine report of the Madras Government states that the number of persons employed on famine works decreased during the previous week to the extent of 26,600, and those receiving gratuitous relief by 34,500. Food prices were falling slightly. Two inches of rain fell on the 11th in Ganjam, the one district in Madras in which distress was still apprehended. It was estimated that in the course of another week there would only be about 10,000 persons in Bellary district requiring village relief, half of whom would be adults unfit for labour, and the remainder children. There was a good deal of grain in store; and it had been suggested that an issue be made of either two or three months' supply of grain, at 1lb. a day, to each person at present in receipt of gratuitous village relief, with a warning that they must expect no further relief from the State.

A MADRAS correspondent of the Bombay Gazette states that several instances of irregularities on the part of Lieutenant Wilson, Divisional Famine Officer at Gutti, had been reported to the Governor of Madras, who straightway telegraphed to the Collector of Bellary to inquire into and report upon the alleged offences. The Collector exonerates Lieutenant Wilson from all the serious charges, and passes a high tribute upon his services. The complaints were very much exaggerated, and appear to have been "prompted by excessive spite and jealousy."

THE trial of Joaquim Charles Britto, an Indo-Portuguese native of Goa, for the murder of Michael Roonan, in Bombay, on the 16th of October last, ended on Saturday, December 15, when the jury, after a five days' hearing, returned an unanimous verdict of "guilty." It was pleaded in defence that the prisoner was insane. One of the chief medical witnesses for the defence said that whenever an ordinarily sane man got into a passion he became for the time insane—"Ira furor brevis est," in short. But Mr. Justice Green, who tried the case, when passing sentence of death on the prisoner, very properly held that, taking into consideration the whole of the evidence for and against the prisoner, and having regard to the law, the jury could not have returned any other verdict.

NOTHING important is reported by mail from either of the columns encamped in the Jawaki country. A large Jawaki council was held on December 12 at Jammu. The enemy declared that he would not treat as long as troops remain in his country. No negotiations had yet been opened, and the terms offered by Government will not be published until overtures of some kind are made by the Jawakis. They are supposed to have suffered considerably; but as a rule have declined to show fight. Our losses have been very small; and though the cold has been intense, the men are reported to be in good health and spirits. The effect of the expedition on the surrounding tribes is said to be excellent. Some of the prisoners own to having besought the Akhund of Swat for aid, but he only cursed them as Kafirs who robbed and murdered good Mussulmans.

AT the meeting of the Viceregal Council on Wednesday, December 12, Mr. Hope obtained leave to introduce a Bill to amend the Opium Act, and Sir E. Bayley a Bill to amend the Arms Act. Sir E. Johnson strongly supported the Bill on military grounds. On the motion of Mr. Cockerell, the new Stamp Bill was referred to a select committee, after Sir John Strachey had explained the meaning and principles of the Bill. Some of the new members were added to the select committees on different Bills, and the Council adjourned for a week.

WITH reference to Major Thomason's mission to inspect the Madras Harbour works, the Pioneer now further tells us that Major Thomason will make no final report on the prospects of the undertaking. That duty is reserved for Sir Andrew Clarke himself, who has been requested by the Viceroy to visit Madras in January, and go carefully into the whole subject. "It is to pave the way for this visit, and to get together all the facts required for a full appreciation of the problems at stake, so that no part of the short time which Sir Andrew Clarke will be able to devote to them may be wasted, that Major Thomason has been sent on in advance. We may add that, in the course of his long and varied service, Sir Andrew Clarke has had a great deal of experience of harbour construction and maintenance."

WE note that the Secretary of State for India has ordered that 20 lbs. of the new alkaloid, quinamine, discovered by Hesse a few years ago in the Himalaya bark, shall be sent home, in order that its action may be carefully studied. We are glad also to hear that on the recommendation of the Indian Government Lord Salisbury has sanctioned a pension of Rs. 7,411-8 per annum to Dr. Oldham, late Superintendent of the Geological Survey of India, as a special case, in consideration of the eminent scientific services of that officer.

THE Maharao Rajah of Alwar, having obtained his majority, was invested with full powers of Government in a grand Darbar at the Alwar Palace on the 10th December, by Mr. Lyall, Governor-General's Agent for Rajputana.

THE Naga Hills Expedition on the 8th December assaulted and occupied Mozima, which was the leading village in nearly all the raids. The Naga resistance was trifling, and no loss was sustained by our troops. It is believed that there will be no further resistance. On the same day the party sent from Golagat against the Nagas arrived at Woka. There was no opposition, and most of the Naga villages were friendly. The villages of Pangti and Rephem still held aloof.

THE following items complete our summary of latest mail news:—

Messrs. G. K. Webster and H. B. Simpson have resigned the Bengal Civil Service.

Colonel Duffin, 4th N. I., has retired from the service; he has accepted one of the annuities.

The Hon. Mr. Paul and Mr. E. C. Morgan are appointed members of the Legislative Council of India.

The opium revenue to date, compared with the estimate for the year 1877-78, shows 46½ lakhs in excess of estimate.

Colonel J. N. Young, Bengal Staff Corps, Deputy Judge Advocate General, has been Gazetted Judge Advocate General, in succession to Colonel G. C. Hatch, c.s.i.

The death of Colonel Cox, of the 3rd Buffs, is announced from Cawnpore. Colonel Penn, R.A., died at Puna on Friday, Dec. 14.

THE difficulties connected with canal irrigation have found an able exponent in Mr. Buck, Director of Agriculture in the North-West Provinces, whose paper on the subject has just been published in the Government Gazette. He declares himself completely at one with the late Colonel Corbett "as to the evil effects of irrigating ordinary unmanured soil. There is no subject on which I have written more strongly for many years past, and no fact which has been more urgently pressed upon my notice by the cultivating population." Many a native cultivator or landlord has told him that when the canal first came into his village he thought his fortune was made. "For two or three years the village was a garden; but year after year we have seen the crops grow shorter, and the ears become lighter, until now our outturn is far less than when we had no canal at all." It is certain, says Mr. Buck, that "years have passed during which canal water has been undermining the fertility of the soil which it has irrigated without any notice having been taken of the process, until suddenly our revenue administrators have been startled to find that in certain tracts of canal-irrigated land rents cannot be paid, and crops have ceased to grow." An indigo-planter assured him that the produce in canal-irrigated lands, in his opinion, would be worse yearly; "what with sowing the same seed, and with this constant cropping and flooding, the lands are being thoroughly exhausted. I remark yearly a great falling-off of leaf, and this, by-the-by, appears to be increasing. Canal plant grows too quickly; it is, in fact, forced, and it consequently cannot draw sufficient support from the soil fast enough to keep pace with its rapid growth. If I am right in my conjecture, produce will get worse as the soil becomes more exhausted." From all this Mr. Buck concludes that "too much attention has been given to extension of canal area, and too little to the conditions under which it is extended." He himself seems to expect more good from deep ploughing and the encouragement of tree-planting than from any system of artificial irrigation. With regard to the planting of trees he admits that further discussion is useless; the conservation of forests being now one of the duties recognised by Government, whilst planting groves is encouraged by remissions of revenue. He would encourage deep ploughing by means of estates under the Court of Wards, where the experience acquired at the model farms might be brought home to the cultivator, new methods of cultivation explained, and new plants introduced. A further step might eventually be taken by the establishment of agricultural schools on estates, the area of which was large enough to afford scope for their operation. The introduction of English ploughs he regards as only a matter of time. When a plough sufficiently light for country cattle, and cheap enough for the pocket of the Indian rayat can be manufactured, he does not doubt that its use will rapidly extend.

THE following telegram, dated December 29, has been received at the India-office from the Viceroy:—

Season telegram from 22nd to 28th December. Madras.—General prospects continue good. Prices continue falling slowly. Crops harvested; outturn from half to full. Standing crops in good condition. Heavy rain in Tanjor, Madura, Tinnevely, damaged dry crops. Imports of rice from Burma are slight; but those from Calcutta continue active. On works, 202,323; gratuitous, 281,432. Bombay.—No material change. Slight showers in parts of four districts, and beneficial rain in Mysor. Weather clear and cool. Fever prevalent. Crops generally in good condition. On works, 45,163; gratuitous, 15,493. Haidarabad.—No change reported. Rabi prospects good in assigned districts. In Central India weather unseasonably hot, and scarcity of water reported from Bundelkand. In Rajputana, Punjab, North-Western Provinces, and Oudh prospects continue favourable; improved in parts where more rain fell during the week. Bengal.—Weather seasonable, prospects fair; but some rain wanted in Bahar and Chota Nagpur. No rain reported from Puri, but weather said to be seasonable. Central Provinces.—Weather cloudy and close, crops in two districts damaged by recent rains, but prospects generally fair. In Assam and Burmah reaping going on; prospects good. We propose, owing to favourable and settled prospects, to discontinue our weekly telegrams, but will keep your Lordship fully informed from time to time of State affairs and our proceedings.

ACCORDING to the Times telegram of Dec. 30, from Calcutta, so far as the Indian Press has spoken, Sir John Strachey's financial speech has been received with emphatic approval. All classes have keenly felt the urgent necessity of according to the Government at this time of grave financial difficulty a generous and unqualified support. The noble lesson of English charity has already borne fruit, and has excited among the enlightened sections of the native community an emulative and local zeal. A sense of intense relief has been universally expressed at the determination of Government not to reimpose an income-tax as a last resource. No one who has not had an actual experience of the terrible inquisitorial oppression and persecution to which its collection gives rise can even faintly gauge the horror and consternation felt by people in India at the whispered possibility of the reimposition of this much-dreaded tax. As the first fruit of the new fiscal policy the following Bills have been introduced into Council:—A Bill for the Licensing of Trades and Dealings in the Punjab, the North-West Provinces, and Oudh; three Bills for the levy of additional rates on land in the North-West Provinces, in Oudh, in the Punjab, and in the Central Provinces; to each of which Bills the following statement of objects and reasons is appended in the Financial Statement for 1877-78:—

Attention was drawn to the necessity imposed upon the Government of India of bringing the public revenues and expenditure into a condition of proper equilibrium. The events which have occurred since that time have shown that the urgency of the case has become greater with each succeeding month of the prolonged crisis through which the country has been passing. After the famine of 1874 in Northern Bengal, the Government of Lord Northbrook declared that such calamities could no longer be treated as abnormal or exceptional, and that sound financial principles required that the grave obligations entailed by famine upon the Government should be explicitly recognised and provided for among the ordinary charges of the State. The Secretary of State agreed with Lord Northbrook's Government that the periodical occurrence of famine ought to enter into the calculation of the Government of India when making provision for its ordinary wants from year to year, and that such a surplus should be provided in each year as would make a sensible impression on the debt incurred in times of famine. Her Majesty's Government having recently reaffirmed this principle, to enable the Government to discharge the obligations placed upon it to meet these requirements additional taxation has been deemed necessary to provide for a portion of this in a manner suited to the condition of the country and the special circumstances of the case.

The salient and most important features of the new financial policy are the endeavours to equalise the pressure of taxation on the landed and mercantile classes, and the effort by a universal equalisation of the salt-tax throughout India to abolish the costly and inefficient Excise machinery of the inland Customs.

THE same informant states that no further movements have been made by the Jawaki expedition. All, moreover, is reported quiet at Quettah and along the frontier line.

FROM the same despatch we learn that the Bombay papers condemn the raising of the Salt-tax, but we are told to remember that this tax is in lieu of the land cess which is to be levied elsewhere, and that its increased incidence as estimated will not be more than twopence per head yearly; and, further, that this very small sum will be spread over the whole year in a series of infinitesimal fractions. All this may be true, but it hardly seems to justify the enhancing of a tax theoretically unsound and practically mischievous in the two provinces which have suffered latest from famine; a tax, too, which, as Sir G. Campbell points out in the Times, falls with all its weight on the poorest classes, who have to put up already, in Bombay and Madras, with a cheap and inferior kind of salt.

THERE is reason also for grave doubts as to the working of the licence-tax on trades. If one pound is the highest rate to be levied under it, we are inclined to fear with Sir J. Campbell that it will fall exclusively on the poor, leaving untouched "the rich, noisy, and influential classes who nowadays make and unmake Indian reputations."

ACCORDING to recent telegrams the Viceroy of India held chapters of the Orders of the Bath and the Star of India on New Year's Day, Sindia was invested with the Grand Cross of the Order of the Bath, and there were several investitures of the Star of India, among the recipients being General Kennedy. There is no news from the seat of war on the frontier. The weather is rainy. The Gazette of Jan. 3 contains the nominations to the Order of the Indian Empire. The members of the Imperial Council are members ex-officio of the Order. The Gazette gives the names of the first fifty members, but the ceremony of bestowing the decoration is deferred.

FROM the same source we learn that the conduct of Sindia during his recent visit has again, as at Delhi last year, occasioned considerable comment. One very significant fact deserves notice. The Maharajah has come and gone without having paid the ordinary ceremonial visit to the Lieutenant-Governor of the Province. It adds the correspondent, "this meant nothing more than an empty act of discourtesy, it would be unworthy of record; but such a grave and unusual discourtesy committed to a representative of the British Government in his own province has a special and intentional significance which it would be wise not altogether to ignore."

ACCORDING to the Times telegram of yesterday's date from Calcutta the anniversary of the proclamation of the Queen as Empress of India was celebrated on the first day of the new year with much stately pomp and varied ceremonial. A chapter was held early in the day for the purpose of investing the Maharajah of Gwalior with the Order of the Bath, and at a later hour a second Chapter was held, when various members of the Order of the Star of India were invested with the insignia and badges, the only new appointment being that of General Kennedy. In the evening a commemorative State dinner was given by the Viceroy, and the city was generally illuminated. The ceremony, however, which absorbed most interest was the unveiling by the Viceroy of the statue of the Queen, the gift of his Highness the Maharajah of Bardwan to the Indian people. This ceremony was held in the afternoon at the new Museum, in the presence of a large and distinguished assembly. The Maharajah opened the proceedings with an appropriate speech, in which he enlarged especially on the new bonds woven between England and India by the late noble subscriptions towards the relief of the famine. After a long reply from the Viceroy, the statue was unveiled. It is a "highly idealised" likeness of the Queen, by Mr. Marshall Wood. This eventful day was still further celebrated by the inauguration of the new Order of the Indian Empire. The following are the most noteworthy in the gazetted list of Companions:—Gregory Charles Paul, Advocate-General and a member of the Council; Captain Burne, Private Secretary; Mir Ali Khan, heir of the Jam of Las Bela; Sirdar Asad Khan, a Khelat Chief; Sirdar Golam Khan, another Khelat Chief; W. W. Hunter, the distinguished civilian and author; Sir Richard Meade; Rajendra Lala Mitra; L. S. Jackson, an eminent civilian of the High Court; Judge Khristodass Pal, a member of the Bengal Council; John Rivett Carnac, Opium Agent; General Cunningham; Admiral Bythessa; George Smith, formerly editor of the Friend of India.

IN a recent letter to the Times Mr. Alexander Rogers, late member of the Bombay Council, throws out a proposal which will hardly satisfy Mr. Bright, but which would go as far as prudence permits towards completing the process first applied by Lord Mayo to the financial administration of India. The concession to the local governments of India of the right to spend a certain quota of the general revenues on certain prescribed objects, and to levy taxes for the same purpose in their respective provinces, has of late been carried a few steps further by Lord Lytton's Government. But Mr. Rogers would like to see the principle of local responsibility for local outlay carried to its utmost possible limits.

Let the general Imperial Treasury be the receiver, and not the giver. Let the Local Governments control every branch of revenue and expenditure except the Army, the Navy, and the Public Debt, the home expenses, the Mint, Post-office and Telegraphs, the Railways, the Departments under the immediate management of the Viceroy in Council, and the payment of pensions and other similar allowances. For all these let sufficient funds be provided in fair proportions (what these should be it would take up too much of your space to indicate) by the Local Governments, and let the benefit of all increase of revenue beyond this be allowed to remain with the latter for expenditure on improvements, material and administrative, within their own limits. There can be no doubt that the result would be an immediate improvement in the financial condition of the country generally, for each province would feel that it was doing its best for itself, and the vain attempt, rightly condemned by Mr. Bright, of endeavouring to control the affairs of over 200,000,000 of men from a single small centre of less than a dozen officials would be abandoned.

MR. ROGERS also thinks that the good of the country would "certainly be consulted if there were always one member from each of the smaller Presidencies in the Supreme Executive Council, and the representative members in the Legislative Council were always present, while projects of law were under discussion, instead of returning to their own Presidencies for the greater portion of the year." He recommends, moreover, that the sittings of the Legislative Council should frequently be held at Madras, Bombay, and other places beyond the Bengal Presidency (inclusive of the North-Western Provinces and the Punjab), "so that the public opinion of all parts of India might be brought to bear on the various measures brought forward from time to time, and the narrowness of view naturally engendered by consultations held among a few individuals, however able, in an out-of-the-way corner of the country might thus in some degree be counteracted." To this enlarged Council he would assign among other things the duty of considering the relations of the British Government with the native States, "especially with regard to the effect the systems of revenue and financial management in the latter exercise on our own financial policy." While the Indian Exchequer, for instance, is largely dependent on the rigid carrying out of a certain method of levying an excise on salt and opium, the territories of native States which in many places overlap and are intermingled with our own are made use of by smugglers for the evasion of our Excise laws. "This intermingling of territory is such as to render hopeless any attempt at the repression of smuggling by preventive establishments, and the only remedy is the adoption of the same excise system on both sides of the border. Would it be at all an unreasonable exercise of the influence of the paramount Power to press upon those States the adoption of our excise system for their own financial advantage, and to prevent the thwarting of those measures which we find indispensable for the maintenance of our Imperial rule?"

SIR JAMES STEPHEN'S vindication of the Indian Government from Mr. Bright's aspersions has just been seconded by Mr. Juland Danvers in the following passage from his recent letter to the Times:—

With regard to the oft-repeated allegation as to the preference which has been given to railways to the hindrance of canals, I would simply say that there has not, I believe, been a single statesman connected with the administration of India, nor a single officer, civil or military, of any influence, who, after considering the subject without prejudice, has not been in favour of extending both irrigation and railway works, as funds were available, wherever they were practicable and suitable. And there are very few who would not agree with Sir James Stephen in thinking "that the evil of famine is so terrible that when it can be averted by a moderate insurance, that insurance should not only be paid, but should be made compulsory." This is the policy which we see by Sir John Strachey's Budget, just published, is now being adopted by the Government.

The proper application of canals and railways, and their combination both with each other and with subordinate means of communication, is the problem which has to be worked out. We may be sure that this will not be done by those who indiscriminately and blindly declare that canals, and canals only, are suitable for the wants of the country.

To the flourishing condition of Indian railways at this moment Mr. Danvers bears competent witness:—

During the last half-year, ended the 30th of June, for which the revenue accounts have been made up, the receipts from the railways, taking the paying and non-paying together, show a surplus over the guaranteed interest of £1,060,000. The estimate included in Sir James Stephen's statement says £1,317,260 for the whole year. The difference will be more than made up by the earnings of the current half-year. The shareholders of two companies have divided in respect of the last half-year upwards of half a million in addition to the guaranteed interest, their dividends having been at the rate of £7. 10s. and £7, instead of £5 per cent. per annum. As the Government divide the surplus profits with the companies, it will be seen that the total earnings were at the rate of £10 and £9 per cent. respectively. It is true that the half-year in question is generally better than the second half of the year, but it may be remarked that while the famine greatly increased the traffic for internal purposes, it so absorbed the resources of the railways as to diminish the traffic for external purposes, and that since the transport of grain to Southern India has declined a large export trade has been carried on.

THE following allotments of annuities from the Bombay Medical Retiring Fund for 1878 have been made:—£252 to Surgeon-General W. Thom, £210 to Surgeon-General E. Mahaffy, M.D., C.B., and £168 to Surgeon-General J. R. Miller, M.D.

Two new Orders have been founded in the past week, the Order of the Indian Empire, and the Imperial Order of the Crown in India. The eighteen English ladies who have received the latter honour may be thus divided. Wives or widows of Viceroy of India, four—namely, Lady Mayo, Lady Lytton, Lady Lawrence, Lady Elgin; daughters of former Viceroys, two—Lady Susan Bourke (daughter of the Marquis of Dalhousie), Lady Jane Emma Baring (daughter of Lord Northbrook); wives of the later Secretaries of State for India, five—Lady Halifax, Lady Ripon, Lady Salisbury, Lady Northcote, and the Duchess of Argyll; wives and widows of provincial Governors, six—Lady Frere, Lady Temple, Lady Denison, Lady Strachey, Lady Hobart, and Lady Napier (of Ettrick), and, lastly, Lady Mary Temple-Nugent-Brydges-Chandos-Grenville, daughter of the Duke of Buckingham, now Governor of Madras. Of the special meaning or usefulness of either of these new honours we remain in utter ignorance. Possibly they are the natural fruits of the pageant held at Delhi on the first day of last year. It is a triumph for the ladies to have got an Order all to themselves, and if they are satisfied the male world will not complain.

Odds and Ends.

THE REV. A. S. MITCHELL is appointed Chaplain of Fatehgarh.

DR. A. S. LETHBRIDGE, Officiating Sanitary Commissioner, is appointed to act as Inspector General of Jails, in addition to his present duties, in the place of Mr. Beverley.

THE harvest is now general through the Central Provinces, and in some districts threshing has commenced. As the out-turn promises to be generally good, prices are falling.

MR. H. BEVERLEY, Officiating Inspector General of Jails, succeeds Mr. J. O'Kinealy as Additional Judge of the 24-Parganas and Hughli.

COLONEL MARDALL, Judge Advocate-General of Madras, goes home shortly on leave, and will not return to India. Colonel Sherard is expected to be his successor.

THE Bateson horse fair passed off very quietly this year, not half the usual number of animals having been brought there for sale; but all the good ones were soon sold at reasonable prices.

SIR RICHARD POLLOCK, Commissioner of Peshawar, has gone to join the camp in the Jawaki country.

SIR JOHN AND LADY STRACHEY left Allahabad for Calcutta on Monday morning (Nov. 26), and arrived on Wednesday.

THE members of the Oudh Bar, headed by Dr. Sackville Davis, delivered a most complimentary farewell address to the retiring Judicial Commissioner, Mr. C. Currie, on Friday, Nov. 30.

MAJOR F. HAMMOND, officiating second in command, takes command of the 5th Punjab Cavalry from the date of Major B. Williams's departure to assume command of the 2nd Punjab Cavalry.

MR. H. F. EVANS, who has lately returned from furlough, is posted as assistant settlement officer to the Agra district.

THE bridge-of-boats over the Indus at Dera Ismail Khan was carried away by a flood on the 26th Nov.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL F. ETON is gazetted to officiate as Deputy Adjutant General in the place of Colonel H. F. Brooke; Major H. Thompson to officiate as 1st Assistant Adjutant General, and Major M. C. Farrington of 51st Foot, to officiate as Assistant Adjutant General.

THE following is the result of the opium sale held at the Government sale-room, No. 2, Bankshall-street, on Dec. 3:—

	Chests.	Highest.	Lowest.	Average.	Proceeds.
Behar ...	2,080	1,370	1,360	1,364 2 1	28,37,400
Benares ...	1,920	1,315	1,300	1,306 3 9	25,07,975

CAPTAIN E. SHAW, Assistant Commissioner, 1st class, Maisur, has taken eighteen months' furlough on medical certificate, and Captain Macgrath, Officiating Assistant Commissioner, 2nd class, has been appointed to act for him.

A PROPOSAL is, we learn, at present before the Government of India for the construction of a lighthouse, of Portland cement concrete, on the Krishna shoal off the coast of Burma, to replace the lighthouse recently destroyed at that place.

A GOOD EXAMPLE.—The 11th (Prince Albert's Own) Hussars, who sailed for England in the troopship Malabar on Thursday, after having served eleven years in India, are remarkable as having been the first British Cavalry regiment to carry out a certain military reform of great importance in India. When the regiment arrived in this country, Colonel C. Fraser, who then commanded it, and who had seen something of Indian service before, resolved to try the experiment of making the men do their own work out here as they had been in the habit of doing it at home. The 11th took over the Indian establishment of the Bays at Mhow, and Colonel Fraser immediately discharged about 650 followers, and told his men they must groom their own horses and do other duties of which cavalry soldiers serving in India had previously been relieved. The men, never having been accustomed to anything else, obeyed this order without a murmur; and the example thus set has since been followed by other regiments.—Bombay Gazette, Dec. 10.

ACCIDENTAL DEATH BY DROWNING OF AN OFFICER.—It is a painful duty we have to perform in announcing the sad and untimely death of Lieut. C. Cruse, of H.M.'s 11th Regiment, which melancholy event occurred on Tuesday evening last, under the following circumstances:—The deceased officer, in company with a comrade, resolved to go duck-shooting to the village of Legaon—a couple of miles north of the Yerrowda Jail—and having succeeded in spotting one of the feathered tribe, discharged the contents of his barrel, which left the duck floating in a lifeless state on the surface of the water. He next decided upon jumping into the tank and possessing himself of the game which he attempted, but unfortunately failed in accomplishing, having got entangled in the weeds. His friend, observing from a distance his distressful condition, jumped into the tank, and made a gallant attempt at rescuing him, thereby jeopardising his own life; but his efforts proved of no avail, and he was obliged to relinquish the idea on finding himself exposed to the danger of meeting a similar fate. He then made all haste in reporting the matter to Dr. Salaaman, the Superintendent of the Yerrowda Jail, but as the day was far advanced, further steps for the recovery of the body for the time being were abandoned; however, early the next morning, Dr. Salaaman in co-operation with his warders, had the tank, dragged, in the presence of a number of officers with due precaution, and succeeded in tracing the body, which was brought ashore and conveyed with all possible despatch to the regimental hospital at Wanowrie. The deceased officer's remains were interred in the Poona cemetery yesterday evening. He was buried with military honours, and the funeral was numerously attended.—Poona Observer, Dec. 13.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

THE MADRAS HARBOUR.

So much has been written in India about the futility of the Madras Harbour Works, and the story of their actual stoppage by the local government has been so often repeated, that Mr. Parkes, the Chief Engineer of the works, has not come forward too soon to declare the truth of the matter. In his letter to the Times he shows how the works were sanctioned "after fifteen months' full discussion by the Government of Madras, the Government of India, and the Secretary of State. This was nearly three years ago. Up to the present time none of these authorities have given any indication of a desire to reverse the policy then determined on." He admits that difficulties have arisen, which "have been made the ground of a good deal of amateur criticism," but declares that these are being successfully overcome, and that those who have gone most closely into the matter "appear to have no doubt of the ultimate success and great advantage of the work when completed."

The cost of the works was estimated at £565,000. Thus far only £120,000 has been expended or contracted for, and "every important item of actual expenditure is within the estimate." The Government is empowered to borrow £628,000, so as to provide for interest before harbour revenue accrues. With regard to this future harbour revenue, Mr. Parkes writes as follows:—

At present a sum of 2s. per ton at least is expended in propelling the cargo boats, carrying two tons each, backwards and forwards through the surf. If this be saved on 300,000 tons, the amount of trade in ordinary years, doubled or even trebled in a year of famine, £30,000 per annum will be set free. The interest on £628,000 is £25,120, leaving £4,880 annual profit, besides the saving of damage to goods, the saving in insurance, the saving in wear and tear to ships lying in an exposed roadstead, and on the whole a greater safety to life and property in the furious cyclones which occasionally visit the Madras coast. Add to these advantages based on the present amount of trade, the increase which may be expected to follow the removal of so serious an obstacle as the Madras surf, and I think your correspondent will admit that he has not been fortunate in choosing the Madras Harbour Works as an example of unprofitable expenditure.

We shall look with interest for the promised report from Sir Andrew Clarke.

INDIAN EXPORT DUTIES.

It is now some years since Lord Northbrook's Government swept away a number of export duties from the Indian Tariff, with great advantage to India's export trade. The recent increase in the exports of wheat, oils, seeds, and lac dye may in part be traced to the removal of duties which tended to hamper the trade in those articles. Why the relief thus afforded to some branches of commercial industry was not extended to others at least as deserving of relief we have never been able to understand. Why, for instance, should rice, indigo, and shellac be still burdened with a tax which has been taken off wheat, oil-seeds, and lac dye? It is true that the duty on rice still brings in half a million, but it yielded a good deal more five years ago. The duties on indigo and shellac have not even the excuse of profiting the Exchequer, while they certainly injure the trade in those staples, and so inflict on the producers a loss which ultimately affects the State. The extent of the mischief caused by these duties has been clearly set forth in a series of letters lately published in this journal. The writer, for whose intimacy with all questions of Indian polity we can safely vouch, argues in agreement with the late Mr. Bagehot, that whatever tends to hinder the export trade from India must tend, as things are, to lower the exchange value of the rupee. He shows how the export duty on rice acts as a tax of about 10 per cent. on cleaned rice, and of about 16 per cent. on paddy, or rice in the husk. And this duty falls in fact on the Indian peasant, whose land is already taxed directly by the State, and whose industry is further hampered by "the vile octroi" which prevents the storing of rice in Indian towns. If the export duty were removed, "the Indian agriculturist would be relieved from double taxation, millions of tons of rice would be supplied to every quarter of the globe, the value of the rupee would be raised, and remittances from India would be made without difficulty." In view of the steadily growing consumption of rice in all parts of the world, and of India's power to meet the growing demand, it is obvious that a tax of something like ten per cent. on the Indian staple must serve to handicap the Indian producer in the rivalry with other countries which export rice.

With reference to the duties on indigo, the same able writer shows how a like injustice on the part of the Indian Government redounds to the injury of the European planters who have to compete in foreign markets with the untaxed produce of many rivals. These duties have never yielded more than a trifle over £47,000 a-year, while they represent for the planters a loss of many times that amount on their yearly profits. It is partly owing to the retention of this impost that in this country cheaper and inferior dyes are now taking the place of Indian-made indigo. France and Italy, however, still "understand the value of a beautiful and fast innoxious colour," and take largely of the Indian produce in preference even to the untaxed dyes of Guatemala. It is needless to remark on the folly of hampering a trade which has been for years maintained under all difficulties by the energy and resources of our own countrymen in India. The trade in shellac, on the other hand, gives employment to a number of half-wild tribes who gather the gum in their native hill jungles and exchange it for cotton and woollen cloths. The exports of lac already exceed the value of half-a-million sterling, but the demand for this useful varnish seems to be checked by an export duty which amounts now only to £20,000 a year. As a varnish shellac has no equal; but the duty adds to its price and tends to lessen the supply. Why the duty on shellac was retained when that on lac-dye was abolished in 1875 is one of those mysteries which we cannot undertake to solve. Perhaps, as our correspondent suggests, a momentary rise in the price of the gum tempted the Indian Government with hopes of sharing in the profits. If so, they forgot that "export duties never promote any increase in trade," and they soon learnt the folly of such hopes, for, just as the duty was raised from twenty-eight to eighty rupees, prices began to fall, and they seem to have been falling ever since.

GENERAL KENNEDY is expected to have finished his work in the Madras Presidency by February, when he will return to his duties in Bombay.

RAILWAYS AND IRRIGATION IN INDIA.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Your last number contains a very full and good account of the meeting of the East India Association, to hear and discuss Sir Arthur Cotton's Paper on Irrigation in India, a meeting which may be considered in some sense as a sequel to the meeting in Manchester on the 11th inst., when Mr. Bright and Sir Arthur Cotton were the speakers, and both gentlemen appear to many people, and myself among them, to fall into the two great errors—at once of unduly exalting Irrigation and depreciating Railroads, as if both were not good things for India, if properly carried out.

You mention what I said at the first-named meeting, and refer to a paper I read, with the opinion of Lord Northbrook as to railways and their results, both in reference to famine in India and as commercial undertakings. The paper was not a Government Minute, but the report of Lord Northbrook's speech, as chairman of a numerous attended meeting of the Society of Arts, last February, to hear Mr. Danvers's paper on Indian Railways; and what was said by the late Governor-General, is so clear and so important that probably you will find space for the extracts of his speech which I enclose herewith. It will be seen also that he speaks with no "uncertain sound" as to the position of the finances of India; and good and great man as Mr. Bright is, I think most people will have more faith in what Lord Northbrook says on such subjects, and will not be much alarmed by the statement in the Manchester speech, that "there is bankruptcy threatening," that "they are always on the brink of bankruptcy," &c., and in reference to Railways, when Mr. Bright speaks of them as "a great military question," which they doubtless are, but appears to ignore that they are a great "commercial question" also, and a question to which I believe only one answer would be given, if we could poll every merchant and trader in India, whether European or Native. I was glad to find Sir Arthur Cotton, at the East India Association, very clearly and strongly declaring his conviction that India was prospering, and Indian finances sound, and I only wish he had said the same in Manchester to Mr. Bright and the meeting. I read this paragraph (it is the last paragraph of Sir Arthur Cotton's paper), and contrasted it with what Mr. Bright had said.—Your obedient servant,

TAXING THE POOR.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

To quote a single statement from the report of Sir Richard Temple, who is now Financial Member of the Governor-General's Council, and than whom no one has greater experience of India or a keener insight into the native character, it is asserted that there are four classes "who are necessarily our enemies, and are not open to any conciliation that we could reasonably use." These are, 1st. The priestly class, whether Hindoo or Mohammedan. 2ndly. The military and political class. 3rdly. The native princes and chiefs whom we have superseded; and 4thly. "The mob, the cavaille, the blackguardism of the whole population." Now if this statement be correct—and there seems no reason to doubt it—it may truly be said that we are living upon a volcano in India, which at any minute may explode and overwhelm us; and what is of especial importance to the present argument is, that the class which would be first exposed to Afghan intrigue, set on foot by Russian propagandism, is of all others the most inflammable and the most virulent.—Page 281 of Rawlinson's "England and Russia in the East," 1875.

SIR,—Telegrams often convey very erroneous information, and we ought, therefore, to suspend our judgment on Sir John Strachey's system of taxation till the post shall have brought to us the text of that statesman's speech.

My reason for writing to you now is, to impress upon the English public the vanity of supposing that native public opinion is to be learnt from any of the newspapers in India, whether English or Indian. We have no newspaper in India similar to the Times, while it was guided by Mr. Delane, who made that paper the representative organ of the majority of the people of England. The Times has been constantly charged with being versatile, but it has merely followed the varying opinions of the majority of the English public.

Native public opinion in India was formerly represented pretty correctly by English District Officers. When during the morning ride in the cold weather the district officer visited village after village, he picked up more knowledge of native public opinion in three hours than he had acquired in Cutchery during eight months of the hot weather. In the evening three of the walls of the tent would be taken down, and the faces of hundreds of natives squatting around would be an instructive study. As the taking down of the walls of the tent was a signal that anyone might speak, there was never any lack of conversation on local topics, and erroneous statements made by some would be immediately corrected by others. The Lieutenant-Governor on his tour very wisely upheld the influence of the District Officer by using the latter as spokesman. Take the question of female infanticide, upon which the Rajpoots are as silent as the grave in Cutchery, but very open spoken in the midst of their clansmen.

During the first half year of 1857 native public opinion was unmistakably adverse to the British Government, especially on the question of the annexation of Oudh. It was in July 1857, when all appeared to be dark to us, that the turn in the tide took place, and native public opinion then began to declare that there appeared to be no possibility of good Government for India, except under the protecting control of the English; the natives, small and great, had had enough of anarchy.

As year after year Government has been steadily destroying the power and influence of the District Officers, it has now become very difficult to gauge native public opinion; but this I can say, that newspapers which are subsidised by Government, or assisted by rich natives or English speculators, or subscribed to by English non-officials, are no good guides regarding taxation. Many of the rich care not if Government causes millions of souls to become diseased from eating adulterated salt; it is the fault of Government, not theirs. Meanwhile they and their kinsfolk and friends eat good salt, and laugh and grow fat. But the Almighty will surely visit with his displeasure every Government which grinds the faces of the poor, and our refusal to permit 190 millions of souls to eat wholesome salt, which, in some parts, lies under their feet, must surely merit punishment, however much we may deceive ourselves by fancying that we are caring for the poor by borrowing and flinging about untold wealth, most of which is embezzled or wasted.

The "Black Pamphlet" proved the criminal waste of millions of money for the imagined famine in Behar in 1874. Last year witnessed unexampled embezzlement going on unchecked. Permit me to quote your own words in your paper of Saturday last:—

It appears from a telegram in the Times of India that up to the end of August 113 lakhs of rupees had been spent in famine operations in the Bellary district alone, of which only 25 lakhs are actually accounted for. The Madras Accountant-General recommends the appointment of a special commission to inquire into and audit the expenditure. The Governor "has sanctioned the proposal, and has asked him to recommend the members. Extensive frauds are coming to light daily. Two famine officers have been suspended."

The frauds alluded to are in one district only.

What will Cheshire manufacturers of salt say to Government's increasing the differential duty in favour of its own monopoly? Government has bought the Sambhur Salt Lake, and appears to be very proud of its purchase, if the Pioneer newspaper can be depended on for expressing its feelings (see page 1,300 of your paper of Saturday last). Government has out of the public moneys constructed a railway to its favourite lake, and not content with thus competing successfully with English salt in the North-West Provinces, it is preparing to tax Cheshire salt about twenty shillings a ton more than it taxes its own salt! I am curious to hear how this system of differential duties in favour of the Government monopoly will be executed in Parliament.—Your obedient servant,

Jan. 2.

Cheshire and Sambhur Lake salt compete in the Benares Province. The two kinds will compete in the Behar Province if the differential duty be raised from 13s. 6d. to 20s. a ton.

DEATHS IN CALCUTTA.—The death-rate in Calcutta is increasing to an alarming extent. During the week ended the 1st inst. there were 416 deaths registered in Calcutta, giving a death-rate of 50·5 per thousand per annum. In the previous week the number of deaths was 370 and the death-rate 44·9 per thousand. There were 32 deaths from cholera, 3 from small-pox, 34 from dysentery, 208 from fevers, 16 from tetanus, and 12 from causes not specified. The deaths are thus classified:—3 non-Asiatics, 9 mixed races, 280 Hindus, 122 Mohammedans, and 2 of other races. The most unhealthy ward in the town was Baman Basti, where the death-rate was 100 per thousand, and there were no deaths in Waterloo-street ward.—Englishman, Dec. 11.

THE MADRAS ARMY.

The Madras Times declares that men who are universally known throughout the army to be utterly incompetent have obtained commands and wings—men who are ignorant of ordinary parade work, who cannot ride, and who sometimes are otherwise notoriously unfit ! It is often extraordinary how the opinion recorded of an officer by the Inspecting-General in his official report differs from that which he privately entertains, and often, indeed, publicly expresses in his private utterances. There must be some glamour peculiar to an inspection that converts a man, at other times quite unfit for the service, into a "smart, efficient officer of much experience, well acquainted with duties," and so forth. Another mistake that is frequently made is posting officers to the commands of regiments and wings who have spent their best years of their service in civil appointments, which they only resign when military duty means less work and more pay. Such postings are by no means uncommon in the Madras Army, even to very recent dates, and there is nothing more calculated to dishearten a good regimental officer, who has steadily stuck to the service (and much lower pay, be it remembered), in hopes of one day succeeding to command. With a few European officers, such as our Native regiments are officered by, it is more than ever requisite that those so employed should be capable men, fairly young and active in their habits, zealous in the performance of their duties, not past their work, and imbued with something of an esprit de corps. This is, after all, the principal reform needed so far as the European element is concerned. But these officers, so selected for real efficiency, should be entrusted with more extended powers. At present a Lieutenant-Colonel and Wing Commander's power of punishing is limited to ten days' extra drill, while the very same officer, as an Ensign, could have given five days' restriction to barracks, and other punishments in proportion. The result of the present absurd limitation is that almost every petty offence is brought before the Commanding officer, thus in a measure, destroying the authority of the Wing Commander over his men, and making them look to the Commandant instead of to him for everything in the shape of reward or punishment. Again, a Wing Commander should not be expected to superintend the firing of four companies besides a squad of casualties ; it is not a dignified position for a Field-Officer, of long service, to be out in the sun very often till past noon, day after day, doing the same work for four companies that a Captain of a British Regiment, assisted by two subalterns, an officer, musketry-instructor, and a sergeant instructor in musketry, does with only one company. The tone of the service, too, should be raised by every means conducive to that end. Do away with the invidious (and quite unnecessary) term "Native." There is no reason why a regiment should not be called "Madras Infantry" without the intervening word, often used in a sneering or supercilious manner. Havildars and Naigues should be designated sergeants and corporals, as is done in the West India Regiment, composed of Negroes. Gold stripes should be worn by the non-commissioned of all grades, and all ranks supplied with the Zouave dress, a far more fitting dress for native troops than their present uniform is patent to all who have seen the Bengal Regiments wearing the former, or the French Sepoys at Pondicherry.

INDIA'S VALUE TO ENGLAND.

The Bombay Gazette remarks that, put briefly, Mr. Lowe's argument is that no foreign possession is really worth anything to a State unless it pays a tribute of money or men ; and India, he frankly says, is a dependency from which the English Treasury gets no aid in time of peace, while in time of war, its population who are unable to defend themselves, and from whom it would be absurd to expect the devoted loyalty of English subjects of the Queen, would be a source of anxiety and weakness rather than of strength to the Empire to which they belong. We do not find any fault with this statement of the relations actually existing between England and India. This subject is one on which we have written very frequently ; and, without entering into details that would be wearisome, we believe proof absolute might be given of the immense material advantages India derives from a connection for which she pays nothing except the loss of the sentimental satisfaction of calling herself independent. It is, no doubt, also the case that, were the Empire involved in war, India, instead of furnishing recruits for the Imperial armies, would perhaps require the addition of a good many battalions to her European garrison to keep the turbulent classes of the population in order. Why, then, do we reject the conclusion Mr. Lowe draws from these premises, that England would be much better off if she cut India adrift ? Well, because we think he is misled by what appears to us to be a palpable fallacy. He imagines that it is possible for a rich and free people to avoid war by not provoking it, and to remain a powerful State by avoiding quarrels with their neighbours. England, he says, is perfectly satisfied with herself, her condition, and prospects ; the only cloud in her serene sky is that which rises from the East, where her hold of India exposes her to the enmity of Russia. Let India go, and the Eastern question ceases to exist for England ; Russia becomes her friend, and she will remain for evermore at peace with all mankind. But wait a bit. What is the mainspring of England's colossal wealth ? Her world-wide commerce, which is not only immensely profitable in itself, but conveys her produce and manufactures into every country, thus enriching the manufacturer and the artisan as well as the merchant. Mr. Lowe proposes, of course, to keep this commerce when India is abandoned by the English, and he is simple enough to believe that no other nation will try to take it away from England. He has forgotten the Duke of Wellington's sensible remark, that England had acquired the command of the seas and colonies and dependencies in every part of the world by force of arms, and that obviously other nations would always be on the look-out for opportunities to recover what they had lost by the same means. Now, towards preserving the dominion of the seas and the right of unrestricted commerce with all Asiatic nations, the possession of India is extremely valuable to England ; and in any maritime war, if this country belonged to another Power, the first thing a capable English statesman would do would be to equip a formidable expedition to secure for the English a foothold on the Indian continent. In present circumstances, the settled government which England has established in this country, and which she maintains with a force that has made its might felt in frequent wars throughout the whole East, from Alexandria to Peking, and from Bagdad, Bushire, and Cabul to Singapore, is the only restraining element that keeps Southern Asia from abandoning itself to its old habits of lawlessness and piracy—habits which would be absolutely fatal to the continuance of England's commercial prosperity. If we left India, Russia alone could succeed us ; and Russia might indeed keep order, but she would kill English trade with India, China, and the Persian Gulf by imposing protective duties which would be high enough to be quite prohibitive. It appears, therefore, as if England had a good deal more to lose by giving up India than by keeping it, so far as merely commercial considerations are concerned.

PLANTERS AND COOLIES.

The Englishman thinks that the main significance of the Macgregor case appears to be the necessity of more adequate provision for the protection of the just interests of the planter. An Englishman of ordinary education and training, not unfrequently young and inexperienced, he is placed, far away from friends and counsellors, and generally remote from legal justice, in a position that requires intimate knowledge, rare judgment and tact, inexhaustible patience, all the qualities, in short, that are needed to make men successful leaders of their fellows. One against hundreds, who, impotent individually, can, in union, be cruelly strong, and who are ready at any moment to combine, whether to swear away their master's life in court, or spoil his business out of court, it is not to be wondered at if the planter, like despots generally, feels that his best safeguard against danger lies in his ability to strike terror into his foes. In three cases out of four, when a planter takes the law into his own hands, it is because he feels that there is practically no other law available to him. There are courts, it is true ; but they are distant, their procedure is tedious, and the coolie can command a dozen oaths in them to the planter's one. Not only does every case referred to them entail on him a more or less serious loss of money and services, but, in many cases, he may be half ruined before a decision is obtained. The garden on which Mr. Macgregor was employed is situated considerably more than thirty miles from Dibrugarh, and had he desired to take legal action against any coolie he would probably have had to throw away at least three days at the most busy part of the season, and in the end have obtained no practical redress whatever. The Government officials in Assam are (especially the Deputy Commissioners) notoriously overworked, and expected to be in a good many more than two places at the same time ; and the introduction of Judicial Assistant Commissioners, as in the Punjab, cannot be much longer delayed. These officers have precisely the same judicial powers as the Deputy Commissioner, with the exception of the power to give a seven years' sentence, and are afforded a capital training for the charge of districts. No one can for one moment deny the immense importance of the tea industry, or that the present difficulties attending the labour question have a most prejudicial effect on it. We have adverted over and over again to the enormous expense of importation, and how heavily the short term of agreement under the present regulations makes this expenditure felt ; but laziness, indifference, insolence and insubordination on the part of the coolies make the difficulties attending tea cultivation in Assam, Kachar, &c., almost insurmountable. By judicious action on the part of Government, these difficulties might be nearly all removed. The coolie requires to be taught that he has his part of the contract to perform, and that during the period of his engagement he is the servant of the planter, and, as such, bound to carry out all lawful orders in a proper and respectful way. The present inaccessibility of the courts of justice and the ridiculously inadequate punishments inflicted under existing laws are calculated to foster exactly opposite conduct. The appointment of honorary magistrates from among the most respected of the planters, with, say third, or even ultimately second, class powers, would very soon show the coolies that they could not misconduct themselves with impunity; and as no honorary magistrate would be allowed to try cases affecting his own coolies, or in which he himself was interested, and all the proceedings would go up to the authorities, there would be little fear of the powers entrusted to them being abused. Government would soon find out what men could and what men could not be entrusted with magisterial powers.

THE JAWAKI CAMPAIGN.

HEAD QUARTERS CAMP, JAMMU, Nov. 29.—Sir Richard Pollock arrived in camp on the 26th, but no forward movement has yet taken place. We are all of us rather tired, I think, of doing nothing; but orders to advance are now expected in a few days. Looking across the valley in our front, now green with fields of young wheat, we can just catch sight of the outskirts of Jammu, consisting of two or three scattered hamlets and stone towers, half hidden from the view by a low ridge of broken hills running out into the valley across our left front. In the basin beyond, hidden snugly away at the foot of the high range which forms the northern side of the valley, lies the main settlement, the approach to which is marked by a narrowing vista of distant cornfields, gradually losing themselves among the rocky spurs which run down from either side as the entrance to the gorge is reached. What lies beyond none of us yet know, but I hope to be able to tell you more about it in my next letter. On a little stony knoll, a thousand yards or so in front of the head-quarters camp, is a small round tower which forms the enemy's most advanced post. An unknown marksman, who goes in camp by the name of "Peeping Tom," takes up his position here regularly every morning, and spends the day in taking long shots at our foremost picquet. His movements can be easily watched with a good field-glass. He loads his Enfield under cover of the tower, and then, crouching like a lynx, creeps out to a low wall a few yards in front of it. Here you lose sight of him, but the next moment a puff of white smoke rises from the stone wall, and the ping of a bullet over your head tells you that he has honoured you with a shot, and wasted another charge of powder. He does us no harm; and when the guns the other day were ordered to fire a few rounds at him, I confess I felt quite sorry for him. "Peeping Tom," however, was equal to the occasion. Lying close up behind his round tower, he quietly waited till it was all over, and then, darting out again to the cover of his stone wall, he greeted us to a whole bouquet of fireworks, to let us know he was none the worse for our salvo. A few hundred yards in rear of this tower are the ruins of a deserted village, which is always full of men. A large white flag, with a black ball in its centre, waves over one of the houses, and it is believed to be what we will call by courtesy the enemy's head-quarters.

On the 27th a reconnoitring party was sent out to the hills overlooking the left of their position, to sketch in some of the ground covering the approaches. It met with no resistance, only falling in with a few of the enemy's scouts, and came back without firing a shot. This morning, just before sunrise, a party of Afridis, about a hundred strong, coming from the direction of Paiya, took up a position on a hill opposite an advanced picquet of the 5th P.I., and began firing into the picquet, and also into their regimental camp just below it. The firing at first was pretty sharp, but after an hour or so, finding that no one took the slightest notice of their demonstration, they decamped and went off to Jammu. No one was hit, though several bullets came into the camp; one of them that was picked up being unmistakably a Snider.

Since we abandoned the old line of blockade and took up our position in their hills the Jowakis have displayed such a want of enterprise in all their operations that some people begin to think they have no fighting in them. They no doubt have a wholesome dread of the Snider rifle; but the Afridi, whatever else he may be, is no coward; and though a few householders in Jammu would probably be only too glad, if they could, to save the destruction of their property, the main body of the tribe show at present no disposition to open negotiations, and for my own part I hope they will not let us into Jammu without a struggle. The other tribes still hold aloof, and the few malcontents who joined the Jowakis in the first instance have for the most part returned to their homes. It is prudent to bear in mind, however, that there is a great deal of powder about, and that a spark might set it in a blaze.

A slight inaccuracy occurred in my first letter, which, though perhaps not very material, I am anxious to correct as soon as possible. Speaking of the charge made by a company of the 5th P.I., on the 12th, I made use of the expression "headed by Lieutenant Gaisford." I now find that at the time the charge was made that officer and Major Stuart were standing within a few paces of each other, and that they both charged together in the front line of skirmishers.

Of the six sepoy recommended for the order of merit on this occasion one is a Jowaki Afridi. This man rejoined from furlough the day before the regiment started for Paiya; and though he was without arms, his rifle having been left at regimental headquarters, he begged to be allowed to accompany the expedition as a guide. He made himself very useful during the advance on Paiya, and on the 12th, though still unarmed, he rushed forward under a close and heavy fire, and brought in under cover a wounded comrade.—Pioneer Correspondent.

UNVEILING OF THE QUEEN'S STATUE AT CALCUTTA.

At the unveiling of the statue presented to Calcutta by the Rajah of Bardwan on New Year's Day, after a few introductory words by Sir Edward Bayley, the Maharajah spoke as follows:—

"My Lord, may it please your Excellency, in offering this statue of our gracious Sovereign for your Excellency's acceptance on behalf of the nation, I beg leave to express to your Excellency my deep sense of the privilege which has been accorded to me in being permitted to do so. From the time when it was first intimated that it was her Majesty's gracious intention to shed lustre upon the Imperial title by assuming it, it has been my heartfelt desire to erect in the capital of the Empire some memorial of the great and auspicious event, and it appeared to me that the most fitting memorial I could offer to the people would be a statue of her Majesty, to be erected in their midst. My Lord, the many acts of grace which we, her Majesty's Indian subjects, have received from our beloved Sovereign need not be recited by me; they are evidenced in the happiness and freedom we enjoy, in our guarded rights, our protected religions, and our impartial laws; and when on the 1st of January last year her Majesty assumed the title of Empress of India she crowned all her former acts of grace and enshrined herself for ever in the hearts of my countrymen. Your Excellency, the year which was thus happily begun was unfortunately darkened by one of the most afflicting calamities that history can record; but my Lord, we have seen that calamity met in a manner which has no parallel in the pages of history, and in witnessing the terrible exertions made by your Excellency and your Government and by all classes of Englishmen in this country in aid of the victims of famine, and in receiving the magnificent assistance which England and Australia poured into our country to provide food for our starving people and shelter for our homeless, we have learnt that not only by the bonds of polity are we knit to the great English race, but by the warmer ties of sympathy, fellow-feeling, and brotherhood. It is my earnest conviction, my Lord, that this lesson will never be forgotten, and that many generations of my countrymen will look upon this statue with pride in the common allegiance which unites them to the greatest and most generous people of the West, and with love and reverence in their hearts towards that great and gracious lady who, by taking upon herself the title of Empress of India, gave form to their Empire, and to themselves a definite place among the nations of the world. My Lord, I beg now to present this statue to the people, and to humbly thank your Excellency for having honoured my gift by consenting to unveil it."

The Viceroy in reply made a long speech, from which we quote the following passages:—

"During the past year the sufferings of the people and the difficulties of the Government of India have been great indeed, but they have not been greater than the tender sympathy with which her Majesty has personally studied every detail of our terrible calamity, and encouraged every effort of her Government to overcome the difficulties of its anxious task. It is the duty of those to whom her Majesty has intrusted the administration of this great Empire to give effect to her gracious intentions by patiently developing the practical application of those principles which can alone insure its permanent and progressive prosperity. In performance of this our judgment may sometimes err, our foresight fail—for we are not less fallible than other mortals,—but I can confidently assert that the one object we have ever honestly at heart is to deserve the confidence of our Sovereign by preserving and promoting for her people throughout India those blessings of personal freedom combined with social order which we regard as the common heritage of all British subjects. By none of her Majesty's Indian subjects have those blessings been more intelligently appreciated and utilised than by your Highness. This is not the first nor the second time that you have earned from the Government of India its acknowledgements of your generous sympathy with its aims. Distinguished no less by wealth and position than by liberality and enlightenment, you are justly regarded by your countrymen in Bengal as one of their trusted leaders. In that capacity you have ever laboured to harmonise the aspirations of the people with the requirements of the State, and the assistance the Government has so frequently received from you has been always given with an unobtrusive tact and a just appreciation of the circumstances and motives, which greatly enhance its value, and cannot be too cordially acknowledged. With this your latest gift to the Empress of India the memory of its donor will be honourably associated by the children of the future. Over that future, as over the august image we are bound to confide to its reverent keeping, the veil still hangs, but it is a veil of which on an occasion such as this our thoughts instinctively anticipate the withdrawal. We ourselves are the children of a century that is already far advanced towards its close, and some of us may possibly survive it. Looking forward, I can fancy that I see and hear that unreturning traveller, our present century, suspending its latest footsteps as it passes from the world it governed to pause by yonder statue and say to its successor of the century about to come,—Look on the majestic marble, and learn from its mute evidence that I united under one just and gentle sceptre the children of the East and of the West. My days have been good and evil, my troubles have been great, so were my triumphs, but never, through still or stormy times, did the men I taught and trained to rule this land forget the duty I had laid upon them to promote the peace of its princes and the prosperity of its people. I am about to disappear, and the tempests that have gathered round me sink with myself into the dim and quiet bosom of the past; but though my life is ending the work which has been done endures. Lose not, lower not, stain not the high and glorious heritage I bequeath to you."

Miscellaneous.

THE VICEROY'S COUNCIL.—The Hon. Mr. Paul, whose nomination to the Viceroy's Legislative Council was recently announced, will, we understand, succeed to the seat vacated by the Hon. Mr. Dalrymple, recently appointed to the Indian Council. Stress of other engagements has compelled the Hon. Mr. Cowie to resign his seat in the Council. His successor has not yet been appointed.

NATIVE LIBERALITY.—Rajah Harish Chandra Chowdry, of Mysingsh, has, in response to a call from the Commissioner, liberally come forward with a handsome donation of Rs. 5,000, for the extension of the Decca College premises. The amount required is Rs. 55,000, half of which Government has promised to pay. Subscriptions have come up to Rs. 19,650, thus leaving a balance of Rs. 7,850.—Pioneer.

THE SECRETARIAT.—It is arranged, we hear, that when Colonel O. T. Burne returns to England in May next Colonel Pomeroy Colley will succeed him as Private Secretary to the Viceroy, and Captain Villiers will take Colonel Colley's place as Military Secretary. Lieutenant Brabazon, of the 10th Hussars, will, it is understood, be appointed an Aide-de-Camp on the Viceroy's Staff, in the room of Captain Villiers.

SIAM.—A most important personage has lately died at Siam, in the shape of one of the King's white elephants, and according to custom it was buried with the highest funeral honours. One hundred Buddhist priests officiated at the ceremony, and the body was conveyed to its last resting-place accompanied by a procession of thirty State barges. Other news from Siam is that the harvest would turn out a good one, and that the prohibition on the export of rice would soon be withdrawn.

LOTTERIES.—The Commander-in-Chief has followed the example of the Government of India and issued the following general order prohibiting officers taking any part in the management of lotteries:—"The attention of the Commander-in-Chief in India having been drawn to the part taken by certain officers in the management of public lotteries or sweeps, his Excellency prohibits all officers for the future associating themselves with such, and directs that any breach of this order shall be considered as an infringement of the provisions of paras. 436 and 444 of Bengal Army Regulations."

MEDICAL.—It is stated that surgeon B. N. Bose, M.D., F.R.C.S., of the Unconvincant Medical Service, now in England on furlough, after a continued service of nearly thirty years, intends shortly to retire for good, and has, therefore, applied for a superannuation pension at an increased rate over the existing rules for special services rendered by him to the State. He served in the Punjab war, and was subsequently employed to check the great plague in Rohilkand. Latterly he had volunteered his services in the Santhal war in Bengal. Dr. B. N. Bose was one of the first batch of four medical students sent to England for education, whose expenses were defrayed partly by Government and partly by public subscriptions, and by the liberality of the late Babu Dwarka Nath Takur.

GRAIN TRAFFIC WITH MADRAS.—The three last weekly reports of the exports of grain from Bengal and Burmah to Madras Ports, show that the daily average rose from 876 tons a day in the week ending 7th November, to 1,503 tons a day in the week ending 14th November, and to 1,720 tons a day in the week ending 21st November. This rapid recovery of the trade is remarkable, as showing that, directly the Madras rice stocks showed signs of decreasing, and prices went up, exports from Bengal sprang in to meet the demand. And this was notwithstanding the fact that prices in Calcutta were rising with the Madras prices: the prices in Calcutta were for the week ending November 7th Rs. 2-13 per maund, for the week ending November 14th Rs. 3-0 per maund, for the week ending November 21st Rs. 3-1 per maund.

THE FRONTIER WAR.—Intelligence from the Bori Field Force, dated Shergasha Pass, noon, on the 9th instant, and sent through Peshawur, states that twelve towers were blown up on the 8th and also the house of the headman. The enemy did not follow the retirement. Two European and two native soldiers were slightly wounded. The enemy is believed to have lost heavily since the force arrived at Shergasha. It is impossible to ascertain the correct numbers at present. Two prisoners were captured yesterday. It is raining this morning; but the troops will descend as usual into the valley and finish the demolition of the towers. Five companies of infantry and two guns, however, remain on Shergasha ridge to-day. The enemy scarcely appeared during the operations on Saturday.—Times of India, Dec. 17.

SPECIAL PENSION.—A pension of Rs. 2,000 a year has been granted by the Secretary of State to Major E. Wilkinson, formerly of the 7th Hussars, Cantonment Magistrate of Lucknow, as an exceptional case. This officer served with the 9th Lancers in the Punjab campaign of 1848-49, including the battles of Chillianwallah and Gujarat. Also in suppression of the Indian Mutiny in 1857-59; present at the assault and capture of Delhi, and action of Bolundshahar; commanded a squadron in the actions of Aligarh, Agra, and Kanouj; present at the relief of Lucknow by Lord Clyde, and at the final siege and capture of the city; commanded a squadron throughout the summer campaign in Oudh and Rohilkand, including actions at Rhodamow, Aliganj, capture of Bareilly, Shajahanpur, and pursuit to Mahomdi.

KASHMIR.—A terrible calamity has, we hear, befallen the people of Kashmir. The rice harvest, which was very abundant, had not yet been gathered, owing to a dispute between the cultivators and the Maharajah's collector of land revenue, who would not let the grain be cut until the assessment was fixed at a higher rate than that of former years; when the snow came down and completely destroyed the ripe crops. A traveller who came from Kashmir only a short time ago tells us that he never saw a more piteous spectacle than that of the hundreds of people in every village crying helplessly for the loss of their whole food supply for the winter. Kashmir usually imports no grain, and it is unlikely the Maharaja will trouble himself to depart from the ordinary custom now; so the consequences to his wretched subjects will be horrible.—Bombay Gazette.

FINANCE DEPARTMENT.—In connection with General Strachey's visit to India, and with certain large financial questions, there will be much important work this cold weather on the hands of Sir John Strachey and the Financial Department. We learn that Mr. Bernard is to be temporarily employed in the current work of the Finance Department, so as to leave Mr. Chapman more time to aid Sir John Strachey in the elaboration of these larger questions. Famine work is happily lighter than it was, though there is still much important work to be done in winding up affairs and in co-ordinating, as promptly as possible, the facts and experiences of the past year. The year will have been barren indeed if some lessons in famine policy are not drawn and placed on record for future guidance. Mr. Stuart Bayley, as Personal Assistant to the Viceroy and Famine Secretary to Government, will carry on the Famine work from the time of Mr. Bernard's temporary transfer to the Financial Department.—Englishman.

PRESENTATION OF COLOURS TO THE 34TH NATIVE INFANTRY.—On Wednesday, in accordance with the new order of things, colours were presented to the 34th Regiment of Bengal N.I. This regiment was raised at Futtchgurh in the month of January 1858, and called the Futtchgurh Levy. In August 1858 three companies were detached to Miran ki Sarai, to watch the ghats and prevent the rebels crossing to and from Oudh. Later on, in October, the regiment was ordered to join a column under Brigadier Hales. For its services then the regiment received the Indian Mutiny Medal; and its condition now, at the time of receiving colours, may be understood from the good evidence to be quoted presently. The presentation of colours to the 34th Bengal Native Infantry was a public ceremony. Towards the end of the afternoon Lady Couper drove up with Miss Couper and the Lieutenant-Governor, and took up a position on the parade-ground, the other visitors standing in a line with the Government House party. The regiment, now on the parade ground, formed itself into three sides of a hollow square; the colours were brought and formally presented by Lady Couper, who made the following speech, which was afterwards translated to the men by Colonel Pasley: Colonel Pasley,—"I appreciate highly the compliment which you have paid me in asking me to present these colours to your regiment. As a woman who has passed through the siege of Lucknow no one has a better right than I have to bear grateful testimony to the splendid loyalty, devotion, and bravery which can be displayed by native soldiers; and I am sure that if ever they are called on to do so the officers and men of the 34th Native Infantry will fight—and die, if need be—in defence of these colours, as freely and fearlessly as those noble fellows who remained so true and faithful to their salt in the memorable defence of the Baillie Guard."—Pioneer, Dec. 8.

THE RELIEF WORKS.—It is now expected in Madras that, should the prospects continue as favourable as they are at present, Government assistance will be able to be stopped by the middle of January. There are still, however, 650,000 persons either on the relief works or receiving gratuitous relief.

DEATH OF THE REV. J. F. KEARNS.—We much regret to learn of the sudden death at Tanjore, from heart disease, of the Rev. J. F. Kearns, for twenty-two years missionary in Southern India of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts. What renders the event the more melancholy is the fact that the widow of the deceased gentleman is now on her return voyage to India.—Madras Mail, Dec. 12.

GOLD IN WYNAD.—The following telegram, relating to Wynad gold mining, is published in the Madras Mail:—Devalah, 3rd Dec.—Sixty-two tons of Alpha stone, from Wright's level, has produced over thirty ounces of rich gold, averaging nine pennyweights per ton. Messrs. P. Orr and Sons have bought the gold. Specimens of quartz are about to be forwarded to the Duke of Buckingham. The Commissioner has visited the works. A proposal to work the Alpha on an extensive scale is mooted. The capital proposed is fifteen lacs.

FLOODS ON THE SOUTH INDIAN RAILWAY.—We are indebted to the agent of the South Indian Railway for the information telegraphed to us from Negapatam, that heavy rain has breached the South Indian Railway in several places south of Trichinopoly, and that the running of trains has, consequently, been temporarily suspended. A telegram we received on Saturday night from Dindigul informs us that floods have breached the railway in several places near Dindigul, and that postal communication has thereby been cut off for some days. The telegram adds:—"Rain unprecedented; wells and rivers overflowing."—Madras Times, Dec. 10.

SIR SALAR JANG AND THE INDIA OFFICE.—The Bombay Gazette has, we see, come forward with a correction of its former statement, that the Marquis of Salisbury had given Sir Salar Jang written authority to re-open the question of the Berars. No letter, our contemporary now tells us, was written; but before calling on Sir Salar Jang in London, Lord Salisbury sent a subordinate official from the India Office to tell the Nizam's minister that he could not personally discuss the Berar question with him at the coming interview, but that if Sir Salar, on his return to India, liked to re-open the matter without referring in any way to previous correspondence, he was at liberty to do so. The indiscretion committed becomes, in the light of these facts, much less grave than we had supposed it to be. If, however, as we believe, this verbal permission was given without previous consultation, and still more, if, as the Bombay Gazette states, no intimation of its having been given was subsequently made to the Government of India, it was nevertheless a very grievous and mischievous mistake for a Minister to make.—Englishman.

SIR SALAR JANG AND THE INDIAN GOVERNMENT.—BELLARY, Dec. 9.—In November, 1872, the Madras Government recognised Nursimha Davaroyloo, of Bellary, the rightful heir of Anagoondy to the Maharajaship, and ordered payment to him of the Government allowance drawn by his predecessor. This recognition was confirmed by the Government of India. A portion of the Anagoondy estates are situated in the Nizam's territory, adjoining Sir Salar Jang's private jahageer at Copaladroog. The Government of India, through the Resident, had asked the Nizam's Government to admit Nursimha's claim, but after five years' recognition had postponed it with promises of speedy settlement. This month Sir Salar Jang positively refuses to confirm the Government of India's nomination, and has forcibly seized Nursimha's seals, keys, and official papers, and has ordered his immediate departure from the Nizam's territory. The Nizam's Government has nominated a distant relation of the family of the Maharaja, and has ordered the collection of the revenue from the Anagoondy estate by the Nizam's officers.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

NATIVES AS RELIEF OFFICERS.—At the end of last month the Government of India wrote to Madras, hinting that the time would soon come for reducing famine establishments. The Government of Madras in the Revenue Department answered at once that reductions would be made, generally, as soon as possible; adding that already orders have been issued for closing certain works in the Kistna district, and for finishing off the famine altogether in Tanjore. Not only did the improved prospects of the country make retrenchment advisable; there was also some extravagance on the part of local officers to be checked. So late as the 1st of November, the Governor of Madras had to notice that strict and careful attention had not been everywhere paid to his order of the 24th of September, proclaiming the new famine policy. In some cases, the authorised scale of wages had been exceeded; elsewhere camps had not been enclosed; able-bodied labourers instead of being made to work, had been kept in camps, or on the village-dole; task-work had not been enforced properly; and there had been other kinds of disobedience to the new orders. His Grace the Governor in Council, therefore, strictly admonished local officers and engineers, declaring that none of them might plead ignorance; it was their duty to make themselves acquainted with the policy of Government, and to act accordingly. "These orders," said the Government, "were given for the purpose of being obeyed and carried out, and not for the purpose of their provisions being made the subject of argument or needless reference." Not a few local officers seem to have chosen the latter course. The Sub-Collector of Arcot, for instance, was very certain about the proper treatment of Brahmins and others who, though quite able to work, were restrained, by caste or social scruples, from taking employment on the relief works. The Sub-Collector wanted to support these people in idleness. The Collector sent him the Government orders of the 24th of September; but the subordinate still held to his own opinion, even arguing that his Brahmins were included in "the destitute resident villagers who are house-ridden or otherwise unfitted for or incapable of labour." So closely did he hold to his opinion, that he requested the Collector to refer the matter to Government. The answer was given on the 1st of November, so that for the best part of the month money was being wasted in North Arcot, merely because a local officer could not listen to reason. Besides the inclination of local officers to refer the matter, the worthlessness of native supervision helped to cause the extravagance spoken of. Major Ross writes from Bhowany, in Coimbatore:—"I am sorry to say that the native officers display a great amount of energy, and comprehension of the necessity of prompt compliance with orders." In the same district it was found that out of fifty-five people receiving a village-dole only two deserved it; the rest were evidently well-to-do. It was difficult at first to set all this to rights. "The people," wrote the Collector of Coimbatore, "had become apathetic and lazy, and appear to consider it very hard that work of any kind should be expected from them, when they have for so long a period received food for doing nothing."—Pioneer.

THE HARBOUR WORKS.—From the efforts being made to push on the harbour works it does not appear that the Government will put a stop to them. Work is progressing at both the north and south arms of the harbour. At the latter, the surf bank has been extended to a distance of about three hundred feet, and the granite blocks are being lowered into position. Up to Saturday morning eighteen of these blocks had been put down, the weight of each being between ten and twenty tons; larger blocks will be let down in a few days, as they are all ready at the factory. The smaller blocks are made on the beach, and nearly three hundred of these are ready and have been largely used as "protective" blocks. The sea was rather rough on Saturday morning, and work could not be done as usual. The block-laying begins after the stone rubble beds have been prepared by the coolies. This can only be done when the surf permits; as the bank extends into deep water the divers will have to prepare the beds, and the granite blocks will be of larger proportions. From a notice in our advertising columns it will be seen that the beach railway, between the north and south harbour banks, is being largely used, and notice has been given the public that two men with red flags will precede the engine conveying the granite blocks. The work is being pushed on energetically, as Mr. Parkes will be here about the end of the month or early in December to see what progress has been made. About a year ago he was in Madras, and at a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce gave particulars of the work as it progressed and the anticipated silting up of the harbour. It is believed that he comes out at the special request of the Government. When the harbour work authorities began the north arm of the harbour they had to abandon what is now called the "false start," because the arm was alongside the main drain, and would permit the refuse from that outlet to empty itself into the harbour. It was soon found that this was a miscalculation, and it was abandoned. The south arm is not far from a drain, which discharges its contents into the sea. It is not a "main drain," but it is eventually intended to direct the course of the drain across the bank, so that the flow of sewage into the sea may not be impeded. At present a beach has been formed to the north of the bank, and the sewage empties itself there. The spot will soon become a great nuisance if the sewage is not diverted into the sea. From the report submitted by the Superintendent of the Madras Harbour works it appears that block setting since the end of March, when the sand first began to hinder the advance of the north pier up to the end of October, was carried on and resulted in forty-two blocks being set. On the south block ground concrete block setting was pursued and 154 blocks made up. The total on the south ground was 413. The amount of stone sent down from Chinnampett during the month of October was 2,288 tons, and from Ambathoor 452 tons of ballast were received for maintaining the railway lines and for other purposes. The south pier works remained at the same length as in the previous month, and 720 tons of large granite boulders from Palaveram were tipped on the side of the bank and formed an excellent protection to the end of the tip. The superintendent reports the result of experiments carried out with the crates deposited at the bottom of the sea, and of the visit paid the works on the 26th October by his Grace the Governor, accompanied by General Kennedy. In our issue of Monday last we gave a few particulars of the progress of the works, since which things continue much the same; the granite blocks continue to be placed in position.—Madras Standard.

CRICKET AMONG THE NATIVES.—The Parsi Cricketers, who are going to England next year, are sparing no pains to perfect themselves in the game, and have resolved to get out W. MacIntyre, the Nottingham and Lancashire bowler, to coach them. In their third match with the Bombay Gymkhana Club last week, the Parsis made 85 in their first innings, and the Gymkhana 160, with seven wickets down, on the first day.

DEATH OF DR. CARVALHO.—We regret to announce the death of Dr. Carvalho, Portuguese Vice-Consul, which occurred on Thursday, Dec. 13. He was one of the most esteemed members of the Portuguese community, and his death will cause general regret amongst its members. He was a Knight Commander of the Portuguese Order of Christ, and had been for many years Vice-Consul for Portugal. He was distinguished for his scientific and literary attainments.

PROPOSED RAILWAY.—The Government of India proposes to open a new line of Railway from Indor, which will pass via Bhopal through Balsa and join with the Great Indian Peninsular Railway. It is believed that the junction will take place somewhere between Hoshungabad and Hurda. The Engineer-in-Chief of the Holkar and Neemuch State Railway has received orders to estimate the probable cost of the line, and to explore the country through which it is proposed to pass the line.

ARRIVAL OF THE CHAMPION BILLIARD PLAYER.—Mr. John Roberts, Junior, the Champion Billiard Player, arrived in Bombay on Friday, Dec. 14. He was expected here on Tuesday, but owing to head winds the steamer was three days late. Mr. Roberts will give six entertainments in Bombay, after which he will go on a tour through India, visiting amongst other places Allahabad, Calcutta, Cawnpore, Lucknow, Jeypore, and Hyderabad. He will play his first match in Bombay on Monday next, at Temple Bar, on which occasion he will give Mr. Bridger a start of 650 points out of 1,000.

A CHANGE FOR THE BETTER.—We hear from Sholapur that the country is looking well, and the crops in splendid condition—a perfect contrast to the state of things last year, when the country was black and burnt up. The authorities on agricultural matters say that the crop this year will be a one rupee two annas crop. There is no appearance of famine about the place. A few people are in the relief house, but these are of those who were emaciated and sick at the time of the great distress. Their numbers are reduced weekly, and there will soon be no occasion for a relief house at all.—Deccan Herald.

ARRIVAL OF H.M.S. "UNDAUNTED."—At 10 A.M. on Thursday, Dec. 13, H.M.S. Undaunted, with the flag of Admiral Corbett, C.B., arrived in Bombay harbour. While she was coming in, H.M.S. Diamond, which has been in Bombay for some months, fired a salute of thirteen guns. The Undaunted gave a salute of seven in return.

The saluting officer, according to instructions, fired a salute of thirteen guns from the land battery. At about 3.30 P.M. General Brooks paid a visit to the Admiral, and on his return the Undaunted fired a salute of seven guns. At 4 P.M. his Excellency and Mrs. Corbett, accompanied by Flag-Lieutenant Holmes, landed at the Apollo Bunder, under a salute of thirteen guns, which were fired from the saluting battery. The Admiral is staying at Marine Lines.

THE FUTURE OF SIND.—Our Karachi correspondent says that the advent of the Governor to that station had not been accompanied with any announcement about the fate of Sind, and we infer that some disappointment is felt at Sir Richard Temple's silence on a subject of such vital importance to the inhabitants of the Province of Sind. But the question of the redistribution of territory on the Frontier is beyond Sir Richard Temple's control, and was long ago remitted to the India Office for decision. We heard by last mail on the best authority from home that it was settled that Sind was to be annexed to the Punjab, and that Bombay was to receive compensation in the shape of the Central Provinces, though whether this Presidency is to get a whole or only a portion of those Provinces was not finally determined. Who the new Commissioner in Sind would be was not known; but it was hoped that a Bombay officer would be nominated to the post, and that the Sind Commission would remain intact.—Bombay Gazette.

DEATH OF COLONEL PENN.—We regret to announce the death of Colonel L. W. Penn, R.A., C.B., A.D.C. to the Queen, which took place at Kirkee on Friday last. The following is the record of the deceased officer's war services:—Colonel L. W. Penn, C.B., A.D.C. to the Queen, served in the Eastern campaign of 1854-55, in the trenches throughout the siege of Sebastopol, including the bombardments of 17th October, 9th April, 6th and 17th June, 17th August, and 8th September 1855. Served as an assistant engineer from the 19th January 1855 till 1st October same year; mentioned in General Orders (Brevet of Major, medal with clasps for Inkerman and Sebastopol, Sardinian medal, 5th class of Medjidie, and Turkish medal). Commanded Royal Artillery (2 guns) at the destruction of Shugra, Arabia, expedition from Aden, 1866. Commanded a seven-pounder steel mountain battery throughout the Abyssinian campaign; present at the action of Arogee and at the capture of Magdala (mentioned in despatches, medal and C.B.)—Bombay Gazette, Dec. 17.

DEATH OF AN ARTILLERYMAN FROM HYDROPHOBIA.—A letter from Deesa in the Bombay Gazette says:—"I regret to have to communicate another death, from hydrophobia, of a soldier of the artillery. He was bitten about three weeks ago by a dog belonging to one of his comrades, and about six days ago the poor fellow became ill, and after intense suffering for four days he expired. He was, however, conscious to the last moment of his life. He was a young man and bore a fine character. This is the second soldier who has died from hydrophobia within the last two months. So serious are these casualties and so dreadful the fate of these men that all who keep dogs should be made to muzzle them, the alternative being a heavy fine. It is high time, indeed, that some measures were taken against these roaming animals. In spite of the order issued some time ago to destroy all dogs loose about the station, I see hundreds, and that too, of the worst paria kind. Somebody ought to be hanged for this. It is to be hoped that now, at least, the authorities here will rid the station of the danger complained of."

DEATH OF KHAN BAHADOOR ABDOL KADUR BY CHOLERA.—It is with extreme regret that we have to announce the untimely death, by cholera, of Khan Bahadoor Abdool Kadur, Inspector of Police, Poona District. The deceased officer had been on duty at the Alundee Fair, took this dreadful disease there, and came home to die. He was only two or three days ill, and to the last it was hoped that he would recover. Abdool Kadur was a most efficient Police officer, thoroughly trusted by his superiors; and, whenever any serious or mysterious crime was committed, Abdool Kadur was sent to trace it out, and he seldom failed to do so. He travelled with the Prince of Wales all through Central India and the North-West, and as a mark of honour received the title of Khan Bahadoor. His loss will be great to the State and to the public, and it seems hard that he should lose his life in keeping order at a jatra. A large company was present at the funeral yesterday.—Deccan Herald, Dec. 12.

THE SIND FRONTIER.—The news from the Sind frontier is as pacific as could well be desired. The whole of the troops at Mittri are now under canvas, and have no prospect before them of moving Candahar-wards; everything around them is reported to be perfectly quiet. The air is said to be fine and bracing, and the thermometer has fallen at night to 47 deg., and with a prospect of touching freezing point by about Christmas time. The presence of our troops in the Khelat territories has had a most beneficial effect, trade is progressing, and the traders say they are all much pleased with Major Sandeman, for he is always, they say, ready to listen to what they have to say, and to take notice of their grievances or complaints against the Khan. The Khan finds, in consequence, that he has to be very careful in all he does, and he seems to have a wholesome dread of Major Sandeman. The difficulties that the Major has had to contend against in his treatment of the Khan of Khelat seem to be now well nigh over, and the prospects of the frontier trade and the welfare of the people seem to be secured so long as Major Sandeman remains at his post. He speaks, we believe, the Beloochee, Barhuki, and Persian languages, and is thus able to himself attend to matters which otherwise he must know about by means of a translator—a very unsatisfactory arrangement under the most favourable circumstances.—The Beacon.

THE IMPERIAL ORDER OF THE CROWN OF INDIA.

(Supplement to the London Gazette.)

INDIA OFFICE, JAN. 1, 1878.

The Queen has been graciously pleased, by an instrument under her Royal Sign Manual, of which the following is a copy, to institute and create an Order of Distinction, to be styled and designated "The Imperial Order of the Crown of India," and to make certain Rules and Regulations as therein set forth.

VICTORIA, R. & I.

Victoria, by the Grace of God of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Queen, Defender of the Faith, Empress of India.

To all to whom these presents shall come Greeting:—Whereas we have resolved to commemorate the assumption of Our Imperial title of Empress of India by the institution of an Order of Distinction, to be enjoyed by the Princesses of Our Royal House and the wives or other female relatives of Indian Princes and others to be by Us selected, upon whom We shall from time to time think fit to confer the same, agreeably to the rules and regulations hereinafter declared: Now, know ye, that for the purpose of carrying this, Our resolution, into effect, We have instituted, constituted, and created, and by these presents for Us, Our heirs, and successors, do institute, constitute, and create an Order of Distinction, to be known and have for ever hereafter the name, style, and designation of "The Imperial Order of the Crown of India," and We are graciously pleased to make, ordain, and establish the following Rules and Ordinances for the government of the same, and which shall from henceforth be inviolably observed and kept.

Firstly. That the Order or Distinction shall be styled and designated "The Imperial Order of the Crown of India," and that the first day of January in every year shall henceforth be taken and deemed to be the anniversary of the institution of the said Order.

Secondly. That We, Our heirs and successors, Kings and Queens Regnant of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Emperors and Empresses of India, shall be Sovereigns of this Order.

Thirdly. That it shall be competent for the Sovereign of this Order to confer the decoration thereof upon such Princesses of our Royal and Imperial House, being of more than eighteen years of age, as We, Our heirs and successors, shall think fit.

Fourthly. That it shall be competent for the Sovereign of this Order to confer the decoration thereof upon the wives or other female relatives of such Princes in our Indian Empire, and upon such other Indian ladies as We, Our heirs and successors, shall from time to time think fit.

Fifthly. That it shall be competent for the Sovereign of this Order to confer the decoration thereof upon the wives or other female relatives of any of the persons who have held, now hold, or may hereafter hold the high offices of Viceroy and Governor-General of India, Governors of Madras or Bombay, or of Principal Secretary of State for India.

Sixthly. [Description and Representation of Insignia.]

Seventhly. That the said Order may be conferred by personal investiture, with the Insignia, upon such Princesses, and other members, as We, Our heirs and successors, may be pleased to admit thereto, but it shall be lawful for Us, Our heirs and successors, to direct the transmission of the decoration of the Order to any member with a notification of her appointment under the Sign Manual of the Sovereign.

Eighthly. That the names of those upon whom We, Our heirs and successors may be pleased to confer this Order shall be entered upon a Register to be kept under the direction of Our Principal Secretary of State for India, in which the names of the Royal Princesses and other members admitted into the Order shall be enrolled, with the dates of their respective admissions, and a duplicate thereof shall also be kept in the Foreign Department of Our Viceroy and Governor-General of India.

Lastly. We reserve to Ourselves, Our heirs and successors, full power of annulling, altering, abrogating, augmenting, interpreting, or dispensing with these regulations, or any portion thereof, by a notification under the Sign Manual of the Sovereign of the Order.

Given at our Court at Osborne, under Our Sign Manual, this thirty-first day of December, in the forty-first year of Our Reign, and in the year of Our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-seven.

By her Majesty's Command, SALISBURY.

The Queen has also been graciously pleased to confer the decoration of the said Imperial Order of the Crown of India upon—

Her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales, her Imperial Highness the Crown Princess of Germany (Princess Royal of Great Britain and Ireland), her Royal Highness the Grand Duchess of Hesse (Princess Alice of Great Britain and Ireland), her Royal Highness Princess Christian of Schleswig-Holstein (Princess Helena of Great Britain and Ireland), her Royal Highness Princess Louise (Marchioness of Lorne), her Royal Highness Princess Beatrice, her Royal and Imperial Highness the Duchess of Edinburgh (Grand Duchess of Russia), her Royal Highness the Duchess of Cambridge, her Royal Highness the Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Strelitz (Princess Augusta of Cambridge), her Royal Highness the Duchess of Teck (Princess Mary of Cambridge), her Highness the Maharanee Dhuleep Singh, her Highness Nawab Shahjahan Begum of Bhopal, G.C.S.I.; her Highness Maharanee Seta Velass Dawajee Ammanee Anaro, of Mysore; her Highness Maharanee Jumna Bai Saeb Gaekwar, of Baroda; her Highness Dilwar un-Nissar Begum Saheba, of Hyderabad; her Highness Nawab Kudsia Begum, of Bhopal; her Highness Vijaya Mohenu Mukta Bayi Ammanee Rajah Saheb, of Tanjore; Maharanee Hai Nomoyee, of Cossimbazar; Elizabeth Georgiana, Duchess of Argyll; Georgina Caroline, Marchioness of Salisbury; Henrietta Anne Theodosia, Marchioness of Ripon; Lady Mary Temple-Nugent-Brydges-Chandos-Grenville; Mary Louisa, Countess Dowager of Elgin and Kincardine; Blanche Julia, Countess of Mayo; Lady Susan Georgiana Bourke; Mary Viscountess Halifax; Mary Catherine, Lady Hobart; Lady Jane Emma Baring; Anne Jane Charlotte, Baroness Napier; Edith, Baroness Lytton; Harriette Katherine, Baroness Lawrence; Cecilia Frances, Lady Northcote; Catherine, Lady Frere; Mary Ann, Lady Temple; Caroline Lucy, Lady Denison; Katherine Jane, Lady Strachey.

Miscellaneous.

EXPORT OF SPECIE.—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamer Khiva sailed on Thursday afternoon with £171,600 in specie, of which £109,500 was in gold for Alexandria and £1,000 for Aden, and the balance of £61,100 was in silver for Bombay.

NEW LOAN FOR CEYLON.—For the purpose of further improving the harbour of Colombo, the Ceylon Government, through the Crown Agents for the Colonies, are about to issue a second £100,000 in Four and a-Half per Cent. Debentures. The issue price is £105 per £100 debenture, and the allotment is to be made on the 8th instant.

TURKISH SYMPATHIES IN CEYLON.—A subscription has been set on foot by the Mussulman community of Colombo in aid of the sick and wounded Turks, and 10,000 rupees were remitted on Oct. 21, through the Oriental Bank Corporation, from the Ottoman Consul at Colombo to the Ottoman Consul at Bombay, to be forwarded to Constantinople. The subscriptions are collected by the Colombo Moslem Club.

INDIAN FAMINE.—The Mansion-house Fund was on Tuesday reported to amount to half a million, and an intimation to this effect was despatched by telegraph to her Majesty and by letter to the Prime Minister. During the day the following Royal message was received at the Mansion-house:—"Sir Thomas Biddulph, Osborne, to Sir Thomas White, the late Lord Mayor.—The Queen is much gratified at the magnificent result of the Mansion-house collection."

SIR HENRY MAINE.—The Athenæum says that there is no foundation for the assumption that, in consequence of his election as Master of Trinity Hall, Cambridge, Sir H. Maine will leave the Indian Council. The duties of the Master of Trinity Hall are quite compatible with residence in London during the greater part of the year, and with the discharge of all the functions of a member of the Indian Council.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The tenders for £265,000 in bills on India were received on Jan. 2, at the Bank of England, and only £154,500 was sold, leaving £110,500 (Rs. 1,105,000) in hand. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £104,500, at an average rate of 1s. 8-67d.; and to Bombay, £50,000, at an average of 1s. 8-62d. Tenders on both Presidencies at 1s. 8-6d. and above will receive in full, nothing below. Compared with last week there is thus a fall of about  $\frac{1}{2}$  per cent.

STAR OF INDIA.—Tuesday night's Gazette announces that the Queen has appointed his Excellency Cherif Pacha, Minister for Foreign Affairs to the Khedive of Egypt, to be an Honorary Knight Grand Commander of the Star of India; Sir Richard Temple, Bart., K.C.S.I., Governor of the Presidency of Bombay, to be an Extra Knight Grand Commander; and Major-General Michael Kavanagh Kennedy, Royal (late Bombay) Engineers, Additional Member of the Council of the Governor of Bombay for Making Laws and Regulations, Secretary to the Government of Bombay in the Public Works and Railway Department, and lately employed on special service as a Personal Assistant to the Governor of Madras, to be a Knight Commander of the Order of the Star of India.

INDIAN MOHAMMEDANS AND THE WAR.—Family Fair says:—"We have received the following lines from an experienced official who has just returned from India, and who has had for many years constant opportunities of mixing with the higher and leading classes among the Mussulmans: 'The most intense anxiety exists among the Mohammedan community for the success of the Turkish arms. Prayers are repeatedly offered up in the various musjids, telegrams are eagerly purchased, money has been largely expended, and general wonder is expressed at the apathy of England in standing aloof from the country for which she made such sacrifices nearly twenty-five years ago. It is useless to deny the fact that an unchecked Russian advance on Constantinople would create the deepest indignation among the Indian Mussulmans; and they would feel that their faith was imperilled, although they are the subjects of a Power which could stretch out her arm to save them. There is grave reason to suppose that it will not be long before his Imperial Majesty the Sultan will proclaim a "jehad," or war of religion, in which case every Mohammedan is bound by his faith to sacrifice his all, desperate measures will be taken, fearful reprisals will ensue, and scenes enacted which will be a disgrace to civilised Europe.'"

THE LAND MORTGAGE BANK OF INDIA.—On the 31st ult. the half-yearly meeting of the shareholders of the Land Mortgage Bank of India was held at the Cannon-street Hotel, under the presidency of Mr. T. R. Boyson. It appeared from the report that up to the 19th of November last the general loans carried in January had been reduced in amount by £44,559. The bank's liability upon its current debentures now stood at £573,840, of which amount £68,660 was held by the bank on account of its reserve fund. The debenture liability had been decreased since the 1st of January last by payment of drawn and matured bonds and purchases on account of the reserve fund, to the extent of £30,960. The receipts on account of interest during the year had amounted to £20,587. The great bulk of the interest in arrears and accrued interest, amounting to £18,915, was either comprised in decrees, or was the subject of suits now pending. The funds in India now invested on mortgage securities amounted to £122,400. The operations of the past tea season were disappointing, the outturn falling short by about 1,000 maunds. In moving the adoption of the report, the Chairman said that, although there had been a material improvement in the Bank affairs, yet the result of the year was somewhat disappointing. Their greatest disappointment was the sharp fall of the tea market in Indian grown teas, which much to their great regret, made it impossible for them to declare the usual moderate dividend of 2½ per cent. Mr. H. G. G. Bambridge seconded the adoption of the report, which was carried unanimously, and the proceedings terminated.

EAST INDIAN RAILWAY COMPANY.—The thirtieth half-yearly general meeting of this company was held on the 3rd inst.; Mr. R. W. Crawford presiding. In moving the adoption of the report, the Chairman said he ventured to think it would be entirely to the satisfaction of every person that its contents might concern, whether those having capital invested; the government here and abroad, to whose guarantee they owed the power of raising money; or the commercial, agricultural, and other industrial classes to whom the proper administration of this large concern had become a matter of vital interest in the discharge of their business. When speaking to the shareholders on the 3rd July he stated, on the authority of a telegram, that the estimated profits for the half year closing three days earlier on the main line, was £1,309,000. The actual sum had been proved to be £1,310,800. In the case of the Jubulpore line the traffic receipts had come out at £147,796, the estimate having been £139,000. The surplus profit had been estimated at £2. 12s. per cent., of which they would receive £1. 6s., but owing to the conventional rate of exchange (1s. 10d.) not being reached, instead of 26s. 7d. the directors were only able to offer for the acceptance of the shareholders a dividend of 25s. for the half year, in addition to the 50s. guaranteed. After a passing tribute to the management abroad, the Chairman proceeded to criticise a speech recently delivered by Sir Arthur Cotton on the subject of irrigation, setting against it reports by Mr. Buck and Colonel Corbett. He contended that the figures given by Sir Arthur were incorrect and illusory. That gentleman had stated that the cost of carrying grain was one penny per ton per mile, whilst, as a fact, the East Indian Company, which had carried 138,486 tons out of a total of 152,782 conveyed by rail, only charged one halfpenny per ton per mile. Commenting on the visit of General Strachey to India, the Chairman said that the directors had deemed it right to send their engineer, Mr. Rendel, to watch their interests.—Mr. Freshfield seconded the adoption of the report, which was carried unanimously.

NAUTICAL INCIDENTS.

The Staffa, for Bombay, put back to Liverpool on Dec. 25, and when at anchor broke her shear and grounded below Egremont, but got off during the night, and is now in dock at Eirkenhead; is said to have sustained damage.

The Chinsura, from Calcutta, lost anchor and about sixty fathoms chain in the river Mersey, and afterwards fouled the training ship Indefatigable; had jibboom carried away.

The Glamis Castle (str.), for Higo, was in collision with the St. Monan (ship), from Calcutta, last night (Dec. 24) in Long Reach, breaking the latter adrift from her anchors, and doing considerable damage to both bows. The Glamis Castle sustained considerable damage to amidship plates, and has returned to dock to repair damage.

SCHWEITZER'S COCOATINA

Anti-Dyspeptic Cocoa or Chocolate Powder. Guaranteed Pure Soluble Cocoa of the Finest Quality, with the excess of fat extracted.

The Faculty pronounce it "the most nutritious, perfectly digestible beverage for Breakfast, Luncheon, or Supper, and invaluable for Invalids and Children."

Highly commended by the entire Medical Press. Being without sugar, spice, or other admixture, it suits all palates, keeps better in all climates, and is four times the strength of Cocoa thickened yet weakened with Arrowroot, Starch, &c., and is really cheaper than such Mixtures.

Made instantaneously with boiling water, a teaspoonful to a Breakfast Cup costing less than a Halfpenny. COCOATINA A LA VANILLE is the most delicate, digestible, Cheapest Vanilla Chocolate, and may be taken when richer Chocolate is prohibited.

MEMORIAL IN HONOUR OF LORD NAPIER OF MAGDALA.

By Public Meeting in Calcutta, 16th March, 1878, a Committee was constituted under the Presidency of Sir RICHARD TEMPLE, to collect Funds for the Erection of a Fitting Memorial of LORD NAPIER OF MAGDALA, for which they require about £5,000. About £2,800 has already been raised in India, and an Auxiliary Committee (named below) has been formed in London to collect Subscriptions in this country.

Subscriptions are now invited, and it is requested that they may be paid into the Bank of Messrs. COUTTS and Co., Strand; or to the Honorary Secretary, Captain R. TAYLOR, late 35th Royal Sussex, Junior Army and Navy Club, who will give any further information.

NOTES ON MUHAMMADANISM.

Second Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

BY THE
REV. T. P. HUGHES, M.R.A.S.,
C. M. S., Missionary to the Afghans, Peshawar.

Opinions of the Press on the First Edition.

"Altogether an admirable little book. It combines two excellent qualities, abundance of facts and lack of theories. . . . On every one of the numerous heads (over fifty) into which the book is divided Mr. Hughes furnishes a large amount of very valuable information, which it would be exceedingly difficult to collect from even a large library of works on the subject. The book might well be called a 'Dictionary of Muhammadan Theology,' for we know of no English work which combines a methodical arrangement (and consequently facility of reference), with fullness of information in so high a degree as the little volume before us."—The Academy.

"It contains multum in parvo, and is about the best outlines of the tenets of the Muslim faith which we have seen. It has, moreover, the rare merit of being accurate; and although it contains a few passages which we would gladly see expunged, it cannot fail to be useful to all Government employes who have to deal with Muhammadans, whilst to Missionaries it will be invaluable."—The Times of India.

"This small book is the most luminous, most convenient, and, we think, the most accurate, outline of the tenets and practices of Islamism that we have met with. It seems exactly the sort of comprehensive and trustworthy book in small compass, on this subject, that we and many more have often looked for in vain. . . . The author has evidently studied his subject in a faithful, laborious, and scholarly manner, and has not only studied but mastered it. The work is of great value for general students, and for men whose work lies among the Mussulman population, such as Civil Servants and Missionaries, it seems to be the very work that is wanted."—The Friend of India.

"It is manifest throughout the work that we have before us the opinions of one thoroughly conversant with the subject, and who is uttering no random notions. . . . We strongly recommend 'Notes on Muhammadanism.' Our Clergy especially, even though they are not Missionaries, and have no intention of labouring amongst Muhammadans or consorting with them, ought to have at least as much knowledge of the system as can be most readily acquired, with a very little careful study, from this useful treatise."—The Record.

"Its value as a means of correcting the common impressions about Islam will reveal itself to the most cursory reader, while the author's evident scholarship and intimate knowledge of his subject bespeak for him a patient hearing on points the most open to controversy."—Allen's Indian Mail.

"In brief compass it contains a large amount of reliable information. Instead of theories and fancies, facts are placed before us. Muhammadanism is represented as it really is, not as it is supposed that it might possibly be. Instead of retailing the speculations current in literary society at home, Mr. Hughes furnishes us with brief but incisive statements, which, so far as they go, leave nothing to be desired."—The Church Missionary Intelligencer.

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT. WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS COMPANY (Limited).

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer.

Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.
Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. postage, free. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, free. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, free.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT. ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS,

&c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, free.

JOHN WHITE, MANUFACTURER, 228, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

THE FOLLOWING IS AN EXTRACT FROM A LETTER

dated 15th May, 1872, from an old inhabitant of Horningsham, near Warminster, Wilts. :—
“I must also beg to say that your Pills are an excellent medicine for me, and I certainly do enjoy good health, sound sleep, and a good appetite; this is owing to taking your Pills. I am seventy-eight years old.”

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, December 24; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, December 22; Calcutta, December 21.

ACCORDING to the latest famine statement for Bombay, more or less rain had fallen in most of the nine districts, with results especially good for Sholapur and Kaladgi. Prices continued to fall everywhere. The average price of the cheaper food grain was only a fraction under thirty pounds the rupee, or about half the ordinary average. But prices are still falling, and we must remember that, "as regards the cultivating classes and all persons directly dependent on them, the effect of high prices now at harvest time is very different to what it was when the whole population had to live upon the stores of grain which dealers and others had in their possession." No more weekly statements were to be issued.

FROM the weekly statement of the Madras Committee we learn that "the famine is passing away, crops have ripened and are ripening, but the after-effects of such terrible scarcity as this Presidency has experienced during the past year have been and continue to be very great. The more detailed the inquiries made in famine-stricken regions, the more serious was the distress found to be." But side by side with stories of sharp distress and terrible suffering, are to be found "particulars of the exceeding great good which 'the fund' has wrought, and the great part it has played in bringing the country back to its normal condition, and in infusing a new life into the people." Nearly fifty-one lakhs of rupees—or about half a million sterling—had already been laid out from the Famine Relief Fund. The Madras Government has notified that "there is no longer any necessity for permitting the entertainment, by local officers of any department, of any further establishments;" and it directs that after the 30th December no further establishments be entertained without the express sanction of Government. The time has also come when "a considerable reduction of establishments, entertained on famine account, can safely be made in many districts." Collectors will therefore report what reduction they consider they can safely make from time to time.

It appears that many famine-stricken people, who had previously been sent back to the North Arkot district, have since returned to Madras, in so wretchedly reduced a condition that it was necessary to give them immediate relief, or many would have died in the streets. We should like to know who is responsible for this. As the Pioneer puts it, "Is the Madras town relief given on such easy terms as to induce people to return in preference to seeking work at home; or are the arrangements at Arkot so bad that people prefer running the risk of starvation to remaining?"

THE Madras Government has appointed Messrs Oldham and Kisch, Bengal Civilians on Famine duty at Bellary, to be members of the Commission to inquire into and audit the famine expenditure of the Bellary district. Other members are to be named by the Accountant-General. It is stated to be beyond a doubt that large sums of public money have been misappropriated somewhere. Treasury accounts are months behind-hand. Large sums of money are unaccounted for, and the Government wish to know the reason why.

A NEW peril looms on the Madras horizon. It is reported that locusts have appeared in flights in the Kadapah district, and wherever they settle they entirely destroy the crops. At present the damage is confined to a small area, though the destruction done is very complete. Let us hope that the actual flights are not very large, since one of the remedies proposed is to brush the insects into baskets and burn them. Still at the present time the loss of the smallest portion of the upcoming crops is an affliction that Madras might well have hoped to have been spared.

It is reported that a deputation of nine Jawakis were badly received by the Amir of Kabul, who refused to help them in any way. The latest telegram from the camp at Turki reported all well in camp. It is further stated that a Tribal Jirga or council including the men of Bori, was to be held on December 18, in Jammu. The Jawakis are said to desire submission. According to the Pioneer, however, the general impression was that the Jawakis would not accept the terms of Government except under extreme pressure. Several attempts have been made by individual headmen to come in and interview the authorities, but this was refused, and no negotiations are permitted except with a Jirga from the whole tribe. The health of our troops continued excellent. The Lieut.-Governor of the Punjab had gone to Kohat, and some mountain guns had been ordered up to the same quarter, probably as a precaution.

THERE have been severe storms along the Coromandel Coast, from Nagapatam southwards. Inland the country is said to have suffered severely; telegraphic communication having been broken, and the railway between Trichinopoly and Turticorin, about 200 miles, breached in several places. The full extent of the damage is not yet known. The Christmas rains have also been severe in the Central Provinces. They had already damaged jowari, tur and cotton, and if continued would be very disastrous.

SIR RICHARD TEMPLE was on a tour of inspection round the Sind frontier outposts, accompanied by Colonel Nuthall. On the 20th Dec. he left Jacobabad, with the Commissioner, for Kashmir.

THE Bombay Government has granted a stay of execution in the case of Joaquim Britto, who had been condemned to death for the murder of Mr. Roonan. His execution had been fixed for the 10th January, but as the Government of Goa desired to make some representations in the prisoner's behalf, Sir Richard Temple has put off the execution accordingly.

WE regret to hear that Major Brind, of the 17th Foot, has died at Simla from the injuries received by a tree falling upon him.

THE Secretary of State has sanctioned the proposal of the Government of India that special personal allowances, such as have already been granted in the North-West Provinces, should be granted to certain covenanted civilians in Oudh, who have suffered from the block of promotion.

THE advance on Jammu, the southern stronghold of the Jawakis, by three British columns under General Keyes, seems to have been well planned and brilliantly executed. A little before daybreak on December 1 all three columns reached the mouth of the gorge leading to Jammu. An Afridi picket, on a high conical hill on the right of the entrance, was very nearly surprised and surrounded by a company of the 6th P.I. Firing off a hasty volley, they fled precipitately down the hill, leaving their blankets behind them, and their camp fires still burning. Another picket on a red-coloured ridge on the left was, a few minutes afterwards, dislodged by some skirmishers of the 29th P.I., and the three columns, moving abreast, about half-a-mile or so apart, crowned the approaches of the gorge just as daylight was dawning. This gorge—says the Pioneer Correspondent—"in many places only a few yards wide, winds on for about two miles through a labyrinth of high precipitous ridges, which completely command the road on either side. At its extreme end it widens out into a little basin, flanked on either side by two high mountain bluffs, the Mandaher Sir and the Durgai Sir; and here, nestling at the very foot of the main range which forms the watershed of the valley, lies the picturesque little cluster of hamlets called Jammu." Some parts of the defile were almost impassable for mountain guns, and a more determined enemy would have given our troops a good deal of trouble. "Each successive ridge was a natural fortress, and our progress ought to have been contested step by step. As it was, however, from first to last they made no determined stand; and driving them steadily before us, our skirmishers pushed them from point to point without a check. At about eight A.M. we gained the last spur, which overlooks Jammu, and from this point we could see the villagers hurrying away from their houses below, and streaming across the fields with their women and cattle in the direction of the Naro Khula Pass leading over the main range towards Bori."

WHILE the troops halted on the ground they had won, the skirmishers followed up the retreating enemy, whose attempts at further resistance were finally quelled by the advance of our light mountain guns. After burning several villages, the bulk of the troops returned to Shinda, leaving a strong garrison in Jammu. The whole of our loss was one man killed, one officer and six men wounded. One officer, Captain Hawes, of the 4th Punjab Infantry, had a very narrow escape, as the following passage from the letter above quoted will show:—

Leading some of his skirmishers up a ridge, Captain Hawes saw an Afridi a little distance in front of him, kneeling behind a rock. Seeing that the man was wounded in the leg, he ordered his skirmishers not to fire at him, and calling out to him in Pushtu, "Don't fire, and I'll save you," ran forward to secure him. He had come up within a few yards of him, when the fellow suddenly raised his rifle and deliberately fired two shots at him, both bullets whistling past his head. Seeing his only chance was at once to close with him, Captain Hawes rushed straight in at him, without swerving an inch; and before he had time to reload a third time, succeeded in cutting him down. He turned out to be the son of an influential malik, and the rifle he had with him was found to be a Snider, which, curiously enough, had been stolen from the 4th P.I. some few months back by a Kabuli sepoy, who deserted from the regiment at Gumbat. It is said to have been bought from the deserter for 120 Kabuli rupees. Captain Hawes was afterwards complimented by the General on his conduct; and there can be little doubt he owes his life entirely to his pluck and self-possession.

THE Jawakis, with whom our troops have lately been fighting, form one section of the great Afridi tribe of hill-borderers, which altogether numbers over 23,000 fighting men. The whole tribe is divided into the following branches:—Kuki-Khel, Malikdin-Khel, Sipah-Khel, Kamarao, Zaka-Khel, Aka-Khel, and Adam-Khel. The first seven branches are known as the Khaibari and Tira Afridis, from the places they inhabit, namely, the country bordering on the Peshawar district from the Khaibar Pass to the Kohat Pass. The Adam-Khels are divided into Gallai, or Pass Afridis, Ashu-Khels, Hasan-Khels, and Jawakis. All these sub-divisions dwell in the tongue of hills stretching into British territory from between Kohat and Peshawar, and well to the east of the Pass. The whole triangular piece of country thus occupied is only about twenty-five miles long, by a maximum breadth of twelve miles at the base.

THE Rajah of Venkatagiri seems from his own showing to be a heavy sufferer from the recent famine in Madras. Being asked by the Madras Government to give something for the relief camps on his estate, the Rajah lately sent Rs. 10,000, together with an abject letter detailing his claims to commiseration. Owing to the drought of 1876 and the distress of 1877 his estates brought him nothing; whilst, owing to the enmity between himself and his late Dewan, the recoverable balance of 1876 was still in arrears. Notwithstanding this, the Rajah had paid the peshkash (or tribute) and the road fund he owed; and when the famine came, resolved to spend two lakhs of rupees on relief works. Afterwards, when his relief works were made over to Government, he gave "a cash of Rs. 50,000, and rice worth Rs. 20,000." And now the Government asks him for more help. However, he writes, "it is my desire to act in conformity with the wishes of Government, and secure more honours." Accordingly, in obedience to the orders of Government and of the Collector, "I enclose bank-notes to the extent of Rs. 10,000."

WE learn from the Indian papers that an attempt to start a new and important industry is likely to be made in the Punjab, under the auspices of Mr. H. Whympier, Manager of the Marri Brewery Company. Struck with the difficulty, which year by year increases, of obtaining, at reasonable cost, glass bottles for beer, Mr. Whympier was led to investigate the method of glass-making practised by the natives of the Punjab. The chief home of the industry appears to be Sultanpur, in the Jhelam district, some ten miles up the river. There glass of the coarsest kind and shape is made in the clumsy manner which time and custom have hitherto sanctioned. Mr. Whympier obtained specimens of this glass, and of the raw materials from which it is made, and submitted them for analysis and report to Professor Keates, of London. His opinion is very encouraging to the prospect of the enterprise. "The materials," he writes, "might be used very well in the manufacture of beer bottles; and, with skilled treatment, in glass-making, generally. The alkali submitted is also suitable for soap-making." Mr. Whympier is now carrying out at Jhelam, through the agency of a German glass-maker, a series of practical experiments in glass-making; and should the results answer his expectations, it is proposed to establish at Jhelam a limited liability company for the manufacture and sale of glass in its most useful forms. Looking at the great number of bottles yearly required by the various breweries and soda-water manufactories of Upper India, the venture, if well conducted, bids fair to succeed.

AN important personage has lately died at Siam, in the shape of one of the king's white elephants, and according to custom it was buried with the highest funeral honours. One hundred Buddhist priests, we are told, officiated at the ceremony, and the body was conveyed to its last resting-place accompanied by a procession of thirty State barges.

It appears from a Bombay paper that Siam is preparing rapidly for war. "A torpedo defence is in progress; Gatling guns are talked off; forts put in order; and the telegraph line, lately spoken off, together with a railway survey, will be put off till more peaceful times." A demand from China for a renewal of the tribute is said to be the cause of these movements. Siam, like Nepal and Burmah, once sent tribute to Peking—Siam every three years, Nepal every five years, and Burmah every ten. Nepal gave up sending the tribute in 1857, but had to send it again in 1866. Siam declared her independence in 1852, just before her treaties with the Western Powers. The last Siamese mission had been robbed on its way, and this was offered as an excuse for the step. "Seven years ago, however, Siam offered to send an ambassador to Peking by a new route; but the Chinese Government refused to hear of any innovation; and has lately sent letters threatening war in case the tribute is not sent according to the old practice."

THE following notification appears in the last Gazette of India:—"In exercise of the power conferred by Section 23 of the India Coinage Act, 1870, the Governor-General in Council is pleased to call in, with effect on and from the 1st day of June, 1878, all silver coins coined and issued by the authority of the Government of India before the 1st day of Sept., 1835. Until the said 1st day of June, 1878, such of the coins called in by this notification as are now legal tender will continue to be legal in payment or on account, under the conditions which now apply to them, and on demand, current coins of recent date will be given in exchange for the same at any Government treasury, or at the Presidency banks and their branches. On and from the said 1st day of June, 1878, all silver coins, so called in, will cease to be legal tender, and if tendered to any officer authorised to act under Section 16 of the said Indian Coinage Act, 1870, will be dealt with in accordance with the provisions of that section."

SOME of the Queen's—we beg pardon, the Empress's—lieges in Berar seem nearly as blind to the blessings of school teaching for their boys as are still not a few persons of the corresponding class in England. One village has petitioned that its school be removed elsewhere. "We are agriculturists, and it is quite sufficient if our boys know how to plough, harrow, &c. We do not want them to read and write. The Government is forcing nectar down our throats, but it is not in our lot to take its benefit. . . . We are poor, and being unable to employ labourers, we use our children to do the work." This eccentric document concludes with a threat that if the school is not removed, "we will leave this village, and go to reside in the neighbouring gaons, where there are no Government schools; because here the patel and the pandia take our boys to school by force, though we do not want them to learn." It appears indeed from the report of Mr. Narayan B. Dandekar, Director of Public Instruction for Berar, that education in that province makes little if any way. The people have been requested to pay fees for the schooling of their children; and as hitherto they thought that they were doing a kindness to the Government in allowing their boys to be taught, they consider the proposal unfair. The Director is eloquent in his lamentations over the fate of female education. "This plant of exotic growth, after all the nourishment given to it, and care taken of it, has not shown signs of healthiness since its transplantation. The soil is not well prepared for it, and the climate is unfavourable." The girls cannot remain after their tenth year, and do not profit in after-life "by the little or no difference between gain and loss during their irregular attendance." In short, as the Resident puts it, female education has "collapsed." There is also "a dearth of literature in Berar, although the Budget annually contains provision for rewarding authors. As a further stimulus, a work on practical agriculture was advertised for, and a prize of Rs. 200 promised. Nine essays were thus obtained, and it seemed as though Berar was about to be at last provided with a 'literature.' Unluckily these productions turned out to be worthless, 'wanting in correctness of language or intelligible exposition of the subject.' The Resident is rather severe on this point, and thinks the dearth not much to be regretted. Schoolmasters are the only persons who attempt to profit by the fund from which literature is to be rewarded, and according to the Resident, 'if a presumption were hazarded as to the relative values of the works produced, and of the time, paper, and labour expended on them, the result would be more just than kind to the authors.'"

ACCORDING to a Calcutta telegram of Jan. 9, the report of the Bank of Bengal announces a dividend of 4 per cent. for the half-year. £10,000 are carried to the reserve fund, and £8,000 are set apart to provide for losses from the depreciation of securities.

It is now many months since Lord Lawrence raised his voice in the Times against a scheme still perpending at the India-office for detaching the whole North-Western frontier of India from the control of the local Governments. His latest letter is a strong and well-reasoned protest against the occupation of Quettah, as involving a needless threat to the ruler of Kabul, and the dangers of a further advance to Kandahar and Herat. It must be remembered that Lord Lawrence had always in him at least as much of the soldier as the statesman. His soldierly instincts entitle him to be heard attentively on a question of military as well as political moment. From either point of view the ere-while ruler of the Punjab and the sometime master of India's foreign policy can see no good in occupying Quettah. Such a measure too much resembles the old policy of 1838. It is either a mischievous and costly step, if we go no further, and gives wanton offence to Afghanistan; or else it is only the first step towards the occupation of Kandahar and Herat, and so points to the revival of a policy which all past experience utterly condemns. It would make the Afghans our bitter enemies and proportionately weaken our means of resistance to foreign invasion. A large additional force would be needed to hold a country not worth the conquering, our troops in the conquered country would become demoralised; they would have to depend on India for their supplies; and the loyalty of Afghan chiefs could only be purchased by costly subsidies. And all this danger and expense would be incurred through fear of a Russian invasion, which in all likelihood will never take place. If it ever were to take place, we could meet it—his Lordship justly believes—far more easily and securely by holding our present border line, where troops might be moved at short notice from one point to another, and be made equally useful against invaders from without and enemies from within. All the best military judges, from Wellington down to Sir Neville Chamberlain and Sir John Adye, have agreed in accepting our present frontier as the best available for defensive purposes. Why, then, should we push our outlying garrisons into isolated places like Quettah, where they might be cut off from aid in time of need, and where their presence may at any moment invite attack from the restless tribes around them? Because no cool-headed statesman like Lord Lawrence, but only a graceful posture-master holds the reins in India.

EVERYONE who has had anything to do with buying hardware must have felt the want of some sort of compendium of the trade. For any practical information it is necessary to consult a variety of books. Most of these are the pattern and price-books issued by private manufacturing firms, which have to be collected with great trouble and expense, and without any certainty that the best are procured. Many such books also are mere advertising media, every man puffing off his own goods to the best of his ability. This known want has led Mr. Wilson Browne, of Birmingham, whose experience of the trade, he tells us, extends over a period of thirty years, to prepare a handbook which is evidently the result of personal knowledge of, perhaps, the most intricate business in the world. Mr. Browne is well known as a commission agent of high standing, and the result of his study ought to be to the Birmingham trade what the "Illustrated Sheffield List" is to that of Sheffield. He informs us that not a penny has been paid him for the notice of any single article in his book. This greatly enhances the value of the information, as you get the unbiassed judgment resulting from long experience without the influence arising from a payment for the recommendation or notice of any particular maker's goods. Illustrations are given of such articles as require to be shown by drawings. The weights and extras of all kinds of iron, copper, brass, lead and zinc bars, sheets, plates, wire, &c., are given, with estimates for iron houses, sheds and roofs. Then follows trade lists of nails, screws, hinges, hollowware, &c., the gross lists (as they are called) being printed in red ink. The variety of articles dealt with is seen in the table of contents. It embraces locks, tubes, stoves, tinware, guns, ammunition, bedsteads, saddlery, watches and clocks, steam engines, pins, needles, fish-hooks, whips, carriages, bells, brushes, musical instruments, electro plate, cutlery, files, bedding, and the omnium gatherum that Birmingham, the great workshop of Europe, can alone exhibit.

ONLY seventy-five retirements having been taken up out of the ninety allotted in G.O.G.G. No. 8 of Jan. 1, 1877, for that year, the Secretary of State has sanctioned the extension of the time during which officers may retire under the terms of that order, up to March 31, 1878. Only officers who had completed twenty-eight years' service prior to Dec. 31, 1877, are eligible to retire under this arrangement.

Odds and Ends.

MR. W. R. HANAY, Officiating Junior Secretary to the Board of Revenue, North-Western Provinces, goes as Assistant Commissioner to Jhansi.

THE 54th Regiment, who takes the place of the 12th in Fort William, left Meerut on the march to Agra on the 20th November, reached Calcutta on the 4th December. The 54th were last there in 1858.

IN the month of October last, 41,030 cwts. of cotton, valued at Rs. 10,32,458, was exported from India, as compared with 94,632 cwts., valued at Rs. 21,28,679, exported during the corresponding month of last year.

RETROSPECT OF 1877.

THE past year opened in India with a grand flourish of trumpets and an unwonted blaze of viceregal magnificence, in honour of the Queen's new title of Empress of India. On the plain outside Delhi a vast and gorgeous gathering of Native Princes and nobles, English officers of State, troops of both countries, and spectators of every race and class in India, listened to the proclamation in which the new-styled Empress assured her Indian subjects of her goodwill towards them all, and her earnest wishes for their happiness. Meanwhile, over a large part of Southern and Western India, the people were in sore distress from the famine which began in the previous autumn, and the relief works were already thronged with a multitude of starving folk. As the months went on, the distress grew deeper and wider-spread, reaching its highest point about the middle of September, when three millions of people were receiving State relief in one shape or another. Happily the monsoon rains, if late in coming, fell, on the whole, in fair abundance, and the north-east monsoon of November allayed all fear of another season of sharp suffering. Before the year's end the millions kept alive by the State had been reduced to a few thousands, and the relief works were almost everywhere closed. The fears of a wide-spread scarcity in Upper India had also been dispelled by a timely downpour, and only a few districts still suffered from the effects of drought. Every effort was made by the local Governments to save life and relieve distress, but the numbers that perished from starvation or its attendant diseases may be reckoned at more than half a million. In the height of the famine the railways kept pouring vast supplies of food into the suffering districts, but millions of people who were too poor to buy grain for themselves would have perished but for the help afforded them by the State, at a total cost of nine and a half millions. For these and their families yet further relief was provided by the subscriptions which began to flow into the Mansion House last August, in answer to an appeal from the Madras Government. More than half a million of money raised by English charity was sent out to the Relief Committees in the next four months, besides smaller sums despatched from the colonies or collected in Upper India. Lord Lytton himself in the latter part of the year visited the famine districts and held important conferences with the officers of the local Governments.

On the north western frontier of India several noteworthy events occurred. Sir Lewis Pelly's mission to Peshawar aimed at the settlement of various questions at issue between the Viceroy and Sher Ali; but the sudden death of the Envoy from Kabul brought the Conference to an abrupt end. Sher Ali's attitude towards the Indian Government remained open to grave misgivings heightened by all manner of strange rumours, which the mysterious reticence of the Indian Foreign Office did nothing to dispel. It was widely believed that he had taken deep offence at the occupation of Quetta, and that his mind was much excited by the progress of the war in Turkey. Major Sandeman's successful mission to Khelat was followed up by the despatch of a small British force to Quetta, in accordance with the policy previously accepted by the Khan, who with his chief Sirdars had been cordially welcomed to the Delhi Assemblage by Lord Lytton. The murder of Mr. Hewson, at Quetta, was declared to have no political meaning, and the work of fortifying that place as a British outpost went on unchecked. The peace of the Punjab frontier was disturbed by a series of murderous raids on the part of the Jawaki Afridis, and at last two strong columns, led respectively by General Keyes and General Ross, entered from opposite sides the Jawaki country, burned some villages, and destroyed the chief strongholds of the tribe. The invading troops were to remain in the country, enforcing a strict blockade, until the Jawakis chose to tender their submission. One of the Naga tribes in the Assam Hills also provoked, by cruel raids, the chastisement they have since received from a small British force. Among the Mussulmans of India some excitement seems to have been caused by the danger which threatened their fellow-worshippers in Europe and Asia Minor, from the advance of Russian armies. Subscriptions in aid of the Turks were collected in various parts of India, and here and there a few Mussulmans set off to take service under their alleged Khalif, the Sultan of Turkey.

Our relations with the Native States in India were satisfactory, except in Haidarabad, where, for some cause or another of which we have no certain knowledge, Sir Salar Jung provoked the Viceroy to insist upon the removal of Mr. Oliphant from his post of Private Secretary to the Nizam's Chief Minister. Baroda prospered under the able management of Sir Madhava Rao. The death of the Kapurthalla Rajah, who had for some time been insane, involves the continuance of British supervision during his son's minority. The Government of Patiala also remains in British hands for the same reason, while that of Alwar has just been made over to its youthful ruler. In our own provinces some changes of importance have taken place. Sir Henry Davies was replaced in the Government of the Punjab by Mr. Egerton; the Hon. Ashley Eden succeeded Sir R. Temple in Bengal; and Sir Richard, after completing his mission in the famine districts, replaced Sir P. Wodehouse in Bombay. Oudh was at last united with the North-Western Province, under the rule of Sir G. Couper. Sir H. Norman's place in the Viceroy's Council was filled by Sir E. Johnson. A new Bishop landed in Calcutta to replace the lamented Dr. Milman, and two new bishoprics were founded in the Punjab and Southern India.

The death of Sir Jung Bahadur, Prime Minister and virtual ruler of Nepal, in February, deprived his country of a strong and enlightened master, who had shown himself a loyal friend to the English during the Mutiny. Later in the year died the Amir of Kashgar, with whom the Indian Government had some years before concluded a commercial treaty on favourable terms. The deaths of two philanthropic ladies, Mrs. Chisholm, wife of an old Indian officer, and Miss Mary Carpenter, promoter of many reforms in Indian schools and jails, deserve passing mention. Mr. Ross D. Mangles, an old East Indian Director, and one of the oldest members of the Indian Council; General Barrow, once Chief Commissioner of Oudh; Mr. J. C. Marshman, one of the ablest of Indian journalists and historians;

Mr. R. Ellis, of the Indian Council; Mr. Vernon Schaleh, late member of the Bengal Council; Major Candy, a well-known Oriental scholar; Sir John Fordyce, of the old Bengal Artillery; Bishop Milman, of Calcutta, and several other officers, civil and military, of Indian repute, were also removed last year by death. The Viceroy's Council lost by retirement the services of Sir Arthur Hobhouse, who has been succeeded as Law Member by Mr. Whitley Stokes. Sir Bartle Frere exchanged his seat at the India Office for the government of the Cape, and Sir T. D. Forsyth took his place in the Council of India, to which were also added Sir W. Merewether and Mr. R. Dalryell.

In the last days of the year Sir John Strachey expounded in the Viceroy's Council his scheme for insuring India against the effects of future famines, by means of a yearly surplus of a million and a half, to be obtained partly by provincial taxation and partly by a readjustment of existing taxes. Steady progress was made during the year with the Indus Valley Railway, and the line from Dhond to Manmar, while some of the older lines, such as the East Indian, the Great Indian Peninsular, and the Madras railways reaped handsome profits from the traffic caused by the famine.

In Parliament the affairs of India received even less than the usual modicum of notice, in the face of the greater interest evoked by party politics and the war in Turkey. Mr. Fawcett tried in vain to secure the appointment of a Committee of Inquiry into Indian Finances. Lord Salisbury's answer to the Allahabad High Court's remonstrances against the Viceroy's treatment of the Fuller case gave rise to a brief debate, in which Mr. Lowe took the part of the judges, whose independence the Viceroy had assailed; and a discussion in the Lords on Indian foreign policy brought out from Lord Salisbury an assurance that the occupation of Quetta involved no change in our relations with Afghanistan. Late in June Lord G. Hamilton introduced the Indian Budget to a thin House, and asked for leave to borrow money to meet the financial needs of the Indian Exchequer. Outside Parliament, however, a strong current of popular feeling impelled Mr. Bright in the autumn to deliver, at Manchester, a powerful speech in behalf of Sir A. Cotton's schemes for preventing famines by a large outlay on irrigation works; and Mr. Fawcett on another occasion announced his intention to demand a Parliamentary inquiry into the causes of Indian famines.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

TRADE RIVALRY BETWEEN RUSSIA AND ENGLAND.

The Pioneer remarks that the commercial antagonism of Russia in Asia towards England, her best customer in Europe, is, apart from what is usually known as the Eastern Question, a fact that is year by year assuming greater importance, as the Muscovite dominion in the East increases and means of communication are improved. It should be remembered that Russia in Europe and Russia in Asia have totally different standpoints as regards trade. In the West Russia is a great exporter of raw produce, admitted free, or at nominal duties, into foreign countries, while she imposes the highest possible tariff on the manufactured goods she receives from them in return. In the East she imports cotton, tea, and silk, giving in exchange her own hardware and cotton stuffs, unsaleable in Europe, as well as superior goods of other countries, all, however, carefully provided with Russian trade-marks. It is probably true, as asserted by Russians or philo-Russians in the Indian press some time since, that no prohibitive duties are imposed on foreign manufactures in Central Asia; but the complete exclusion of foreign merchants, coupled with the refusal to permit transit trade through European Russia, is equally effectual. That English goods do reach the Khanates of Turkestan we know from Mr. Schuyler and others; but they are only allowed in the market, and that at exorbitant rates, when the Russian factories find themselves unable to provide equally saleable articles of the sort. In Arabia and the greater part of Asiatic Turkey, on the other hand, sea carriage and the superior quality or cheapness of English goods place Russian competition with England out of the question. Of the commerce of the remote island provinces of China we know so little as to make it difficult to hazard an opinion as to the rivalry of England and Russia in their markets. There remains Persia, perhaps the only accessible field in which British and Muscovite merchants now meet on equal terms.

FAMINE POLICY.

The Madras Athenæum remarks that it is the opinion of Lord Lytton's Government that the only action of Government should consist in reinforcing the carrying powers of railways and canals, in removing tolls or other restraints on free intercommunications, in improving roads in the interior, in reducing rates of railway fares, and in cases of extreme necessity constructing temporary railways or tramways connecting the main lines with the populous tracts. While we are not disposed to object to Lord Lytton's views, we yet think that there is a far higher claim on the consideration of Government which has not been realised by him. There is not only the claim of the people to be kept from starvation, but there is also the claim of the State, that the millions which are spent are not absolutely thrown away. And this, we fear, has been done and will be done to a very large extent. Any close observer of the famine in Southern India must see that the character of the expenditure has been to a great extent unproductive. Large works should have been planned, and the State should have been benefited by the labour which during 1876-1877 the famine had placed at its command. It was during famine years that the Pyramids in Egypt were built; and coming within recent historic memory the magnificent Palace at Versailles was the result of famine labour judiciously employed. Have marked and permanent results in new works or large undertakings been aimed at in India? Or rather have not in Mysor and in Madras, mere local works—excavation of tanks on the Cooum, bits of railway work destined not to be completed, roads traced, destined to be washed out with the first outburst of rain, a few wells dug, a few water holes deepened, a few embankments thrown up with haste and as rapidly effaced—have not these been the main results, the out-crop of the present famine? The great thing to be regretted is that the huge amount of labour forced on Government was wasted on labour which will “not leave a wrack behind.” It surely was not a wise policy simply to employ the starving and pay them to keep them alive. In that case they might have been paid to carry stones from one place and pile them in another and then carry them back again to their original place. We of course know that some useful works have been done, but there can be no doubt that many useless works are the result of the millions spent on famine labour. We trust that in future years legislators will profit by this experience, and that the future “famine policy” will leave works as stable as, and far more useful than, the Pyramids of Egypt and the Palace of Versailles.

ROADS AND WATERWORKS.

The Madras Times does not know whether Colonel Chesney is aware or unaware of the fact that all he proposes has actually been in active operation in an Asiatic country for nearly thirty years. In 1849 Sir (then Mr.) Philip Wodehouse, late Governor of Bombay, was Colonial Secretary of Ceylon, and, in that capacity, introduced what is known in the island technically as the Road Ordinance, and popularly as the “poll-tax.” Every inhabitant—the Governor, Buddhist priests, English soldiers and immigrant coolies alone excepted—is compelled to give six days' labour per annum, or its equivalent in money, for the upkeep of roads within a radius of twenty miles from where he lives. All between the ages of eighteen and fifty-six are liable. In Colombo, and the larger towns, the value of six days' road labour was set at Rs. 1-8-0; in the Northern and Eastern parts of the island it is a little less. The effect of this measure, which has now been in operation for twenty-eight years, is that Ceylon is one of the best-roaded countries in the world, superior in its mileage extent and also in the excellent condition in which the thoroughfares are kept. Not a traveller visits the island who is not enraptured with the excellence and condition of the roads. The Road Ordinance may be considered to have justified its existence, but it is greatly in need of amendment, and the rates paid ought to be on a graduated scale, and not the same for all classes of society. For instance, as the law now stands, the English official, merchant, and planter, getting or making a thousand rupees per mensem, pays as much and no more than the coolie in their employ who receives seven rupees per mensem; this is manifestly unjust. As regards the other suggestion made by Colonel Chesney, viz., that village communities should undertake the repair and upkeep of tanks, Ceylon has already tried that system and found it successful. Southern India would, probably, have followed suit, for Sir Henry Ward, who initiated the system in the neighbouring colony, was appointed Governor of Madras when his period of rule in the colony came to an end, but—strangely woven are the meshes which tangle human lives—he died a few days after assuming office. But for that casualty, ten or fifteen years ago, Madras might have had an open Legislature—for Sir Henry was an ardent but safe Liberal—and a strongly-developed system of village rule. During Sir Henry Ward's period of rule in Ceylon, it was determined to revive agriculture, by the repairs of ruined tanks, &c., and the village councils, which had been abolished in 1842 on the creation of Small Cause Courts, were revived, in which the village elders had the power of regulating all matters regarding repair of tanks and use of water according to the sacred regulations of Mamool. In later years the principle has received fuller development, and the Village Republics (to quote an expression used by Mr. J. F. Dickson, C.C.S., in alluding to this region), have helped to turn a deserted region into a fruitful garden, and by many improvements, which are being carried out, are driving away fever and other diseases which made a visit to Anaradhapura and Pollanarua, the scenes of ancient splendour in Ceylon, more risky than trying to find the North Pole. Under the system thus referred to, the island Government provides scientific oversight, gives sluices, and, we believe, bears the greater part, if not the whole, of the cost of the stone-work, the villagers undertaking the earth-work at their own charges. Where large irrigation works have been made at the cost of the Colony a compulsory water-rate is levied, or parties are allowed to purchase the use of the water in perpetuity by a commuted single payment.

THE JAWAKI CAMPAIGN.

HEAD-QUARTERS CAMP, SHEENDEH, Dec. 8.—The settlement of Ghureeba, which we attacked and burned yesterday morning, occupies much the same position with regard to Paiya that Jamnu does to Sheendeh. It lies in a little highland glen at the foot of the main range immediately north of Paiya, and consists of a couple of villages, protected by seven or eight strong towers. A steep precipitous ridge of red rocks runs directly across the entrance, completely shutting it out from the main valley; and, hidden away from everything but its little patch of blue sky above, it looked the very picture of a robbers' stronghold.

The attack was formed in three columns, the strength and composition of which I gave in my last letter. The right column, leaving Sheendeh two hours before daybreak, made its way along the southern side of the valley until it found itself opposite Paiya; then sweeping round to its left, across the cornfields, it crowned the plateau in its front, and moving rapidly along its crest towards Ghureeba, gained possession of the ridges overlooking the right of the village, without opposition. Meanwhile the left column, which, leaving camp half-an-hour later, had moved up the opposite side of the valley, had taken up a corresponding position commanding the left approaches. The Afridis, seeing themselves thus taken on both flanks at once, after firing a few shots, retired up the slopes of the main range, at the back of the village; and having got to what they thought a safe distance, began to open a pretty brisk but ineffectual fire on our skirmishers. The heights on each side being securely held, a party of the Guides and 5th P.I. were now sent down to fire the villages. This they did most effectively; and by the time the main column came up one of the two villages was already in flames. The other soon followed suit, and in half-an-hour or so not a house or tower was left standing. It was now eight o'clock, and the General, after going down to have a look how things were going on, gave orders for the retirement to begin at eleven; so having a good three hours' rest before us, the men piled arms, and all hands were piped to breakfast. Climbing up to the crest of the ridge barring the entrance, I got a capital view of the whole scene. From the foot of this ridge a little amphitheatre of terraced cornfields sloped gently up towards the burning villages. Volumes of dense smoke hid all beyond; but every now and then, as it lifted, one caught occasional glimpses of our skirmishers lining the rocks and peaks half-way up the mountain slopes behind. Higher up still, close under the sky-line of the main range, bringing up the background, the enemy had ensconced themselves in twos and threes among the rocks and boulders, sullenly watching the destruction going on below. It was impossible to guess how many there were of them, for you never saw anything but here and there a little puff of white smoke as they exchanged long shots with our skirmishers; but I don't think there could have been more than two or three hundred of them on the whole hill-side.

The retirement was very prettily managed. First of all the guns were sent back out into the Paiya plain, where they took up a capital position behind a little isolated hill, which during our occupation of the valley had been held by one of our advanced picquets. The skirmishers being still kept lining the ridges in front, the main body of the troops were then gradually withdrawn from the cornfields at my feet, and moving out by the nullahs which ran round either end of the ridge I was standing on, again joined together in the plain beyond, and formed up in rear of the artillery. All these being at last safe out of harm's way, the skirmishers in rear of the village began slowly retiring in alternate lines from ridge to ridge. The Afridis seeing this, raised a cheer that rang along the whole hill-side above us, and redoubling their fire began creeping down after us at a respectful distance. Our centre skirmishers having got clear of the last ridge behind the village, now ran across the green cornfields below, and lined the ridge running across the foot of the glen. This position having been secured, the skirmishers on their right and left front began retiring in their turn. The Afridis now began to show themselves a little, crowning each ridge in succession as our men retired from it, and the firing became brisk all along the line. Suddenly, however, the guns opened from behind, and made very pretty practice, the shells whizzing just over our heads and bursting among the rocks a few hundred yards in front of us. Many of the Jawakis had by this time come down into the villages, and could be seen moving about in front of the burning houses, and I don't think more than half of the enemy were really following us up. As our last skirmishers gained the open plain and joined the main column, twenty or thirty of the enemy came on to the red ridge in front of the glen, and gave them a few parting shots. This was the point to which they cared to follow us up, and the firing having now entirely ceased, the troops marched quietly down the valley back to Sheendeh. Altogether the affair was a successful one; and the best proof, I think, of its having been well-planned and properly managed is the fact that we had not a single casualty.—Pioneer Correspondent.

PESHAWAR, Dec. 17.—The Jawakis are concentrated to the south of Bori. Our outposts are fired on every night, but without harm. The health of the troops is excellent. Colonel Rogers, commanding a detachment of the 9th Foot, and the 14th and 20th N.I., is still on the ridge above the camp. Up to the 15th there were no signs of the enemy's submission. The heavy guns have returned to Peshawar.

SHERGASHA, Dec. 18.—General Keyes has arrived here. He returns to Bagh to-morrow. A military reconnaissance of the next range is to be made. The different Kheyls held a punchayet yesterday. Mountain guns have been telegraphed for. There is a rumour about the Kohat Pass being closed; the firing at night continues. There is rainy weather.

PESHAWAR, Dec. 18.—There was a reconnaissance to-day about and beyond the Bori Pass. Further operations are under discussion. It is believed Jawakis will oppose the terms, unless under extreme pressure. Individual headmen strive for interviews, but negotiations are permissible only with a jirga of the representatives of the whole tribe.—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

PENSION.—Mr. W. Hogan, Registrar in the office of the Military Secretary to the Commander-in-Chief, has obtained a pension of two-thirds of his pay, viz., Rs. 350 per month, from the Secretary of State for India, as a special case. The Commander-in-Chief had backed the application with a strong recommendation.

TEA EXPORTS.—From Messrs. Thomas Watson and Co.'s Tea Report we see that the quantity of tea exported from Calcutta in November last was 4,867,780 lbs., as compared with 3,346,382 lbs., exported in November last year. The total quantity exported from the 1st January to the 30th November this year was 27,666,262 lbs., as compared with 25,283,719 lbs. exported in the corresponding period of last year.

EDUCATIONAL.—Mr. Martin Mowat, Professor in the Civil Engineering Department of the Presidency College, is appointed to be Professor in the Dacca College. Mr. Mowat was for many years a Professor in the Free Church College, and is very highly esteemed by a large circle of friends, who will regret, for their own sakes, his departure from Calcutta. A more thorough and conscientious teacher than Mr. Mowat the educational service does not possess.

PUNJAB COMMISSION.—The following changes are spoken of in the Punjab Commission: Major Gordon Young is to be Resident at Kappurthala, vice Mr. Rivaz, going on furlough; Mr. Tremlett is to be Additional Commissioner at Jullundur, vice Major Young; Mr. Jenkins goes to Dhurmsala, and will be relieved at Sealkote by Mr. Trafford; Mr. Mackworth Young goes to Umritsur, and Mr. Roberts remains at Gurgaon; Mr. Maconochie is appointed Settlement Officer at Delhi.

MAJOR BRIND.—A correspondent, writing from Simla on the 14th Dec., says: "I am happy to state that there are some favourable symptoms in the case of Major Brind, and it is hoped that he will be able to pull through the severe accident he met with. He is still unconscious, but his pulse is more natural, and altogether there are great hopes of his life being spared. We have not had a second fall of snow now since the night of the 9th, though the general appearance of the sky betokens that we may expect another fall in a day or two.

THE TEA CROP IN KANGRA.—The correspondent of the Delhi Gazette writes:—The tea season of 1877 may now be considered as closed, so far as manufacturing is concerned. The deficient rainfall for July, August, September, and October, viz., 20 inches 7½ tenths, has, as I estimated, caused a deficient crop in general, to the extent of, I believe, not less than 25 per cent. of last year's crop. I subjoin the rainfall for the last six years for July, August, September, and October, from which it will be seen to what extent 1877 has been a defaulter. I believe, as a general rule, over most of the tea districts of India a deficient rainy season has caused a deficient tea crop.

SIKHS AND PATHANS.—There is a story told by a British officer of long experience in the Punjab, who was talking to an old Sikh. "You-British," he was told, "don't know how to manage Pathans. When you catch a Pathan, you should put him in a sack of bhoosa; tie him up in it, and set it on fire. That is how we used to manage, and it is the only way to treat a Pathan." On another occasion the same British officer was talking to a Pathan. The Pathan said, "You British don't know how to govern Sikhs. You should do what we used to do when we caught one. You should get a large sack of bhoosa; tie your Sikh up in it, and set it on fire. That is the proper way to treat a Sikh."—Pioneer.

TRADE OF INDIA.—From the accounts of the Trade and Navigation of British India for the first seven months of the current financial year, as compared with those for the corresponding period of last year, we see that the value of merchandise imported was Rs. 22,94,02,720, as against Rs. 20,30,57,428, and that of merchandise exported Rs. 35,70,03,079, as against Rs. 33,61,96,770. The value of treasure imported was Rs. 9,97,43,464, as against Rs. 5,46,33,451, and of treasure exported Rs. 1,51,15,400, as against Rs. 2,94,53,827. The amount of import duty collected, including also the salt duty, was Rs. 2,56,19,966, as against Rs. 2,40,13,920, and of export duty collected, Rs. 20,88,452, as against Rs. 25,55,852.

CIVIL.—Mr. T. Smith, Officiating Judge of Midnapur, is appointed Judge of Tippera, Mr. J. B. Worgan, from Dinajpur, goes as Judge to Saran and Champaran, Mr. J. Tweedie acts as Judge of Rajshahi, and Mr. P. Dickens succeeds Mr. Worgan at Dinajpur, Mr. J. G. Charles acting as Presidency Magistrate in the place of Mr. Dickens. Mr. J. O'Kinealy is appointed Remembrancer of Legal Affairs when Mr. H. Bell retires; but Mr. H. T. Prinsep acts whilst Mr. O'Kinealy is at the Home Office, Mr. H. Beverley acting as Judge of the 24 Parganas in the place of Mr. Prinsep, and Mr. W. H. Verner acting as Additional Judge of the 24 Parganas and Hughli.

SNAKE-LORE.—A correspondent of a mofussil paper, writing from Berar, relates the following circumstance:—While out in the district the other day, I came across a snake which was beside my tent; my attention was drawn to the reptile by the barking of my terrier. Armed with a stick, I proceeded to the spot, where I found the snake and five little ones about a span long, each in a small bush. I soon despatched the repulsive looking reptile, but could not find the youngsters, although I searched high and low. My curiosity was roused, and on opening the snake found, to my astonishment, the five small snakes in the mother's stomach. Now the question arises, is it the case that the young snakes take refuge when in danger in the mother's stomach? This is worth knowing.

WEATHER AND CROPS.—The weekly reports on the state of the weather and crops in Bengal show almost no rainfall for the week ending the 8th ult. In Hooghly it is stated that there is no change for the better in the state of the public health. The weather is generally seasonable, and the state of the crops fairly satisfactory. In Shahabad, it is stated that where canal water was taken the crops are magnificent. A good deal of cholera and fever prevails in several districts. We regret to see it stated that "the state of the crops in the tracts between the sea and the Chilka Lake is worse than before. charitable relief is being given to those people who are unfit for work, while the rest have been employed in relief works in connection with the District Road Fund."

THE ATTEMPTED SUICIDE BY MR. GROTE.—Mr. Grote, the Assistant Commissioner of Hurdul, who recently made so determined an attempt at suicide, was still alive on Thursday; the date to which our information extends. It would seem that the unfortunate gentleman shot himself twice, and he is said to be greatly disfigured, and has suffered much. Dr. Logg has been in constant attendance upon Mr. Grote ever since the sad occurrence, but for some days has been assisted materially in the necessary nursing and care of his patient by a couple of soldiers, who, alternately, watch by Mr. Grote's bedside night and day. These men were sent out at the request of the Commissioner of the Division, as it was quite impossible for the Civil Surgeon to sit up continuously without any rest at all.—Lucknow Times.

THE COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF ON TOUR.—His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief, with General Lumsden and Staff, arrived at Ajmere, by special train from Jeypore, at five a.m. on the 7th December, and proceeded at once to Nussarabad, where his Excellency inspected the troops under General Phayre, and returned to Ajmere about noon. At Ajmere the Commander-in-Chief and Staff were the guests of Mr. Leslie Saunders, Commissioner. In the afternoon the Chief inspected the Mhairwarra Battalion, distinguished above all other local regiments in Rajputana for its splendid services in the mutiny. The battalion was under Captain Greenfield (of the Deolee Irregular Force) and Captain O'Moore Creagh, one of the finest soldiers in India. Sir Frederick Haines expressed himself highly pleased with the regiment; their march past was splendid. In physique the Mhairs are probably as fine a body of men as any in India. After the inspection, the Chief visited the Mayo College, and witnessed some very fine feats of horsemanship on the part of the young Rajahs. At seven p.m. the same evening the whole party returned to Jeypore en route to Gwalior.—Pioneer.

EMIGRANTS TO DUTCH GUIANA.—A new order has been passed in Dutch Guiana, by which the children of Indian immigrants, between the ages of nine and twelve years, are required to attend the Government Free Schools; their parents and guardians being subject, if they fail to send them to school, to fine, and in default of payment thereof to imprisonment. With regard to this order, we are informed that the Government of India have expressed a hope to the Home Government that steps will be taken to insure that no interference with the religion of the children while at school shall be permitted; and that should any immigrants suffer the penalty of imprisonment under the Ordinance for neglecting to send their children to school, such term of imprisonment may not be added to the period for which they have contracted to labour, but shall be included in the period of their engagement as so much time actually worked out.

MISCHIEVOUS FALSEHOODS.—A vernacular paper story was circulated last June about the captain of a river steamer, called the Burmah, who was said to have cruelly neglected to save the life of a native passenger, drowned at Goalpara, in Assam. The vernacular writer described the captain and his crew watching the struggles of the drowning man for ten minutes, and "witnessing the scene as one affording amusement." This obvious nonsense has been the subject of a huge Government inquiry. A bulky report from the Officiating Deputy Commissioner shows that a native was certainly drowned at the time referred to, but that all the embellishments were purely fictitious. The man got into the water by an accident that was altogether his own fault; the current was flowing swiftly, every effort was made by the steamer's people to save him, but without avail. In ten to fifteen seconds he was swept hopelessly out of their reach, though even then a boat was sent after him, and kept rowing about till all hope of recovering him or his body had gone by. The incident hardly seems to have been worth all this notice. The baboo who originally called the attention of Government to the vernacular paper story could have been answered with very little trouble:—"Sir,—The story you quote is very disgraceful to the vernacular paper that has invented it. Nobody but a fool would suppose it true." How many days of public officers' time, how many reams of paper, how much clerical copying, how much fuss, and wear and tear of temper would have been spared if that course had been taken, goodness only knows.—Pioneer.

AFTER THE FAMINE.

KADAPAH, Dec. 10.—My recent trip to North Arcot district enabled me to judge of the state of crops in that district as well as in this, and the effects of the north-east monsoon upon the two districts.

In this, raggy crop is being gathered everywhere, and the paddy likewise has been harvested in certain localities. The outturn is reported to be fair, on the whole. Jonna, cotton and indigo are thriving very well in the black cotton soil, whereas on high grounds they have completely withered away, and in other places they are being destroyed by insects. Paddy is just being sown in some favourable localities, and cummin seed and turmeric have also found their way into the garden lands. Dry crops of other kinds are looking healthy, and promise fair yield.

In the district of North Arcot there has been occasional falls of rain recently, but they were not of such a character as to bring an additional supply to the already emptied tanks. The state of the district in many of the eastern and southern taluqs proves the periodical season reports, submitted by the Collector to the Board of Revenue, to be exaggerated. The tanks (rain-fed) in the taluqs adjoining the Palar and those in the south, such as in the taluqs of Wandawash and Paloor, have not received full supplies during the continuance of both the monsoons. Tanks within a distance of five miles from either banks of the Palar, though that river carried heavy freshes for days and months together, have received only partial supplies, and the ryots, depending upon future supplies from the north-east monsoon, raised paddy crops under them. As no surplus water escaped through the calingula of any of the rain fed tanks, the future is cast with gloomy forebodings. The haggard face of the ryots, which was brightened up immediately after the fall of the first rain, is now being rendered worse by the thick melancholy shade crowding in chaotic confusion. He is now heaving a heavy sigh and is mourning his lot more than he has ever done. After a severe trial during the course of one full year, and after his having passed through an ordeal unprecedented in its nature, he has the misfortune of incurring additional liabilities in the way of loans from Government for cattle and seed and for the excavation of wells, and from the village money lenders for his maintenance and the re-thatching of his house, besides his liability to pay the Government syst for the land he has cultivated, which forebodes a sure failure. The supply in the majority of the tanks is only enough to allow the ears to appear, and is not sufficient to ripen them to maturity, except those that have wells for their additional irrigation. Total failure in the rest is considered to be the inevitable result. Words are wanting to describe the present state of his felling. Labour and money is being lost, and he has nothing to maintain himself and his family till the appearance of the next favourable season. The Government demand for the arrears of revenue which was kept in abeyance during the continuance of the failure, under the suggestions of Sir Richard Temple, is heavily pressing, simply because the prospects appear to be favourable. No consideration appears to have been shown to him on account of his past misfortunes, while the present and future are not in the least under the consideration of the taluq and village revenue officials. All that they want is the money due to Government, and every possible step is therefore taken to ensure the recovery of that amount. What will become of him before the pongul appears it is impossible to describe.

Dry grains of all kinds are doing well. In this part of the year raggy and jonna crops are not raised in that district as in Cuddapah. All that the ryot depends upon are the dry grains and the paddy, which failing, he must be considered to be a doomed man.—Madras Athenaeum Correspondent.

STATION TALK.

RANGOON, Dec. 1.—A son of the Prime Minister of Siam arrived here this week to be educated in our High School. This is, I believe, the second relative of a high Siamese official who has come to Rangoon to be trained. The knowledge of the Burmese language is found very useful in Bangkok, where there are some 30,000 Burmese residing, and where trade with Burmese from Moulmein is annually increasing.—The new B. I. steamer Pemba took away from here for the benefit of his health a gentleman who has made Burma his home for very many years. Mr. E. Fowle, our Siamese consul, and the proprietor of the new Town-Hall, one of the finest buildings in Rangoon. We all hope his trip to sea may restore Mr. Fowle to his usual health. He has been in Moulmein and Rangoon for the best part of half a century, and is appreciated by all who know him, whether European or Burmese.—It is said the B.I.S.N. Company have other new steamers like the Pemba building for the Burma trade. If we could only get them to go a little faster we should be very pleased. A cargo steamer, the Tenasserim, recently left this for Calcutta, and arrived in less than eighty hours. Now our mail steamers take upwards of one hundred hours to do this same journey! Surely the community have a right to complain when their letters and newspapers are delayed like this, and when they see cargo steamers, which have no particular reason for making excessively rapid passages, doing the journey between Rangoon and Calcutta in about a fourth less time than the mail contract allows.—Two Deputy Commissioners, Majors Stover and Fryer, have arrived by the last steamer. They are posted to Tonghoo and Thongwa respectively, where two assistants had been officiating.—Samples of very good cinnamon growing near Bhamo have been sent by Mr. Cooper, the assistant political agent there, to the secretary to the Agri-Horticultural Garden in Rangoon. It is thought it will be possible to introduce this tree in several places in this province.—An Assistant Commissioner recently sentenced a man to Rs. 5 fine for cutting up a teak tree valued at Rs. 30. The Conservator of Forests has represented to the Judicial Commissioner the inadequacy of the punishment, and Mr. Sandford has called for the proceedings.—There is a report here that Mr. Sandford is to be made Judicial Commissioner of Mysore, and that the Recorder, Mr. C. J. Wilkinson, is likely to be promoted early next year to the High Court at Allahabad.—Englishman Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

GOLD MINING.—The prospects of the Alpha Gold Mining Company in Madras are improving, for a special telegram to the Madras Mail from Devalah, on the 3rd inst., says:—"Sixty-two tons of Alpha stone from Wright's Level has produced over thirty ounces of rich gold, averaging nine pennyweights per ton. Messrs. P. Orr and Sons have bought the gold. Specimens of quartz are about to be forwarded to the Duke of Buckingham. The commissioner has visited the works. A proposal to work the Alpha on an extensive scale is mooted. The capital proposed is fifteen lacs.

ACCIDENT TO CAPT. WYNTER.—Captain Wynter, 14th Hussars, met with a severe accident at Bangalore on Saturday evening, Dec. 15. During the gymkhana sports, while Captain Wynter was attempting to spear an egg placed on the ground, his horse came in collision with that of one of the troopers employed in keeping the ground, swerved violently, and then reared and plunged, sending Captain Wynter violently on the ground. He appeared to fall on his back, and every one expected that a fatal accident had occurred, but, happily, this was not the case; but he received a fracture of the leg just below the ankle joint.

REMNANTS OF FAMINE.—The Spectator, remarking that "the Indian famine is officially pronounced at an end," proceeds to compliment Lord Salisbury, "under whose guidance the famine campaign has been fought out." Lord Salisbury's share in the famine may seem clear enough and praiseworthy in London; but out here, to judge from such of his minutes as have been published, he made but few attempts to influence the famine management; and once or twice, it seems, his influence was very properly resisted. Nor is the Spectator right in supposing that the Indian famine is at an end. It has still to be stamped out of the original famine area of Madras; and it is spreading, unfortunately, to the north-eastern corner of the presidency, and still further into Orissa. In Vizagapatam and Ganjam actual famine is now almost inevitable; and Government are making active preparations for relief. The Chief Engineer and Secretary for Irrigation have been called upon to report immediately on any larger irrigation schemes, and canal communications that could be carried out as relief works. Some time must pass, however, before these could be prepared; local establishments are kept too low almost to get through current work, and can hardly invent large schemes in a day. So famine in Vizagapatam and Ganjam will find Government acting hurriedly; and there is a chance of some preliminary reverses. The reports from Pooree in Orissa state that the tracts between the Chilka Lake and the sea are in a worse state than ever. In the interior the old enemy, cholera, is at work; and in a part of Balasore a fever is prevalent, which seems like the Burdwan epidemic. In the Chitka tracts charitable relief is given to the people unfit for labour, whilst others are employed on relief works in connection with the District Road Fund.—Pioneer.

BALLOONING.—Ballooning in Bombay has led the Neilgherry Courier to revive some memories of similar "fleeing through the air" in times past. Referring to the first aeronaut, a Mr. Kight, the Neilgherry paper says:—From Calcutta Mr. Kight came to Madras. His first ascent there was from the present Penitentiary, at that time abandoned as a "hot-bed of disease." It was the land-wind season, but the sea-breeze was blowing. The balloon took a westerly direction, then met the land-wind, and was blown right away to sea. All horse and human legs, all carriages, buggies, phaetons, &c., rushed to the beach. There the balloon was seen floating on the "mighty deep." Nearly every ship in the Madras roadstead sent a boat for rescue, and Kight was saved while clinging to the network of the balloon for his life. We do not know what the sum realised on this occasion was, for, to the credit of Madras, people said, "We will stand outside the walls of the Penitentiary and witness the ascent; it will not cost us anything." This ascent stood Kight in a good amount of money. The balloon was valued at Rs. 1,500, and the gas could only be produced at Rs. 500. On the occasion of his second ascent from the Penitentiary, Mr. Kight was honoured by the presence of the late Nawab of the Carnatic. The balloon fled inland, in the direction of the Adyar. "The soul of his Highness," as his Private Secretary said, "was wrapt in the adventure," and two troopers were ordered to follow the aeronaut to the end of the earth. Kight descended about four miles from the Adyar, but the horse of the trooper who brought the intelligence fell dead on reaching Chepauk. Kight received Rs. 5,000 from the Nawab. Pursuing his aeronautic speculation, Mr. Kight next visited Mysor, where he was handsomely rewarded by the late Rajah; and at Travancore alighted once more on the sea, when he was saved by the boat of a dhoney which happened to be in sight.

WEATHER AND CROPS.—Reports on the state of the season and prospects of the crops for the week ending the 11th December, 1877, state that in Madras excessive rain is reported to have done some damage in parts of South Arcot, Tanjore, Trichinopoly, Madurai, Coimbatore, and Tinnevelly; prospects are, however, generally good, except in Ganjam and Vizagapatam. The total number on works is now 208,507, 29,280 less than last week, and on gratuitous relief 317,001, 48,588 less than last week. Only light showers have fallen in Mysore; sowing and harvesting continue, and the standing crops are in good condition; the number on works on the 1st instant was 66,277, and on charitable relief 19,480—6,810 and 1,978 less than in the previous week. In Bombay heavy showers are reported from Khandeish and Nasik, and lighter falls from Ahmednuggur, Poona and Sholapur; rain is wanted in Guzerat and Kaladgi. In Sind the river continues high; its sudden rise did some damage to the crops in the low-lying lands. In the Central Provinces there has been general rain, except in the Eastern Districts; it was heavy in the Sarpura and Nerbudda Valleys: the rabi has much benefited, but the kharif has in parts been somewhat damaged; general prospects are, however, very favourable. In Berar four inches of rain are reported from Amraoti; the kharif and the rabi have both slightly suffered in consequence. In Central India general, and in many places heavy, rain is reported from Malwa; it has everywhere been beneficial, and prospects have greatly improved. In Rajputana reports have been received only from Ajmere and Marwar; in the former rain has fallen. In Bengal slight but beneficial rain has fallen in several districts of Behar, Chota Nagpore and the Bhagalpur and Rajshahi divisions; the harvest of the late rice progresses, with an out-turn above the average, except in parts of the Patna division; the state of the crops in the south of Pooree continues to grow worse, and relief works have been set on foot. In Assam prospects are good. In Burma there has been no rain; the crops generally promise well. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh heavy rain fell throughout the provinces between the 8th and the 10th; its effect on the rabi crops and on pasturage will be most beneficial. In the Punjab also there was a general fall, extending to the Southern Districts, where it was most needed; prospects are now very favourable.

HAIDARABAD RAILWAY LOAN.—In the Times of India of Dec. 1st there is a letter, headed "Honest Controversy," and signed "Fair Play is Bonny Play." There is something in this signature and superscription so taking with Englishmen that it seems likely to run away with the English public in India, unless some one who is acquainted with the facts of the case comes forward to pull off the sheep's clothing. The writer says:—"In the singular farrago of absurdities which your daily contemporary puts forth to-day in the form of a leading article on Mr. Oliphant, Sir Salar Jung, the Herars question, the Prince of Wales, the Princess of Wales's companions, Lord Salisbury, and the holiest duty of Englishmen, one of the mis-statements of fact is of such a kind that it is perhaps as well to rectify it. It is boldly asserted that "a little knot of capitalists and speculators floated a loan for Sir Salar in London without the knowledge and against the wish of the Government of India." As a matter of fact, no loan was raised, as asserted. One-half the capital of the Haidarabad Railway was raised in the usual way in the London market. The Government were duly informed of what was intended, and asked if any objection would be raised. The opinion of the law officers of the Crown was taken, and no legal objection whatever was found to exist; the Government saw no political objection to so simple a transaction, and the affair was formally sanctioned by the India Office after due consideration. It is unpardonable to distort facts so well-known and placed on record not only officially but in all the journals of the day." . . . The air of authority with which all this is put forward is very impressive; and the climax is well reached in the virtuous indignation of the last sentence; and yet stern truth compels us to state most positively that it is a well-known fact, notorious to all who have paid any attention whatever to the subject, and publicly and generally canvassed in official circles at the time, that such a loan was raised in 1875—that it was raised in London without the knowledge or approval of the Governor-General in Council, who was said to have heard of it through Reuter's telegrams—that the Government of India protested against it as soon as it was known out here—and that such loans were then stigmatised as illegal, and as contrary to the invariable policy of the Government of India. It was rumoured at the time that no hindrance would be offered to the particular transaction complained of, because it was said that some blundering at the India Office had given the promoters of the loan a sort of claim to immunity; but it was perfectly well-known in all well-informed circles and we challenge authoritative contradiction of this statement—that the Government of India thoroughly disapproved of the whole transaction.—Englishman.

TANJORE.—Of all places of interest Tanjore is perhaps one of the most interesting. It boasts now of a Judge, whose fame as a learned man is widely spread; it possesses historic memories as remarkable almost as those of Trichinopoly. Tanjore has been a great battle-field as well as the scene of labour of a famous missionary, whose name is closely connected with its advancement and improvement. The ancient crenelated walls are still standing round the city, and curiosities abound everywhere. Close to the station is a modern house, once the residence of the District Engineer, with a ballroom whose floor is built on carriage springs. Here all sorts of comic scenes take place, and a waltz on this strange floor becomes a wild series of bounds and odd antics. The soberest dancers appear to be dancing the Highland fling, and a quiet polka grows into a romp of the wildest and most eccentric character. In the old temple is an enormous bull, cut out of a single stone. Stones of this kind and of such dimensions are not to be found for miles about Tanjore, and the legend has it that the stone in question has grown from a small image to its present huge size, and that it continues to grow yearly. When I last saw it, it was certainly twenty-five or thirty-five feet in length. How such an enormous monolith could have been conveyed so great a distance is a puzzle to engineers of the present day. Adjoining the temple are the beautiful gardens, in which more than one alfresco entertainment has been given by the Tanjore society to their friends in Trichinopoly and Negapatam. The palace of Tanjore bears some resemblance to a Parisian curiosity shop. In the library (catalogued by Dr. Burnell) are Sanskrit works of inestimable value, precious as fine rubies or priceless diamonds to the student of Sanskrit. There are gaily illuminated volumes, which are treasures in themselves, fine editions, beautifully printed, of French and English works of note, and prettily bound books in close contact with tattered volumes, ragged and dusty, and wicked novels remarkable for folly, in the well-known yellow and green covers. In another direction you come upon ingenious clock work toys, exquisitely finished and wonderfully manufactured, side by side with roughly-hewn wooden horses, with carelessly-made toy houses, with shapeless lambs and unmeaning puppets. The palace has its skeleton in the cupboard—not a ghost, not an ugly haunting memory, or a strange awful secret, but an actual skeleton—delicately made in ivory, and perfect as a study in anatomy. But this is only one curiosity among many. A really magnificent statue of one of the old rajahs (a friend of the great missionary Schwartz), seems curiously out of place close to a collection of Dutch dolls; whilst in one or two of the rooms you pause, amused to find the walls covered with pictures cut out of illustrated journals, rudely coloured and fastened on to cardboard. The wardrobe alone is a collection of valuables unmixed with tawdry finery or gilt. The old rajah's robes, a species of heavy kilt, embroidered richly in gold, over full, loose trousers, may be found here; the carpets and shawls in velvet and gold, the fine turbans, are one and all worth seeing.—Englishman Correspondent.

DEPARTURE OF H.M.'S INDIAN TROOP-SHIP "JUNNA."—H.M.'s Indian troop-ship Junna, 4,173 tons, Captain G. Parsons, sailed on Saturday Dec. 22, for Portsmouth, with 51 officers, 17 ladies, 18 children, 1,018 men, 57 women and 115 children.

QUETTAH.—Winter has set in at Quettah unusually early, and with extreme severity. There are constant rain and snow storms, with severe frosts—the thermometer in the tents at night going down to 25 degs.; communication is in consequence interrupted, and the posts delayed.

FAMINE CENSUS.—Sir Richard Temple has given orders that a census is to be taken on the night of the 19th of January next of the inhabitants of two taluqs in the Sholapur districts, and two in each of the districts of Satara, Kaladgi, Belgaum and Dharwar, to ascertain how far the numbers of the population have been affected by the famine.

SON OF THE RULER OF BOKHARA.—We are glad to learn that Huzrut Abdool Molukhan Bahadoor, eldest son of the Khan of Bokhara, arrived in Bombay on Sunday last. This Prince is the same who, dissatisfied with the conduct of his father in having submitted to the Russian sway, rose in arms against the Russians and defeated them. He has recently returned from Constantinople, where he was for six months an honoured guest of the Sultan. The Prince returns to his native country in a few days.—Mokhbare Saroor.

ARRIVAL OF H.M.'S TROOP-SHIP "SERAPIS."—H.M.'s Indian troop-ship Serapis, 4,173 tons, Commander D. Davidson, arrived in harbour on Friday, Dec. 21, from Portsmouth, which she left on the 13th November, calling at Queenstown on the 16th November, Malta on the 28th, Port Said on the 3rd December, and Suez on the 6th. She has brought 43 officers, 10 ladies, 6 children, 1,034 men, 46 women, and 46 children. Fine weather was experienced throughout the voyage.

THE LATE FORT MURDER.—It was rumoured on Monday, Dec. 17, that Messrs. Adrian and Frederick Britto had been arrested by the police on a charge of having conspired at the escape of Joaquin Britto, after he had murdered Mr. Roonan. We hear that after consulting the Advocate-General and the Government Solicitor, the Commissioner of Police decided that proceedings should not be taken against the brothers. We think the public will fully approve of his determination.

DEATH OF MR. LANGLEY.—We learn with sincere regret of the early and unexpected death of Mr. Langley, solicitor, of the well known firm of Messrs. Rimington, Hore, and Langley. Mr. Langley was taken ill with fever only four or five days ago, and on Saturday, Dec. 22, at two o'clock in the afternoon, he died of the attack at his residence on Malabar-hill. He was comparatively a young man, and had apparently a fair career open before him. He had many friends in Bombay, who will hear of his death with unfeigned sorrow.

RAJKOT.—The weather has been cloudy at Rajkot since the 14th inst., and there was a fall of rain to the extent of 72 cents. on the 17th. Cholera is said to have appeared at or near Bhownuggur and Verawul, and is spreading to some extent. This is notified by the Political Agent in the Agency Gazette of Dec. 13, who adds that "he trusts that as in 1875-76 every effort will be made to check the disease, and that the States whose subjects are attacked will employ extra medical aid, if necessary," and that travellers should be put under supervision, and the advent of strangers discouraged.

ADEN.—The following is the news report of the Political Agent, Aden, for the week ending the 5th inst: "The people of Al Maar have entirely left the Feudhlee country; their leaders went to Ali bin Mana, the Houshabee Sultan, for the purpose of obtaining his consent to the tribe living at Ruhia, in the Houshabee country, to which place the tribe had proceeded, but both the Houshabee and the Alawi have refused to give these people refuge or an asylum. Sultan Ahmed bin Hoosain, after having had all the Al Maar forts razed to the ground returned to Shugra, where he now is with all his army.—H.M.'s s.s. Wild Swan, Commander Powlett, left on the 5th for the Red Sea."

SHOCKS OF EARTHQUAKE.—A smart shock of earthquake was felt at Tanna at five o'clock on the morning of Sunday, Dec. 16. We have heard from a gentleman at Parell that he, too, felt a shock about five o'clock on Sunday morning, and thought it must have been occasioned by an earthquake, or a great explosion. Mr. Rienzi Walton informs us that a few minutes after five o'clock on Sunday morning he was awakened, in his bungalow at Toolsee, by a vibration similar to what would be caused by the passing of a number of heavily-laden waggons close to the house. The glass drops of a chandelier jingled, and glasses on a table knocked together. Shocks have also been felt at Mathevan, Bombay, and Jamnuggur.—Times of India, Dec. 24.

ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION TO MR. F. D. PARKER.—Mr. F. D. Parker, who has been for some years connected with the Bombay agency of the Peninsular and Oriental Company, left by Monday's mail steamer to assume charge of the Aden agency. A few years since, Mr. Parker officiated as agent for the company at Madras, and when Captain Henry met with a fatal accident this year, he was appointed to act as agent until the arrival of Captain Keilock. His departure from Bombay will be regretted by all who knew him as he had gained the good-will and esteem of all who had any relations with him. On Saturday evening, the employees in the Peninsular and Oriental Company's offices presented him with a handsome silver card-stand of Cashmere workmanship, together with an address.—Times of India, Dec. 24.

THE HON. LIONEL ROBERT ASHBURNER, C.S.I., MEMBER OF THE BOMBAY EXECUTIVE COUNCIL.—An old Haileybury Civilian, and a member of a family whose name is well known in India, Mr. Ashburner, came to this country in 1847, and was first posted to Guzerat, where he spent ten years, until he became Collector of Kaira in 1857. Then he took furlough, and on his return was posted to the Konkan, returning for a short time to Guzerat as Collector of Ahmedabad in 1861, and in 1862 going as Collector to Khandeish. It was for his services here as a district officer that he was made a C.S.I., such special services having consisted in persuading the Conservative native cultivators to abandon the growth of their own indigenous cotton for the superior varieties from the Berars, known as Hinghughat cotton. By doing this he made the cultivators not only prosperous but rich, and well earned his reward. In 1867, he went home on sick leave, and soon after his return acted as Revenue Commissioner of the Southern Division; again he returned to Khandeish, until, in 1871, he was appointed Commissioner of the Northern Division, so that he may be truly said to have made acquaintance with all parts of the presidency, except Sindh. Finally, at the beginning of this year, he succeeded Mr. A. Rogers, as Member of Council. He is a man of great energy and capacity for work, and will prove of material assistance to Sir R. Temple, who is a stranger to the ways and wants of the Western Presidency, though he may be no great orator in debate or able to write so flowery a report as the new Governor. His general good spirits have made him a favourite in society.—Buck—Charivari.

COURT-MARTIAL ON A SERGEANT OF THE ARTILLERY.—A Court-Martial has been sitting at Karachi on a Sergeant in the Royal Artillery, charged under sections 308 and 326 of the Penal Code, which came to a conclusion on Wednesday, the third day of the sitting of the Court. Colonel Price was the President, and Major Staveley, R.A., prosecuted. The witnesses examined were five natives and four European soldiers. The story told by the natives was interesting in the highest degree, and both strange and original. Shortly, they stated that one Sumar, a cultivator, and his wife met the sergeant accused, and on his asking where they were going, replied that they were about to make a complaint to the sarkar of their son, a youth of twenty years, having been beaten; whereon the sergeant, without a word, but with intense gravity and deliberation, raised his gun to his shoulder, placed its muzzle within a few feet of the doomed Sumar, and solemnly shot him. Some people object to courts-martial as of little use, but the curative effect of this particular court-martial on poor Sumar was remarkable. He came before the President, creeping sadly and slowly, in terrible anguish and pain as it seemed, from the leaden pellets once lodged in his neck; but he left the Court upright and vigorous, with a bright and happy countenance. The European soldiers declared that the gun went off, when the sergeant was surrounded and being attacked by seven natives, and that at the time of firing, the gun was being held by the sergeant above his head to guard himself from the sticks used against him. The sergeant was in fact severely beaten, and the story told by the soldiers was supported by other facts. It has been stated that the sergeant killed not only a man but also "an animal held in veneration." Whatever this mysterious beast may be, it was certainly not killed on this occasion, neither was any man, woman, or child.—Bombay Gazette.

INDUS VALLEY RAILWAY.—A correspondent, writing of the Indus Valley State Railway, says that "good progress is being made on the lower portion of this line, the Superintending Engineer being the right man in the right place this time, which is not always the case on our State Railways. On the 15th November, a material train for the first time on this line ran through from Kurrachee to Radhan, a distance of two hundred and fifty miles. Plate-laying in the Lower Scind District is being pushed on towards Sukkur at the rate of a mile a day. About the end of December the train will be able to run from Kurrachee to Sukkur; a break takes place here, which is to be the spot for crossing the Indus, nothing at present being decided on as to the design for the bridge to span this river at this point. The bridging will not be a difficult matter, as the river is not very wide; with good firm banks and only one channel, beyond Sukkur, the line is laid to Mooltan, so that by Christmas a journey from Jhelum to Kurrachee can be made by rail. Mr. Lambert, the Superintending Engineer of the Lower Scind District, and late of the Great Chenab Bridge of the Punjab Northern State Railway, deserves the greatest credit for the way in which he has pushed on the works under his care during the short time that he has had charge. This is one effect of having an old experienced railway engineer on work that he is adapted to and thoroughly understands, which is more than can be said of those he has to back him up. The engineers now coming out from Cooper's Hill are under the impression that they are not sent out here to work, as they are, but ape the military officer just joining his regiment. They strut about, give orders, look large, draw their pay, and "peg." It is a very bad example to the young men from Roorkee and other Indian Colleges, who really do work, and show something for their bread and butter."

THE GOVERNOR IN KACHH.—At the dinner given to his Excellency by the Darbar on the 30th, the Rao of Kachh read the speeches which follow, proposing the toast of the Empress and the Governor:—

YOUR EXCELLENCY, LADIES, AND GENTLEMEN,—I rise to propose a toast to which I am sure you will all most cordially and heartily respond, and which cannot but give rise to feelings of loyal attachment and devotion in the mind of every one present. It is the health of Her Most Gracious Majesty Queen Victoria, Empress of India. The virtues of Her Imperial Majesty are well known throughout her vast dominions, and we have even here in India repeated tokens of Her Gracious Majesty's love for her people and desire for their prosperity. She has but recently proclaimed her desire to see liberty and equity spread and maintained in her Indian Empire. She has given repeated assurances of her solicitude for the welfare of the Native Princes, and there has been in this part of her vast Empire such a period of peace during her reign as was never known before. My late revered father had the pleasure of meeting their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales and the Duke of Edinburgh, from whom he met with very kind and considerate treatment, and the messages which have since been received from his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales fully evince the regard which the Royal Family entertains towards my house. The Alfred High School in Cutch and the Albert Edward Breakwater at Mandvi are living proofs of the sincere attachment and the devoted loyalty of my family to Her Majesty's Crown. As a Native Prince, therefore, proud of this reciprocity of feelings, I beg you will drink the health of her Most Gracious Majesty the Empress of India with a cordiality equal to the pleasure I feel in proposing it.

YOUR EXCELLENCY, LADIES, AND GENTLEMEN,—I now rise to propose the toast of the evening, the health of our worthy and distinguished guest, Sir Richard Temple, Governor of Bombay. His Excellency has long been known to the Indian world as a brilliant administrator. In the Punjab, Central Provinces, Hyderabad, Bengal, and Bombay, and in the Departments of Finance, Diplomacy, or General Administration, whether acting as Secretary, working under the orders of a Chief, or as Chief himself directing the administration of a large province, or as a Special Delegate for Famine in Bengal in 1874, and in Madras in 1877, Sir Richard has earned for himself a reputation as an earnest and indefatigable worker, and as a sagacious and beneficent ruler. In the short space of time during which his Excellency has been presiding over the Government of the Western Presidency, he has seen the greater portion of it, and has already personally promoted and encouraged many useful institutions. It would be superfluous for me to dilate upon his Excellency's character or achievements, but this much I may be permitted to say, that the Bombay Presidency has been most fortunate in having Sir Richard Temple for its Governor, during the recent time of famine and distress. I fully appreciate the kindness of his Excellency in thus favouring us with a visit so soon after assuming his present high post, and hope that what he may now see in Cutch will induce him to come again. It is with no ordinary pleasure, therefore that I invite you, ladies and gentlemen, to drink his Excellency's health with all honours.

MURDER BY A HINDOO WOMAN AT LOWER MAHIM.—On Thursday evening last, Dec. 30, a most cold-blooded murder was perpetrated by a young Hindoo woman named Laddoo at a chawl situated at Lower Mahim. The unfortunate victim was a young girl named Essoo, about seven years of age, who was murdered by Laddoo for the sake of petty ornaments, consisting of a pair of gold earrings and three gold beads, of the collective value of Rs. 12, which the deceased had on her person on that day. It appears that Narayan Essoo, the father of the deceased, saw her playing in front of his house at about one o'clock in the afternoon of Thursday last. Shortly after that hour he heard Laddoo talk to the deceased and ask her to take the frying-pan, which she had borrowed from her father two days previously, to be returned to him. Laddoo then asked the girl to accompany her to her house close by, as she was to share with her some sugar-cane, which she had then purchased.

The conversation between Laddoo and the deceased was distinctly overheard by the father sitting in his room. It was not at all unusual for Laddoo to take the girl to her place, and bring her back to her father's. As the girl did not return in time, the father sent his son Succaram, about nine years of age, to inquire into the cause of the unusual delay on the part of the girl in returning to her home. The boy went to Laddoo's chawl, but the door of her room was closed. The father then went himself. He saw the woman standing in the doorway and inquired if Essoo, his daughter, was at her place. Laddoo replied in a defiant tone, "What! have I hidden your daughter here?" As the girl could not be found there, he called at the house of his friends, neighbours, and acquaintances to see if she had strayed over there. Having failed in his attempts to find his daughter, he gave information to a police naigue, who took him to his superior officer, the havildar, at Worlee. Before it was sunset, the father, the havildar, and the naigue, after making due inquiries at one place and another, proceeded to the house of Laddoo. She was then observed walking down the oart, and in reply to the question of the havildar, said that she knew nothing about the girl. The ground floor of her house was searched, but nothing was found. They then went up into the loft with a light, and observed the girl lying prostrate on her face. A heavy stone mortar was put on her left shoulder, and a coir-rope was observed tied round her neck, one end of which was fastened to a rafter in the roof. She had been dead for some time. The murderers had exchanged the ornaments for others which were found in her room. On Friday a Coroner's inquest was held at Lower Mahim. Several witnesses were examined, and the inquiry was adjourned till the 26th Dec.

Ceylon.

HORTICULTURAL.—A horticultural show was to take place on the 19th and 20th December, when the collection of Ceylon products to be forwarded to the Paris Exhibition would also be on view. The show was to take place in the Museum grounds.

THE LATE MR. RUTHERFORD.—The death in Scotland of Mr. Rutherford, of an attack of liver, has deprived the Survey Department of a most trusted and valued officer, whose loss will be deeply felt in the department. Year by year the best hands of this trying branch of the Government service are falling away, the victims of long toil in unhealthy districts, during the most inclement seasons; at the present time but few remain of the old survey officers.

MR. MORRIS.—The retirement of Mr. Morris, Government-Agent, North-Western Province, is announced, on account of failing health from a long residence in an unhealthy district. The loss of this able and zealous officer will be felt by the Government and the people. The claim of Mr. Sharpe to succeed him in the fixed appointment is very strong, yet there are some who believe it will fall to Mr. Saunders, Acting Agent Western Province, in which case, no doubt, Mr. Sharpe would decline the acting appointment, as he could not well be expected to act for a junior in the service.—Ceylon Times.

CROPS AND WEATHER.—Accounts of the current crops continue very unsatisfactory as regards garden parchment and Kandy native, both of which are reported nearly at an end; accounts of plantation crops appear rather more favourable than they were some time ago, and we hear of several properties forming remarkable exceptions to the general rule of deficient yields. The block on the railway has kept back much of the Kotmalie and Ambagamuwa crops, scarcely any of which has yet come to hand. The weather continues favourable to the progress of the breakwater works, which are now making rapid progress, borings being at the same time taken along the line of the proposed Mutwal arm.—Ceylon Times.

THE HON. MAHARAJAH NARENDRA KRISHNA BAHADUR'S term of office as a member of the Viceregal Legislative Council has expired, and he retires in consequence.

The rate of exchange for overland money orders has been reduced to 1s. 8½d. per rupee.

MR. J. E. OLIPHANT, Magistrate of Puna, has resigned the Bombay Civil Service from the 25th September last.

The amount of cash in the reserve treasury of the Government of India on the 29th November was Rs. 1,08,01,271.

The services of Lieutenant-Colonel C. A. de Kantzow have been placed at the disposal of the Foreign Office.

COLONEL B. T. REID, late Superintendent of Chamba, in the Panjab, has retired under the field officer's retirement scheme.

FROM January 1st to October 17th the total value of the caravans which have passed the Bolan Pass was Rs. 7,10,694, the custom dues Rs. 20,491, and escort fees Rs. 6,724.

An exhibition of fine arts is to be held under the patronage of Sir Richard Temple at the Sir Jamsetjee School of Art in Bombay, in the first or second week of February, to inaugurate the new building for the school.

BRIGADIER-GENERAL TREVOR has taken over the command of the Agra brigade from Major-General Browne.

Miscellaneous.

EXPORT OF SPECIE.—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamer Surat sailed on Thursday for the East with £403,241 in specie. Of this £211,400 was in gold for Alexandria, and the remainder was in silver as follows :—For Bombay, £66,000 ; for Calcutta, £28,000 ; for Hong Kong, £89,931 ; and for Shanghai, £7,910.

BILLS ON INDIA.—At the previous minimum of 1s. 8½d. per rupee, all the weekly India Council drafts were disposed of on Wednesday, by the Bank of England, together with £110,500 unallotted on Wednesday last. The total taken up is, therefore, 37,55,000 rupees (say £375,500), Calcutta receiving £256,800, Bombay £113,300, and Madras £5,400. Tenders on all Presidencies at the above minimum obtain about 74 per cent. of applications. Silver this afternoon was still quoted at 53½d. per oz.

THE NEW INDIAN ORDERS.—Dr. Robert Mair, editor of "Debrett," writes :—"The Orders of the Indian Empire and the Crown of India, which were founded on the 1st inst., are not orders of knighthood, and there will only be one grade in each. The gentlemen who have been nominated Companions of the former will take precedence immediately after the Companions of St. Michael and St. George, and will employ the initials 'C.I.E.' to signify their dignity. The ladies upon whom the second-mentioned decoration has been conferred will neither gain a title nor increased precedence, nor will they use initials to indicate their admission as 'members' of the order."

TROOPS FOR INDIA.—The undermentioned draughts are ordered to be held in readiness to proceed from Aldershot to Portsmouth to embark on board of the troopship Crocodile, for conveyance to India :—Lieutenant Brown, 92nd Highlanders ; Lieutenant Stainsforth, 65th Regiment ; 1 sergeant, 1 drummer, and 100 rank and file of the 72nd Regiment ; Lieutenant Devonport and 20 rank and file of the 83rd Regiment ; Lieutenant Cleaves, Lieutenant McCree, 2 sergeants, 1 trumpeter, and 69 rank and file, 6th Brigade, R.A. ; and Captain Burstow, 72nd Foot, and 31 rank and file, 44th Brigade Depot, have also left Colchester and Warley for embarkation on board the Crocodile.

ARRIVAL OF TROOPS FROM INDIA.—The Indian troopship Malabar, Capt. Kelly, which left Bombay on Dec. 6, and Malta on the 28th, arrived at Portsmouth on the 7th inst. There were two deaths, a man and a child, during the passage. The Malabar brought home the 11th Hussars, consisting of 16 officers and 346 men, who have served eleven years in India ; the B Battery 5th Brigade R.A., consisting of 6 officers and 135 men ; a detachment of the 109th Foot, consisting of 8 officers and 116 men ; 11 invalids, 9 insane persons, 341 time-expired men, 15 men of various details, 70 women, and 178 children, making a total of 1,221 persons. The Hussars have proceeded to Colchester, the Royal Artillery to Woolwich, the 109th Foot to Gosport, and the invalids and time-expired men to Netley.

ROBBERY AT THE INDIA OFFICE.—A strange robbery was effected at the India Office last Tuesday night. The Museum Department, which is situate at the top of the building, was left in its usual state on that evening, and on Wednesday morning it was discovered that the locks of all the desks and drawers belonging to the head of the department (Dr. Forbes Watson) had been broken, and a large number of valuable documents stolen. They were private and official papers, and included several letters from Lord Salisbury to Dr. Forbes Watson. Considerable violence had been used, the instrument employed being apparently a large chisel ; the wooden front of one drawer was entirely broken away, owing to the resistance of the lock.

BURNING OF A SHIP AT SEA.—A telegram received at Lloyd's on Wednesday afternoon from Calcutta states that the City of Hankow, which arrived at Calcutta on the 8th inst., had passed the Glenrich, of Liverpool, on fire and abandoned, on Dec. 11, in lat. 30 S. long. 87 E. The iron ship Glenrich, of Liverpool, sailed from Sunderland for Singapore on Aug. 28 last with 2,444 tons of large coal, valued at £1,222, shipped by Messrs. Lumsden, Byers, and Co. She was quite a new vessel, having only been built last year. She was classed 100 A1, and registered 1,735 tons net, 1,804 gross. The telegram does not state whether there was any appearance of boats about the wreck, but it is very probable the crew have been saved by some passing vessel, and that advices may shortly be received concerning them. When she left Sunderland she was under the command of Captain John Ramsay Gordon, and the following men and boys compose the crew : Alexander McKay, mate ; John D. Wood, second mate ; Louis Weichert, carpenter ; Henry Dougherty, cook ; Carl W. Brown, boatswain. Able-bodied seamen : George Wellington, Alfred Allan, Henry Cornish, Peter Dabersch, Antonio Bokero, John Calagous, George Nicholas, James Higgin, Thomas O'Brian, William Henry Yaurh, George Tipper, John Frauks, Theodore Williams, James Wilson, George Harden, John Fuchs, Charles Davies, John Thomas, James M'Nee, John Collins ; C. A. Hamerton, O.S. ; John Malcolm, steward ; John Haire, Charles Harrison, and James Athey, boys ; Robert Davison, apprentice.

INDIAN FAMINE.—The following letter addressed to the late Lord Mayor has been received at the Mansion House :—

Downing-street, Whitehall, Jan. 3, 1878.

SIR,—Lord Beaconsfield desires me to thank you for your letter of the 1st inst., informing him that the amount contributed to the Indian Famine Fund at the Mansion House has reached half a million sterling. His lordship has great pleasure in hearing of the continued success of the appeal.—I am, Sir, your obedient servant, (Signed) J. F. DALY.

The weekly statement (Dec. 15) of the Executive Committee was received at the Mansion House on Monday last. The Committee report :—"So successful have many of the district committees proved themselves in the judicious distribution of the large funds originally intrusted to them, that, distress still continuing to be very great, further allotments have been made upon occasion being shown for increased aid. The famine is passing away, crops have ripened and are ripening, but the after effects of such terrible scarcity as this presidency has experienced during the past year have been and continue to be very great. The more detailed the inquiries made in famine-stricken regions the more serious was the distress found to be, especially in Trichinopoly. But side by side with records of poignant distress and terrible suffering are to be found particulars of the exceeding great good which the fund has wrought, and the great part it has played in bringing the country back to its normal condition in infusing a new life into the people." The committee also report that the amount sent to the district committees is Rs. 50,93,933, the total sum received from all sources being Rs. 79,00,000 ; also that the increased deaths in Salem, Chingleput, South Arcot, and Bellary numbered 34,992, and the decreased number of births to 4,607.

NAUTICAL INCIDENTS.

The Syrian (str.), Garvie, of and from Glasgow, for Bombay, with iron and machinery, put back to that port on Jan. 1. The master reports that while going down the Clyde, Dec. 29, she grounded at 9.15 p.m. on the Roseneath patch. She did not touch heavily, but slipped along till she brought up; as the tide ebbed she lay over on her starboard side. The owners' tender came to her assistance about 4 a.m. on the 30th, and when the tide made, at 8 a.m., she floated, and next morning returned to Glasgow under her own steam, making about five inches of water per hour in the engine-room, the sea-cock having got started. The vessel went into dock and discharged part of cargo; she is now out again, and reloading.
 The Queen Margaret (str.), for Calcutta, put into Gibraltar on Jan. 5, with machinery damaged.

Spirit of the Home Journals.

THE NEW ORDER FOR LADIES.

The Daily News remarks that in England the new Imperial Order of the Crown of India is already bearing its natural, but at the same time very undesirable, fruits. Already voices, shrill or soft, as the case may be, are heard murmuring at certain inclusions, and still more at certain exclusions from it. The Countess A. cannot understand the admission of Vicountess B., and the wife of General C. is wholly unable to comprehend her own exclusion, seeing that Lady D. E., of all persons in the world, figures in the list. At a moment when the better education of women and the direction of their interests to worthy and elevating thoughts and pursuits occupy the best minds of their own and of many of the other sex, an invitation is given to foolish disputes about claims to distinction and to a frivolous love of decorations. Orders and decorations sometimes serve a useful end. They are a cheap acknowledgment of service. As an indication of approval and confidence, they give weight and authority to the position and statements of our representatives abroad. Seeing that they exist and must be used for some purpose, it is as well that they should be used for this purpose. They are a language which is understood by those to whom it is addressed. As a rule, an Order is respectable from its age and associations. A new Order is like a brand-new ruin, it is an anachronism and a sham, and, unless it have a very special justification, it is an absurdity. The Imperial Order of the Crown of India is likely to be mischievous in addition to being absurd, though absurdity on the part of persons in power is in itself a mischief. It is a further development of the tawdry policy which thinks to rule India by ceremony and finery and sham; and it is a distinct step in the worse education of women in the upper ranks of society. It is a premium offered for the encouragement of the amiable qualities of frivolity, social jealousy, and the love of display.

NOTES ON MUHAMMADANISM.

Second Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

REV. T. P. HUGHES, M.R.A.S.,

C. M. S., Missionary to the Afghans, Peshawar.

Opinions of the Press on the First Edition.

"Altogether an admirable little book. It combines two excellent qualities, abundance of facts and lack of theories. . . . On every one of the numerous heads (over fifty) into which the book is divided Mr. Hughes furnishes a large amount of very valuable information, which it would be exceedingly difficult to collect from even a large library of works on the subject. The book might well be called a 'Dictionary of Muhammadan Theology,' for we know of no English work which combines a methodical arrangement (and consequently facility of reference) with fulness of information in so high a degree as the little volume before us."—The Academy.

"It contains multum in parvo, and is about the best outlines of the tenets of the Muslim faith which we have seen. It has, moreover, the rare merit of being accurate; and although it contains a few passages which we would gladly see expunged, it cannot fail to be useful to all Government employees who have to deal with Muhammadans, whilst to Missionaries it will be invaluable."—The Times of India.

"This small book is the most luminous, most convenient, and, we think, the most accurate, outline of the tenets and practices of Islamism that we have met with. It seems exactly the sort of comprehensive and trustworthy book in small compass, on this subject, that we and many more have often looked for in vain. . . . The author has evidently studied his subject in a faithful, laborious, and scholarly manner, and has not only studied but mastered it. The work is of great value for general students, and for men whose work lies among the Mussulman population, such as Civil Servants and Missionaries, it seems to be the very work that is wanted."—The Friend of India.

"It is manifest throughout the work that we have before us the opinions of one thoroughly conversant with the subject, and who is uttering no random notions. . . . We strongly recommend 'Notes on Muhammadanism.' Our Clergy especially, even though they are not Missionaries, and have no intention of labouring amongst Muhammadans or consorting with them, ought to have at least as much knowledge of the system as can be most readily acquired, with a very little careful study, from this useful treatise."—The Record.

"Its value as a means of correcting the common impressions about Islam will reveal itself to the most cursory reader, while the author's evident scholarship and intimate knowledge of his subject bespeak for him a patient hearing on points the most open to controversy."—Allen's Indian Mail.

"In brief compass it contains a large amount of reliable information. Instead of theories and fancies, facts are placed before us. Muhammadanism is represented as it really is, not as it is supposed that it might possibly be. Instead of retailing the speculations current in literary society at home, Mr. Hughes furnishes us with brief but incisive statements, which, so far as they go, leave nothing to be desired."—The Church Missionary Intelligencer.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered. CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma. CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.
Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manila, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.
CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 18th July, 1864.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 11d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words, "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle.

Summary and Review.

Our latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, December 31; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, December 29; Calcutta, December 28.

THE event of the week in India was the uttering of Sir John Strachey's Financial Statement, the substance of which was telegraphed to this country some weeks ago. The full report of the Statement and of Lord Lytton's ensuing speech, as published in the Indian papers, contains nothing very new. The close, however, of Sir John Strachey's speech is worth quoting:—

I will only further detain the Council to say that if one fact has been more certainly established by experience than another, it is this, that, in carrying out really effectual and satisfactory measures of relief in time of famine, sound principles and good administration are far more important and far more efficient agents than the lavish expenditure of money. It would be easy to show that, during the late famine, the districts in which we find false principles, bad supervision leading to every sort of dishonesty and speculation, and reckless waste of the public funds, are the very places where the extremity of suffering has been reached and lamentable loss of life has occurred. On the other hand, in districts where the failure of the crops was quite as complete, and the difficulty of saving the people from starvation was as great, it has been shown that sound principles and good administration can make wise economy compatible with the most efficient system of relief. It is a truth which cannot be too distinctly recognised by the Government and by the public, that it is not only by the expenditure of money, or by merely material means, by railways, roads, and works of irrigation, that we can protect the people against famine; but that much progress in their social condition and increase of wealth, as well as improvements in the every-day administration of the country, are also conditions which must be fulfilled before complete and permanent protection against famine can be obtained. To fulfil these conditions a thoroughly sound financial position is an essential preliminary, and it is this that we seek to establish.

MR. EDEN spoke at the same meeting of the Council for Bengal, pointing out the need of taxing all classes in his province more or less, in order to raise the £300,000 demanded by the Viceroy towards famine insurance. All things considered, he proposed to levy "a licence-tax, of which the maximum rate should be Rs. 200, that maximum to be only leviable upon joint-stock companies, and a few of the very largest traders and bankers. Substantial traders of a lower class will be taxed at the rate of Rs. 100, Rs. 32, and Rs. 10, while small traders and artisans will pay Rs. 4, Rs. 2, or Rs. 1, according to their means." Calcutta will be taxed according to the system already working there, only that no classes will be exempt from the new levy. For the interior of Bengal Mr. Eden asks leave to pass "a Licence Tax Act, under which the highest rate levied upon a joint-stock company, or any wholesale dealer, will be Rs. 200. The license fee upon other classes will be graduated in a few clear and distinct grades, down to one rupee. The rates, while we hope they will be very productive, will, it is believed, fall very lightly indeed upon any class; and the various grades will be capable of easy classification, without any direct reference to income or any sort of inquisitorial proceeding on the part of assessors."

MR. HOPE then introduced and explained his "Bill to amend the Salt Law," by lowering the duties in some provinces and raising those in others. The Bill first raises the sea import duty throughout Bombay and Madras from one rupee thirteen annas to two rupees eight annas per maund. Section 5 makes the duty on salt imported by land equal to that on salt imported by sea, and Sections 6 and 7 ensure that the excise duties shall also be equal to the import duties, while Sections 8, 9 and 10 complete the new measures, by making the price of salt sold by the Government equal to the sea customs duty plus the cost of manufacture. The last Section of the Bill will enable the Government to re-arrange the graduation of the salt duty down the Orissa coast, so as to shade it off from the Bengal rate to the new Madras rate.

SOME of our readers may remember Mr. Lear's amusing lines beginning "Who, or why, or which, or what, is the Akond of Swat?" This is the mysterious personage whose death has just been telegraphed from India. The Akhund, or "tutor" of Swat, lived in a remote corner of the highlands bordering the Punjab, and wielded among the surrounding Mohammedans a spiritual power akin to that still enjoyed by the Pope of Rome. The fame of his sanctity and his asceticism spread far and wide, and many an outbreak on the Punjab frontier was ascribed, perhaps unjustly, to his instigation. There is more reason to believe that he sometimes dissuaded the frontier tribes from waging war with the English, and it is certain that he caused the expulsion of a colony of Hindu plotters from Swat. He was more than eighty at the time of his death.

THE Pioneer reports a further advance against the Afridis. On the 25th December our troops marched to the next range of hills, through the Pushtoni Pass, in two columns, under Colonel Buchanan and Doran. One Jawaki was killed. An advance was then to be made on Pushtoni via Bori; General Keyes advancing at the same moment via Ghariba. In consequence, however, of heavy rains, these latter operations could not take place before the 29th. It would seem from the latest telegrams that they only took place a few days ago.

It appears that even since Mozima was taken the Angami Nagas have been giving much trouble. They have intercepted and plundered two dakhs, killing two constables; have endeavoured to destroy the road and cut the communications; and are otherwise showing unexpected stubbornness. The expeditionary force had suffered no losses or reverses, but was not considered strong enough, since other villages were proving unfriendly, and seemed disposed to help Mozima;

100 men of the 43rd Regiment had therefore been ordered down from Dibrugarh as a reinforcement.

We are glad to learn that Major Brind, whose death from a serious accident at Simla was mentioned in our last issue, is still alive, and, according to the Pioneer, was doing well when the mail left Allahabad.

A TELEGRAM from London informs the Pioneer that a modification of Lord Lytton's scheme for the separate management of the Frontier tribes has been agreed to by the Secretary of State; and that Major-General Roberts, Quartermaster-General, will probably be the First Commissioner. In that case, according to the Pioneer, few men who could be named combine so many of the special qualifications desirable. On the other hand the present scheme, if finally adopted, will be so unlike that which the Viceroy originally designed, that it could not fairly be called "Lord Lytton's scheme." It is obvious that "a military commissioner, with no civil authority in the border districts, whose duty it will be to manage the tribes through the agency of officers over whom he has no control, can hardly, whatever his merits, prove a valuable servant to the State." The original scheme with all its faults was, at all events, a complete project, with possibilities of success. "It rode roughshod over the sensibilities of the Punjab, but with a definite aim in view. As metamorphosed now, it seems a scheme for humiliating the Punjab, and then stopping short."

COLONEL DUNCAN, the Resident of Mandalay, is coming home to England on two years' furlough, and will be succeeded by Colonel Tweedie, the Governor-General's agent at Murshidabad. Mr. H. M. Durant succeeds Mr. Dawkes as First Grade Political Assistant, and will act as Assistant-Secretary in the Foreign Office.

A RUMOUR was current amongst the medical officers of Madras that instructions had been received at the Surgeon-General's Office to stop all promotion in the Department, and to make no more civil appointments, except provisionally, pending the settlement of a scheme sent home for the reorganisation of the service.

THE Pioneer quotes some telling instances of the hardship involved in a strict enforcement of the Indian Salt laws. The duty of the Indus Salt Department is to prevent contraband salt crossing the Indus—and all salt that comes across without a pass is contraband. "Working on that plain rule, the Indus Salt patrols can never be circumvented. Sometimes a little salt is mixed with rice, to preserve it from insects. When such rice attempts to impose on the patrol at Attok, he sifts it, and if he finds, say half a seer of salt in a load, has the rice confiscated, and the carrier fined." Again, a good deal of salt is necessarily used in curing hides. In trans-Indus territory the duty is only two annas per maund, while cis-Indus consumers pay three rupees, so it is best to get hides cured on the other side of the river. "It is related that a certain energetic patrol, turning this over in his mind, conceived that he was being imposed upon. He pounced on a parcel of prepared hides, soaked them in water, obtained salt from the liquor by evaporation, and sent the case to the magistrate. The magistrate is said to have convicted the hide merchant, but one can hardly believe that. One more instance, and our readers must acknowledge that the officers of her Majesty's Inland Customs Department are wonderful men. Not long ago a frontier mess imported some hams in canvas bags. The patrol smelt them, and detected a briny odour. With the promptitude in action characteristic of great minds, he ripped the bags open, and found, as he had suspected, that the hams had been packed in salt. Did he seize the hams? Not at all. He merely seized the salt, and sent forward the hams carefully cleaned. That they turned bad before they reached their destination was of course an accident which the Customs agent could not control, and a proper penalty for the daring attempt of their owners to smuggle salt."

THE Englishman has lately commented on the case of Mr. E. C. Churcher, who went out into Etah in the time of the Mutiny, when the whole country was in a blaze of insurrection, pacified the district single-handed, and restored the people to their allegiance. In the opinion of the Pioneer, the case is one of ingratitude on the part of the Government "so black that one can scarcely believe in its reality." The same journal adds its testimony to the justice of the Englishman's protest. "Mr. Churcher is a simple-minded and not a needy man, who, in the beginning, did the duty before him in no calculating spirit, and for a long time afterwards made no fuss about his claims, and this accounts for the way he fell out of notice while Mutiny service rewards were being eagerly given about. Later on, when it occurred to him that he had been badly treated, Government had grown tired of Mutiny heroes, and that is the whole story of the case—barring one faulty link in the chain of Mr. Churcher's testimonials. It would weary the reader to go into this detail, but the truth is that the one ungenerous letter that appears in the series of reports about Mr. Churcher's achievements did him a most unmerited wrong. Sir William Muir, who knew all the circumstances, was fully aware of this, and would no doubt bear testimony to that effect, if there is any chance that Government may be persuaded to review the claim." It is not yet too late, we trust, to repair the oversight to which attention has thus been called.

DURING his recent visit to the capital of Kachh Sir R. Temple congratulated the young Rao on the progress he had made in his English studies at so early an age, namely, about thirteen years. He also dwelt on the need of developing the isolated province of Kachh by means of railways, telegraphs, and maritime communications. He was particularly happy to see that the improvement of the harbour of Mandvi, the chief sea-port of Kachh, was being secured by the construction of the Albert Edward Breakwater—a work which will enable the province to maintain its old connections by sea with Persia, Arabia, and the African coast. Sir Richard's reference to the relations subsisting between the Rao and his Bhayads was specially significant. As Sovereign of Kachh the Rao has to defend the whole country, to carry on its entire administration, to keep the peace, and promote the general well-being. But as things stand half the revenues of the State are divided amongst his "Bhayads," who have no share in the general expenses of the country. This seems to be unfair. It is admitted that the British guarantee to these Bhayads, of which so much was made by Colonel Shortt, when Political Agent in Kachh, sought to protect them in their lands and possessions; but as the Governor of Bombay well observed, in according that guarantee the Government expected them to do their duty towards the Darbar, and to fulfil the obligations attached to their tenures. It has been found that some of the Bhayads have been invested with civil and criminal jurisdiction, which they are unfit to exercise. The evil arose from basing this authority chiefly on their possessions and not on their intelligence or education. Sir Richard Temple reminded them that the continuance of their present civil and criminal functions will depend on the amount of intelligence and industry they show in their exercise, for his Excellency "cannot promise that jurisdiction will be confirmed to those who are not qualified by their education and ability to personally exercise." He assured them at the same time that "if the Bhayads duly fulfil the duties and responsibilities which I have just enumerated, the British Government will be always glad to see the Gadi of his Highness the Rao surrounded by a body of his own kinsmen, who, by their position, intelligence, and experience will, from generation to generation, support the administration of the country."

THE Pioneer points out the mistakes made by the London Spectator in the parallel it tried to draw between ordinary convict prisons and the Thug cantonment at Jabalpur. It is true that the Thugs are murderers, but the village and manufactory in which they dwell is by no means a prison in the ordinary sense of the word, nor do the Thugs answer in any way to common British ruffians. The School of Industry, as it is called, "is a large open courtyard full of beautiful trees, and surrounded by workshops. Opposite the school is a large village, in which the wives and families of the gentle though erst bloody Thugs reside, for the comfort of their lords. The worthy Thugs spend their days in carpet-making—their carpets being eagerly bought up by London houses, and sold as Persian and Turkish, at large prices,—in tent-manufacture, carpentry, and other trades." They are under little restraint, and lack none of the comforts befitting men of their class. Those who are approvers, under life sentences, are lodged for the night in the Central Prison. "But even there they are treated as guests rather than prisoners. They have a snug barrack, with a pretty green lawn round it, a kitchen where they cook their own dinners at their pleasure, and conclude them with the enjoyment of a soothing pipe. They have as much occasion to run away or resist the authority of the benevolent old officer who has charge of their welfare as any respectable people who may be found in the enjoyment of plenty to get, and nothing or little to do." Some of our readers will be rather surprised to learn from the Pioneer that when the Prince of Wales visited Jabalpur, "some of the most accomplished stranglers were summoned by his desire, and mimic murders performed, according to the most scientific method, in the august presence." Perhaps the Pioneer has been misinformed.

ACCORDING to the Times telegram of January 13, reports from Madras show progressive improvement in the famine districts. The number in receipt of gratuitous relief has been reduced to 233,342. The general harvest prospects are described as fair. The reports from Mysor are not quite so satisfactory; prices are slightly easier, but the outcome of the harvest has somewhat disappointed expectations. The number in receipt of gratuitous relief shows, however, a further reduction of 1,720, the total number being 14,943.

THE same informant states that both our little frontier wars have come to a standstill from the difficulty of discovering a tangible enemy. The Jawaki expeditions have "assumed almost a comical phase," as the Jawakis, having deserted their territory en masse, have left our two splendidly equipped frontier forces in undisputed possession, without an enemy to encounter. "This unconscious stroke of masterly diplomacy has completely upset all the previously concerted plans. It is difficult to forecast what new turn the Government policy will consequently be compelled to take." The Nagas, for their part, are said to be as defiant as ever, and to have offered a reward of 500 rupees for every Englishman's head.

FROM the same source we quote the following items:—

The Pioneer states that as a consequence of the apprehension of famine in the North-West a complete scheme for a provincial network of cheap railways has been devised, which, though within the scope of the famine relief works, is also in its entirety a grand provincial project. On the map a series of lines is delineated, which, when complete, will not only increase enormously the circulation of the railway traffic through the Province, but will form a narrow-gauge system so linked together that the rolling-stock of the whole system will be available for concentration wherever special requirements may occur. If this be effectually carried out and similar systems be constructed in the other Provinces of India, the famine will have proved, instead of a calamity, an incalculable boon.

It cannot be too often repeated that the latent resources of India are almost boundless, and only await a stimulus of capital and facility of carriage to develop into infinite and active health. No better illustrations can be afforded than the recent wonderful developments of the jute and tea industries. If the various local Governments will open up cheap carriage ways and insist upon the due protection of the interests of English capitalists, there is no reason why India should not prove as attractive a market for European investment as any country in the world.

The total value of merchandise imported into British India for the first eight months is Rs. 269,174,043, as compared with Rs. 238,808,992 for the same period last year. The exports are valued at Rs. 402,933,184, against 379,702,106. The treasure imported amounted to Rs. 129,666,523, against 65,314,450; while that exported was Rs. 17,507,817, against 33,132,449. The import duty was Rs. 29,893,326, against 28,240,270. The export was Rs. 2,343,267, against Rs. 2,758,950 for the corresponding period last year.

THE only matter for regret in the foregoing extracts is the alleged extension of the narrow gauge system. It has been shown again and again that the metre gauge is unsuited to the bulk of Indian traffic, and that light lines on the standard gauge can be made and maintained as cheaply as narrow-gauge ones; while the nuisance involved in a break of gauge is more likely to increase than diminish with the growth of traffic.

A CALCUTTA telegram of Jan. 16 states that, in that day's sitting of the Viceroy's Council, Sir Andrew Clarke stated the policy of the Indian Government respecting public works, and especially with reference to the famine. He adverted to the causes of the famine, and discussed the question of the food supply, contending that in the worst famines India was able to feed herself. Proceeding to treat of the extension of the canal system, Sir Andrew Clarke pointed out the difficulties connected with the subject arising from the limited and uncertain nature of the sources of supply, the social condition of the people, and the opposition met with from them. He explained the results of past schemes, and showed that the cost of extending them to the whole of India would, according to the various plans proposed, be from £200,000,000 to £700,000,000 sterling. £24,000,000 had already been spent on a system of irrigation supplying 14,000 square miles, or a cost of under £3 per acre. The Government, Sir Andrew continued, promised to continue irrigation wherever useful, and he believed that the practical course was to provide means by sending the surplus from one part to meet the deficiency in others. The land communications were the great mainstay during the recent famine, and always showed that the railway system in India was profitable, and must continue to expand. Sir Andrew Clarke described what the railways did in 1877 in saving Southern India both from a grain and grass famine. Alluding to the Railway Conventions, he explained the action of the Government in restricting the preference for food traffic until it became necessary. He deprecated interference by the State in traffic or trade, and commented upon the assertion that the alignment of the railways was being dictated by military ideas and showed that their usefulness for the army meant greater usefulness in famine relief. Sir Andrew Clarke considered that the railways had already saved the country £30,000,000. Noticing, in conclusion, the more immediate proposals, he urged that a review of the past, instead of profuse promises for the future, would convince all that the Government were now earnestly dealing with the famine question.

A CALCUTTA telegram of yesterday's date tells us that the Jawakis have retired into the mountains before the advance of the British troops.

AMONG the new books which demand our notice is a little volume compiled by Mr. Wollaston, translator of the "Anwar-i-Suhaili," and published by Messrs. Allen, of Waterloo-place. The "Elementary Indian Reader" is a well-chosen collection of maxims, anecdotes, and longer tales, designed mainly for the use of students in the Anglo-Vernacular Schools of India. In the compass of 182 pages Mr. Wollaston gives some 150 choice extracts, from a maxim of two lines to Hans Andersen's "Little Daisy" of nearly five pages, and an eight-page story from "Old Deccan Days." Some of the extracts are English translations from Persian originals, which will, doubtless, have a special charm for their Oriental readers, and care has been taken to avoid that excess of idiomatic phrases which makes most books of the kind such hard reading for young Indian scholars. In a few instances the idioms themselves have been replaced by simpler words or expressions. The compiler has fairly succeeded, we think, in combining amusement with instruction, and a good many readers in this country as well as in India might reap some profit from the result of his labours.

LORD NAPIER OF ETTRICK has taken up the challenge offered by the redoubtable Lord Lawrence. But the two are ill-matched on this occasion. Lord Napier's letter to the Times is a fair measure of the weakness of the cause it strives to justify. It implies in fact that having gone to Quetta for some inscrutable purpose, we are bound to stay there for fear of the difficulties involved in retreat from ground once held. "Vestigia nulla retrorsum"—especially while Russia keeps going ahead. Russia must remember that Central Asia claims "a divided dominion," of which her share excludes Afghanistan. We have no wish to annex the latter country, but Russia must take care to respect the Afghan frontier, and we ought to let her know clearly the lengths to which we are prepared to go in support of our Afghan neighbour. Instead of being angry with us for occupying Quetta, the Afghans ought rather to thank us for coming forward to shield them from the dangers of Russian ambition, and to lead them into the paths of civilised improvement. If Bokhara and Khiva have been "subdued to peaceful influences," may we not hope for equally good results from our benign efforts to civilise the barbarous Afghans? Their savage independence will surely melt away "under the contact of superior wealth and power." A strong and friendly Afghanistan would be India's best barrier against foreign invasion, whereas our retirement within our own frontiers would surely send the princes and people of Central Asia "with one accord to the feet of Russia." About the military expediency of holding outposts like Quettah, Lord Napier declines to argue with Lord Lawrence, but he does not see why the destinies of India should be risked on a single line of defence, and he thinks that we are equitably bound to defend Baluchistan and Afghanistan by "English mediation, if not by English arms." In pursuance of this policy first started by Lord Mayo, we have come to a friendly agreement with the Khan of Khelat, and Quettah has been occupied as "a guarantee for the transit between Khelat and India by the Bolan Pass." In this Utopian fashion reasons the sometime Governor of Madras. Unluckily fancy plays a more prominent part in his reasoning than fact. We are not yet landed in the Millennium. Will Lord Napier deny that, by our armed advance to Quettah, we have estranged Sher Ali at an awkward moment, thus undoing the work of many years; to say nought of the folly of planting a small British post at the wrong end of the Bolan Pass, nearly eighty miles beyond Jacobabad? Lord Napier assumes that we shall go no further, but it is perfectly certain that our Afghan friends regard the movement as a step towards Kandahar. To talk of conciliating the Afghans by a measure which, rightly or wrongly, they deem hostile, must sound like utter mockery to students of Afghan character and history. The Ethiopian may be expected to change his skin before the Afghans lose their love of "savage independence" and pugnacious freedom. To provoke their ill-will is hardly the way to strengthen our Indian frontier. Nor is it unlikely that Quettah may some day tempt the wild Baluchis into acts of sudden, if not dangerous hostility. There is not, in short, one shred of sound reason for holding Quettah, unless it be the possible danger of retracing our steps. Our correspondent "T." however disposes curtly even of this exception.

THE following reference to the late famine occurs in the Queen's message:—

I am thankful that the terrible famine which has ravaged Southern India is nearly at an end. Strenuous and successful exertions have been made by my local Governments to relieve the sufferings of the population, and in that duty they have been powerfully seconded by the liberal aid of my people at home and in my colonies. I have directed that an inquiry should be made into the measures most proper to diminish the danger of such calamities for the future.

The last sentence hardly seems to refer to Lord G. Hamilton's notice of his intention to move for the appointment of a Select Committee "to inquire as to and to report upon the expediency of constructing public works in India with money raised on loan." Mr. Fawcett, for one, is not content with this notice, for he purposes to move that the committee should "also inquire into the best means of preventing or mitigating famines in India; and further, whether by greater economy in the military and other charges under the control of the Home authorities a fund might not be provided which would render it unnecessary to impose on the people of India a taxation so burdensome as that involved in the contemplated increase of the salt duty." On the fiscal side of the question he seems to be supported by Sir G. Campbell, who has promised on the 25th to "call attention to the taxation of India."

A RUSSIAN LADY'S DEFENCE OF RUSSIAN POLICY.

THE events of the past fortnight must have gone far to dispel the fears at first aroused among us by the announcement of a Parliamentary session to be held some weeks before the usual time. The numerous public meetings in this country, the resolutions of all the great Chambers of Commerce, Lord Carnarvon's reply to the South African Deputation, and the overtures which Turkey has made to Russia at the advice of our Foreign Minister, have had their due effect in soothing the public mind, and producing a marked change in the language of those journals which have so long done their worst to inflame the popular feeling against the Power which took upon itself the task of enforcing the public policy of all Europe against the Turks. That the war party had its supporters in the Cabinet is by no means unlikely; but it has always seemed to us a question whether people are justified in regarding Lord Beaconsfield as an active member of that party. There is such a thing as "speaking to bunkum," and the mystery which surrounds the Prime Minister's real views may in part be explained by a desire to stand well with certain classes of his countrymen. If his own utterances have pleased the gallery and the stalls, those of his leading colleagues may be taken to interpret the drift of his more serious thoughts. The frequent Cabinet meetings which caused so much anxiety or hope in different minds were duly attended by Lord Salisbury, Lord Derby, Lord Carnarvon, and Sir S. Northcote. While such men remain in the Ministry, we may sleep securely in the belief that no rash attempt to embroil England with Russia on behalf of Turkey or of the road to India will be sanctioned by the official guardians of England's destinies. The Queen's Message to Parliament on Thursday last, as interpreted by Sir Stafford Northcote, gives further assurance to the same effect. Meanwhile the popular jealousy and mistrust of Russia are facts which must not be overlooked, for the very reason that they are founded mainly on prejudice and misconception. If we knew her better and viewed her from other standpoints than that of our own insular self-complacency, we should learn to judge her more fairly. Our ignorance and our absurd pharisaism conspire to blind us to many things which might be pleaded in defence or palliation of our Northern rival. Let us put ourselves, for instance, in the place of "O. K.," the Russian lady whose letters on behalf of her countrymen have just been published with a preface by Mr. Froude.* The writer, according to her English sponsor, is well acquainted with England, and has "seen with regret the misconceptions which she considers prevail among us as to the character of her countrymen." She certainly gives us in excellent English a number of fair reasons for refusing to interfere in the present war. The Russian enthusiasm against the Turks she likens, with good faith and probable justice, to the spirit of the English people in the days when Sir Philip Sydney went forth to fight the Spaniard in the Low Countries, and Sir Francis Drake swept the Spanish Main. The Slav Committees of whom in 1876 we heard so much that was obviously mythical, were neither secret societies, nor have they ever sought to raise their countrymen against the Czar. They did not even bring about the insurrection in Herzegovina which ultimately led to the present struggle, whatever they may since have done to aid their "brethren in race and in religion," the Rayahs of Northern Turkey. "O. K." bears out Lord Salisbury's statement that the Russian people threw themselves heart and soul into war for the deliverance of the Southern Slavs. It was Moscow, not St. Petersburg, which really expressed the popular feeling, and enabled the Czar to redeem his pledge of the previous autumn. The heavy sacrifices which Russia has already made in men and money are adduced to prove the disinterested nature of her present aims. Nothing that Turkey can offer her in the way of indemnity can really compensate her for the losses entailed by war. In Europe, even if she wanted it, she can gain no increase of territory for herself. With regard to Armenia, it may be necessary for the protection of the Armenians to annex some part of the country. The Russian hatred of the Turks is explained, says "O. K.," by the remembrance of those dark centuries, from the thirteenth to the sixteenth, when Russia groaned under the Tartar yoke; and Moscow "twice suffered the fate of Batak." In other letters the writer shows how much of the English prejudice against her country rests on grounds no longer tenable, in view of the growth of a powerful Germany, and of the great reforms which have marked the Government of the reigning Czar. Why, then, should England hark back to the obsolete traditions of the Crimean War? With regard to Central Asia again, why should the conquerors of India begrudge the Russians the unremunerative task of maintaining order among the savage Turkomans? "India is yours, and improved by your rule. May it remain yours for ever! But the happy possessors of that magnificent Empire should not reproach us for our poor Tartar steppes." In Central Asia, too, "Russia suppresses the slave-trade as you do on the African coast." Englishmen talk of Russia's broken promises in respect to Khiva, although the Khan "reigns in all his glory in Khiva at this hour." The Russians have not opened the markets of Central Asia to the manufactures of all the world; but, asks the writer, "were you free-traders when you first conquered India?" Such are the arguments urged by a patriotic Russian lady in defence of her countrymen against the aspersions of their numerous ill-wishers. That they are all equally sound and pertinent we are not prepared to show; but the good faith with which she urges them, and her own knowledge of the facts on which they chiefly rest admit of no question. Let us hope at any rate that her well-meant appeal to our common-sense and love of justice will not be lost on all whose minds have not been hopelessly smothered with stale cant about British interests, Russian treachery, and the road to India.

QUETTAH.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I beg to invite your attention to a letter from Lord Napier and Ettrick, published in the Times of yesterday. That nobleman writes: "But whatever the resolutions of our Government may be on the subject, I cannot recognise the wisdom of making those resolutions public."

Secrecy is the hope of a weak Government which has plunged into difficulties, and hopes that the chapter of accidents may extricate it.

The British Parliament and the British public have refused to sanction secrecy with reference to the affairs of our North-West Frontier in India. I have before me two huge Blue-books, containing 893 folio pages of printed matter, relating to the affairs of Kelat, a fifth-rate Power. These were published by order of Parliament last year, and can be purchased by anyone for a few shillings.

To digest this mass of information has caused some trouble. It appears that the Chief Frontier Officer did not understand the character and policy of the great Murree tribe, and mismanaged the Koords and the Brahooses; that he mistook the word federal for feudal; and that he got all the affairs of the province of Beloochistan into such a mess that he was compelled to ask for a British military force to re-establish order. This the secret Government of India was not inclined to give, but supported another officer subordinate to him in initiating a new policy. The astonishment of the Belooches, Brahooses, and Murrees must have been great on finding a subordinate officer defying the peremptory commands of his English superior.

Such is the result of injudicious secrecy.

Let us inquire for a minute what can possibly be the use of secrecy in the narrative of the quarrel between Lord Lytton and the Afghan nation; it is the common talk of the market-places in Northern India. It has already done us incalculable mischief. Lord Napier and Ettrick indicates this by his question—"Suppose that her Majesty's Government was moved to order the evacuation of Kelat and Quettah to-morrow. If they withdrew the British flag behind the mountains where Lord Lawrence desires to plant it, how would this retrogression be interpreted by the Belooches and the Afghans?" Which means, if you have got your hand into a hornet's nest, you must not pull it out.

But we did pull it out in the first Afghan war. We effected a wise retrograde move by a change of Ministry at home. Now I should be exceedingly sorry to see Lord Derby and Sir Stafford Northcote resign their seats in the Cabinet. Either of those statesmen would govern India with rare judgment. On the 17th of August last I quoted a portion of Sir Stafford Northcote's admirable speech, in which he instructed us how India should be governed. Lord Derby, nearly thirty years ago, travelled through the northern part of India, and acquired a great deal of valuable information. Sir H. Rawlinson, in page 351 of his "England and Russia in the East," has quoted the following from Lord Derby's speech on the 8th of May, 1874:—

To maintain the integrity and territorial independence of Afghanistan is in our judgment a most important object of English feeling; and any interference with the national independence of Afghanistan would be regarded by her Majesty's Government as a very grave matter, requiring their most careful and serious consideration; and is one which might involve serious danger to the peace of India.

Throughout the 893 pages of the Blue-books on Beloochistan there is not one word to justify our establishing a British military force at Quettah. Major Raverty, in page 289 of the Geographical Magazine for November last, has shown that the valley of Shawl is not Belooche but Afghan. To occupy Quettah while the Afghans were friendly to us was indiscreet, and could only result in encouraging and supporting the party in Kabul hostile to a British alliance. To continue to occupy Quettah when the Afghans are exasperated against us is to hold a false position.

What is Quettah? A heap of stones, as Major Raverty informs us. To the north are the Afghans; to the east are the Kakurs, who are said by Dr. Bellew to regard neither God nor devil; to the west is a desert; to the south is the unhappy plain destitute of water.

Major Sandeman can inform Lord Lytton that the occupation of Quettah by British soldiers, contrary to the wishes of the Afghans, in no way facilitates trade, either through the Bolan and Moolha Passes, or through Kelat. No trade can be carried on with Central Asia without the permission of the Afghans; all caravans destined for Central Asia must stay at Quettah, the heap of stones, till the Afghans permit their progress northward; no caravans from the north can reach the heap of stones without the permission of the Afghans.

Lord Napier and Ettrick refuses to discuss the military question. All I ask is, that the three best military officers we have should be consulted, Lord Napier of Magdala, Sir Garnet Wolseley, and Sir Neville Chamberlain; the latter has had great experience in Afghan warfare, and can give Government much curious information (which has not been kept secret) regarding the campaign in the Umbeyla Pass in 1863.

It is madness for civilians ignorant of war to take up a false military position, which may cause ruin to 240 millions of the human race.—Your obedient servant,

T.
Jan. 16.

LESSONS OF THE FAMINE.

The Pioneer holds that the Government possesses (at all events in Southern India) an elaborate machinery, under which the occupier of every acre of land is brought into direct communication with the revenue authorities. The system which records in detail the occupant, and the assessment of each acre of the land of each village, has within itself the machinery for recording the position of the inhabitants of each village; so many infirm, so many dependent on daily wages, so many partially labourers, partially cultivators, so many cultivators of means. Similarly with stocks of grain. Does any one believe that the village headmen are not aware what grain the wealthier ryots of the village have stored in their pits, or that such stores could not be approximately ascertained and recorded, were Government to insist upon the information being provided? We affirm that the Government possesses all the necessary machinery for ascertaining and tabulating the position of the people, so as to estimate at any time how many souls a failure of crops would throw upon Government relief, and what grain must be imported for their subsistence. It is the duty of the Government to employ that machinery, and to be always prepared for a failure of rain, and consequent distress among its poorer subjects; and should that duty be neglected, we may look to see the sad history of the last twelve months repeated at every period of scanty rainfall. Instead of being furnished with a careful diagnosis of the requirements of the country, such as we have suggested above, the merchants have been led to infer that a majority of the twenty-three millions inhabiting the "famine districts" would require imported grain; and it has been more than once hinted that, owing to transfer difficulties, it would not be possible to supply the markets of the interior sufficiently. The trade has been urged throughout to import, and to continue importing, to the fullest extent of its resources. The result has been a constant fluctuation and uncertainty of prices. In November 1876 prices in Madras were about Rs. 8-8 per bag for the ordinary qualities; by the beginning of January they had risen to Rs. 10-4. From that point they steadily declined (owing to excessive imports), until early in March they had touched Rs. 7, a fall of 30 per cent. They then rose gradually, as stocks decreased, through April, May and June, until early in July the fall had been recovered. They then continued to rise, until by the end of August they had touched Rs. 11-4, a rise of over 60 per cent. from the lowest price of March. They again declined in September, and suddenly, owing to large imports and failure of demand, collapsed in October to Rs. 6-8; a fall of about 45 per cent. in two months. Now all this was mainly to the disadvantage of the consumer and the State. The range of prices has for much of the last year been unnecessarily high, and much extra suffering has been caused to the poorer classes. Prices in Bengal, the great source of Madras supply, have as a rule followed the Madras market. As prices rose in the south, a dearth of grain was declared to exist in Bengal, and rates advanced rapidly; as prices declined in the south, an abundance of grain, at much lower prices, was at once offered in Calcutta. Had the requirements been accurately declared, the course of the market, instead of the convulsive fluctuations of the last twelve months, would have shown a steady and even flow of grain from the north to the south, at such rates as would have left a fair margin for trade profit, at the minimum hardship to the consumer which the failure of local crops would permit. No private trade can work with permanent advantage, or with any confidence, when exposed, by insufficient or incorrect data, to such startling vicissitudes of market; and the lesson of the past twelve months, however it may be dealt with by Government, will long be remembered by merchants. Unless the Government, in future cases of famine, can give accurate statistics of requirements, the "private trade" will be very chary of ascertaining what the actual requirements are, by practical experiments at merchants' risk. In the Bengal famine the Government suffered from incorrect estimates of requirements of grain. In the Madras famine the merchants have been misled in a similar way. In the next famine it may perhaps be the unfortunate consumer who will pay the penalty. But the experience of the past should be the gain of the future. If the lessons of the Bengal and the Madras famines are properly taken to heart, the next failure of the food-supply will find India forewarned and forearmed.

NATIVE EDUCATION.

The Englishman thinks there can be no doubt that the tendency of our educational system in India has been to teach the great majority of those affected by it to despise and abandon their own proper work, and so far to disorganise society. The mischief has not, indeed, yet gone so far as to cause any serious mischief to society in consequence of necessary work being neglected. It has gone far enough, however, to give rise to another evil of very serious dimensions and character, for it has produced a vast crowd of candidates for a very few places, who, as long as their ambition is not gratified, are content to live a life of idle expectancy, feeding, the meantime, on their more honest neighbours. This, as Lord Lytton pointed out at the Martiniere, and not the faithful fulfilment of a humble position, is real dishonour. Besides these ignoble spongers upon society, the tillers of the fields are gentlemen. As long as the bent of the native mind is what it is, and as long as the social institutions of the country secure the idle relation against the natural penalties of his folly and sloth, no amount of preaching, from however exalted a quarter it comes, will cure this monstrous evil, this fast-spreading rot, which has laid hold upon Bengali society. Action is needed, and the direction which action should take is very clearly indicated in Lord Lytton's speech. First, the Government must cease to tempt natives out of their proper spheres by bribing them. It is true we have rendered high education peculiarly almost valueless by unduly cheapening the road to it; but it is none the less necessary that we should now straiten the road by exacting from those who wish to travel by it the entire cost of maintaining it. But the Government may do more than this, by making the education it offers more practical. The mischief that must, in any case, have resulted from the conditions on which education has been offered the people, has been intensified by the character of the instruction given. Instead of endeavouring to counteract the natural bent of the native mind towards the abstract and theoretical, by a plentiful infusion of the concrete and practical into its course, the Department of Public Instruction has actually fostered this tendency, as if it were a good to be developed rather than an evil to be repressed.

The Indian Daily News remarks that Lord Lytton is always happy in his speeches; but it seems to us that his address at the Martiniere was a particularly well-chosen and well-timed protest against some heresies born of our educational system, that have been doing a good deal of mischief in India of late years. We yield to none in admiration of high education and culture; we hold that the true scholar follows after education for the love of it, and not for greed of material reward; and we would fain see more scholars. But it is obvious that—as the world is ordered at present, at any rate—everybody cannot expect to secure the aids and opportunities necessary to scholarship and culture; and it would be manifestly inconvenient if everybody in the world desired to be scholarly; or rather we should say, perhaps, if everybody adopted the silly modern notion of the obligations of "book learning," and felt ashamed to dig, to drive an engine, or to commit themselves to any of the many useful avocations in life, so stupidly held to be unworthy of a man who has acquired dexterity in the construction of pot-hooks and hangers, and some more or less mechanical acquaintance with letters. It was more particularly against this prevalent prejudice that Lord Lytton took occasion to protest. As he pointed out, university degrees are not an absolute title to wealth and social advancement. A man's education really begins when he leaves the school or the college at which he has got hold of the groundwork necessary to build upon; and fitness commends itself more to men who do the world's work than abstract collegiate distinctions. It is possible for every man in the world, probably, to do some good work, if he would but forget himself, and concentrate his energies upon the work for which he is competent; but it is not possible for everybody to be a distinguished civil servant, an eminent lawyer, or a secretary to something. Or to put it in the Viceroy's words, to the pupils of the Martiniere College—"Never be ashamed of that condition in life to which it has pleased God to call you. Believe me it is not social position, but personal character, that makes a gentleman or a gentlewoman. For my part, I respect the peasant or the artisan who, owing nothing to any man but a manly deference, maintains himself and family, in the sweat of his brow, by the toil of his honest hand; and him I call a gentleman. I respect the cheerful, brisk, and thrifty housewife whose bright soul beautifies the humblest home; and her I call a gentlewoman. I do not respect the pushing, vulgar, would-be fine lady, who prides herself on the dresses she cannot afford, and the acquaintances who despise her. I do not respect the needy, venomous purchasescribbler whose envious pen can only propagate folly and slander, though it may have been trained to prate of philosophy and virtue. Those persons who foolishly aspire to be something more than gentlemen or gentlewomen are not even honest men and women. They are an encumbrance to themselves, and a nuisance to everybody else." Let us hope that those most interested in the matter will take heed to it. Meanwhile, we welcome Lord Lytton's speech. The worthiness of all honest labour, the dignity of independence, and a just contempt for shams and snobishness, are beyond doubt the lessons the boys and girls of the Martiniere (in common with many other people in India) stand most in need of nowadays.

THE JAWAKI CAMPAIGN.

CAMP SHINDA, Dec. 11.—Meanwhile our friends the Jawakis, though their cattle are said to be dying by hundreds up in the mountains, show no signs of giving in; and it becomes evident that something more than what the Pall Mall Gazette aptly calls "the mild influence of upright English gentlemen" will yet be required to bring them to their senses. The main range in front of us, lying between us and Bori, is lighted up every night with a long line of camp fires; and all of us here in camp hope that before long the General will take us up there, and let us drive them from their last stronghold.

A deputation of Jawakis, lately sent to the Akhoond of Swat to ask for his countenance and priestly benediction, is said to have been answered with a curse instead of a blessing, the Akhoond telling them that, having killed so many of their co-religionists in their late raids on British territory, they were in reality nothing but kaffirs, and deserved not the good wishes, but the reprobation, of all true Mussulmans. It is stated that to this cause they attribute the ill-success of their present enterprise.

Although I by no means look on all Jawakis as "pizen," I confess I should like to see them dealt with a little more sternly. When we come to a field of young green corn we are enjoined not to go across it, but to walk round it; and even when a village has to be burnt, the torch of destruction is applied with discrimination—no house being allowed to be fired until the misdeeds of its owner have been carefully weighed and balanced, and found deserving of punishment. It would be idle to suppose that this scrupulous regard for their feelings has the slightest effect on our enemies. Everyone who is familiar with Pathans knows that they only think us all the more fools for our pains. Still virtue is its own reward, and our finer sensibilities may derive some hazy sort of satisfaction in reflecting that the campaign is being carried out on principles of the most advanced humanitarianism. A rougher, but perhaps more healthy, type of philanthropy is shown by our sepoy. They look on the Jawakis simply as a band of troublesome bandits, who are great asses to try and fight the "Sircar;" but no pity is mingled with their contempt. Whenever they come across an armed Jawaki, they do their very best to kill him, without troubling their heads as to what his particular disposition may be towards the British Government; but throughout the campaign nothing has struck me more than the kindly way in which they invariably treat the women and children. The day we took Jammu, besides a bevy of blue-draped damsels, we captured a whole nursery full of children, and on several other occasions we have come across isolated cases of unprotected females; but from the time we entered their hills up till now, not a single case of maltreatment or outrage has occurred, as far as I know, of any sort or description.

One unfortunate old woman—evidently belonging to that class of old ladies who in London are always getting run over by omnibuses—was accidentally shot at Jammu by a stray bullet. It was a pure mischance, however; and considering the hundreds of women that were moving about the villages in front of our skirmishers, it seems to me a matter for congratulation that only one was knocked over, and she an old one. Crossing the brook that morning in front of the principal village, Supparah, I came upon a little Jawaki maiden about four years old, standing in the middle of the water, and crying as if her heart would break; and with the bullets whistling all round her, and crowds of excited soldiery hurrying past her, no wonder she found her situation a little bewildering. Suddenly, however, a stalwart young Sikh stepped out of the ranks just in front of me, and lifting her up in his arms, carried her up to the high bank above. Placing her there under a sheltered rock safe from all harm, he opened his havresack, and pouring into the place where she ought to have had her pinafore, a whole pileful of native sweetmeats, he gave her a parting pat on the head, and hurried on to join his company. Passing back that way, a couple of hours later, I picked her up, and had her carried off to the "nursery," whence, shortly afterwards, I had the satisfaction of seeing her safe up the hill-side, and made over to her own people.—Pioneer Correspondent.

A telegram dated Kohat, Dec. 25, says, that the Lieutenant-Governor and staff visited the positions in the Jowaki country yesterday, and returned in the evening safely to cantonments.

A telegram from the Bori force at Shergassa, dated Dec. 23, states that there was slight firing during the night of the 22nd at the picquets on the Ridge. The telegraph wire was cut between Fort Makeson and camp. Three hundred yards of wire were removed by the perpetrators, who are at present unknown. The rainy weather had recommenced; the reconnaissance consequently was delayed.

A telegram from Kohat, dated Dec. 23, states that messengers arrived on the 22nd and 23rd from the Jowakis, reiterating the former, and requests that some chief should be allowed to go and bring their Jirga into camp. They were informed that this was impossible, and that no further messengers will be received unless accompanied by a deputation.

A telegram of date Dec. 25 from General Ross states:—"The Bori force made a reconnaissance from Bori to Kohat above Pastaoni without opposition. The force bivouacs on the 26th at Bori, and on Thursday morning proceeds to Pastaoni, in co-operation with General Keys."

STATION TALK.

CALCUTTA, Dec. 17.—Lord Lytton is always outspoken on public questions which admit of his taking the public into his confidence, and he is especially so where education is concerned; so that when it was understood he would preside at the distribution of prizes at La Martinière and at St. Xavier's College, both occasions became objects of interest. After the prizes had been given the Viceroy spoke at both places, and all teachers in India would do well to impress the truth of what he said upon their pupils, and to make their teaching run in such channels as to make it more practically beneficial in after-life. The following sentence in the remarks made at La Martinière might with advantage be written in letters of gold in all the schools of India, whether Anglo-Indian, Eurasian or Native:—"Now, this college may be justly proud of the success and eminence attained in after life by some of its former pupils. But its pupils must not suppose that to have carried away the prizes which are open to them here gives them any personal claim in after-life to prizes not commonly open to the class they belong to, whatever that class may be. I should be sorry if any of you young gentlemen were encouraged to believe that the university degree, however meritoriously it may be won, is a sure passport to wealth and influence, or even to independence. You cannot all be Government servants or eminent lawyers; and the probability is that the great majority of you will have to seek and earn your livelihood in the prosecution of lowlier, but by no means less worthy, or less useful, vocations." The warning contained in these words is particularly applicable to the swarms of Bengalis, more or less superficial in their knowledge, the offspring of our system of education. They have a fixed idea that they are born to enter Government service, or to shine in the courts of law as pleaders. A large number succeed tolerably well in one line or the other; a few of course rise to eminence; but the majority do not manage to secure Government employment, nor do they get clients enough to suit their aspirations; so they take to literary and oratorical loafing. It is these who become the glib talkers rather than accurate writers, the political agitators rather than good citizens, of whom Professor Monier Williams speaks in his remarks on Indian education. He speaks strongly, but it is worthy of all note, that Lord Lytton endorses all he says, and quotes his very words as conveying his own views. There is always too much head-work and cram. Many were amused at Sir George Campbell's endeavour to excite among native boys a desire for physical emulation and exertion, and the establishment of riding schools for those who desired to serve the State. Very funny stories used to come over from Howrah of equestrian feats by young Bengalis, to whom the ways of ponies with a little go in them were as the ways of the evil one. But there is no reason why they should not learn active games: and in any but central schools the time spent in teaching bad English would be better devoted to races and to athletics of sorts. And why should Bengali boys not have athletic meetings? That they can enter into the fun and spirit of the thing was shown last year at Baraset, a sub-divisional station, about fourteen miles from Calcutta. The officer stationed there was seized with a desire to give the local school a treat, and he was the very man to do it. With an eye to business, he marked out a course on his lawn for distances up to a quarter of a mile, and he got entries for all the events with great ease. With an eye to the beautiful, the little competitors—the oldest was probably not more than fifteen or sixteen—were rigged out in charming little white nether garments, which gave their limbs free play, and pretty little shirt-lets as well. For had they not a "gallery" of fair women and ugly men to see them run? And did not they run, some of them, jump high and long, and enjoy themselves thoroughly! And is not the history of that day's doings recorded in the chronicles of Baraset School? It is even credibly reported that training has already begun for next year; certain it is, that the local talent has been seen careering in single file round the tank in the school-ground, and going through a course of gymnastics on the parallel bars and ladder which adorn the grass plot in front of the school-rooms. It is feared these preparations are useless, for the former Lord of Baraset manor is gone, and the present tenant, being a native, is not likely to be of a sporting turn.—Pioneer Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

MR. GROTE.—Mr. Grote is stated to be progressing satisfactorily, and it now seems probable that he will gradually recover from the effects of his recent suicidal attempts. It is inexplicable as to what could have induced the unhappy man to attempt suicide, but it is attributed to a weakening of the brain, partly the effects of a sun-stroke he experienced some years ago, but principally also to the arduous mental labour and anxiety he has suffered of late.

A LADY CANDIDATE.—A niece of Mr. Ghose, of the Calcutta bar, appeared at the last vernacular scholarship examination from one of the schools at Krishnagur. This is the first instance in that district of a lady presenting herself as a competitor at a public examination. The authorities politely resolved that the lady should go through the ordeal privately in one of the rooms of the school to which she belongs.

MAIL ROBBERIES.—Some clue seems to have been at last obtained to the perpetrator of the numerous robberies that have lately taken place on the Jabalpur line. A guard named Vinall has been arrested, and a quantity of stolen property, some of which was stolen eight months ago, was found in his house. Vinall pleaded guilty before the magistrate, and has been committed to the Sessions.

SWAT.—Late news from Swat comes to the Civil and Military Gazette with the report that feuds and disputes are rife among the Khans there. There is now no talk at the residence of the Akhund about a religious war being waged against the British Government. The elders and the Khans of Buner declare themselves thankful to the British Government for the kindness shown to them by its officers, and they have expressed their feelings of gratitude openly and in assembly.

THE INDIA OFFICE ON THE FAMINE.—The Pioneer is severely satirical at the expense of the Indian Council at Westminster:—"The authorities of this country are likely, we believe, before long to receive, from the hands of Lord Salisbury, a minute of supreme importance. This will set forth the conclusions his Lordship has drawn from the late famine. The phenomena of Indian administration always remain confused and unintelligible till their true significance is worked out in London; and the members of the Viceroy's Council will of course derive immense assistance from the despatch they have been promised."

THE NAGA EXPEDITION.—News has been received from the Naga expedition at Mozema, up to Dec. 14 by telegram, and up to 11th by letter. The Nagas have not as yet come in. Up to the 11th they had been giving trouble by night firing, but a telegram of the 14th states that night firing had ceased. Samagueting was reported quiet. It was found that some Mozema men were acting in rear of the expeditionary force, having killed a constable and plundered his post. Up to the 25th no further news from the frontier was received at head quarters of the Assam Government at Loochka. Captain Beresford had made his party comfortable in stockades. The friendly Nagas are giving every assistance.

MILITARY.—There is a rumour, though how far it is to be relied on is questionable, that Colonel Rowlands, who has just been relieved of the command of the 43rd Light Infantry, will rejoin the 34th, his former regiment. It was generally understood that when this officer went to Madras he would be provided for by being transferred to the Brigade Staff of that Presidency; and there seems to be no reason why this arrangement should not be carried out. The above report has, however, gone the rounds of Ferozpur, and has caused no little anxiety in the gallant 34th, as that regiment very naturally expected the promotion of the commanding officer would give a step to all ranks, and if the rumour be correct, there will probably be disappointment.—Bombay Gazette.

EARTHQUAKE IN ASSAM.—Information has been sent to the Englishman that earthquake shocks have been felt at Tezpur, Assam:—"It may interest your readers to learn that this morning, Dec. 7, a series of earthquake shocks took place here. At a little after half-past one the first slight but unmistakable shock occurred, and was followed, at intervals, by low rumbling sounds. A few minutes subsequently a more distinct subterranean rolling detonation made itself heard, and this culminated in a very sharp shock, shaking the houses severely, cracking some of their brick walls, overthrowing and breaking various articles, and in one case violently precipitating a brick chimney into the room, to the entire destruction of all upon the mantelpiece, and with damage to other furniture. After another pause, further sounds were audible, with very weak vibrations of the earth, and at two o'clock renewed rumbling, unaccompanied, however, by any perceptible motion. At about half-past two again a shock occurred of equal strength to the first, and the series of manifestations concluded by further faint subterraneous noises. The direction of the waves seemed to be from S.S.E. and N.N.W. It would be very interesting if, by careful observation at different stations in Assam of the direction and precise time of occurrence of these earthquake shocks, the seismic vertical and some of the co-seismic points could be approximately determined."

THE NEW STAMP BILL.—The Calcutta Trades Association has addressed the Government of India on the subject of the new Stamp Bill as follows:—"The Committee have read with great interest the report of the Select Committee on the Bill, and the speech of the Hon. Mr. Cockerell, as published in the Gazette of the 20th ult., but they are unable to admit the justice of the conclusion arrived at by the former in regard to the particular matter embraced by this section. Under the present law all receipts for payment under twenty rupees are exempted from duty, but it is now proposed to reduce the limit of exemption by one-half, in respect to which the Select Committee state that 'the payment of one anna stamp duty can hardly be considered an oppressive tax in such cases.' The Committee, I am to state, cannot coincide in this opinion. They consider that the duty will be too great a tax on small transactions; and as it will fall chiefly, if not wholly, on the trading classes throughout the country, who already bear their full share of taxation, the Committee cannot regard it as other than oppressive. Under the English Stamp Act the limit upon which a receipt stamp is required is £2. The Committee are not aware of anything in the circumstances of this country to justify a reduction of the limit to one-half. In his remarks on the Bill the honourable gentleman above referred to describes certain of its provisions as 'offensive,' and involving 'a direct attack on the pocket of the taxpayer.' The Committee submit that the provision in question, not only comes within the description, but is also condemned thereby. They are aware that one of the declared objects of the Bill is to secure an increase of the revenue, but they feel assured that it cannot be the intention of the Legislature to attain that object by inflicting a hardship on any single class, and they would, therefore, respectfully solicit that his Excellency the Viceroy in Council will be pleased to permit the present law in regard to stamp duty on receipts to remain unaltered."

THE AUSTRALIAN BLONDIN.—Mr. H. L'Estrange, "the hero of Sydney Harbour," made his debut on Friday evening last to a large number of spectators, amongst whom were several influential natives. Tight-rope performances, especially when the rope is elevated a great height, have had extraordinary charms for many years past, and since Blondin first made his appearance at the Crystal Palace, now sixteen or seventeen years ago, they have almost become a mania with a certain section of pleasure-seekers, and such caterers for the public amusement will always find admirers. We believe that to Germany belongs the honour of producing the first high-rope walker, for old Kolter, the pioneer of this class of entertainment, was performing in Silesia some years before Blondin created such a sensation in England; but such performances were certainly not really popular until Blondin made his appearance. For our part we have never been great admirers of these entertainments, where human life is risked for the gratification of morbid tastes. However, this does not hinder us from appreciating such a clever gymnast as the gentleman now performing in the huge drum on the Maidan proves himself to be. In this matter let us recognise the truth of the adage quot homines tot sententie. Mr. L'Estrange is a man of middle height, possessing no very marked peculiarities; indeed, he struck us as lacking a great deal of that muscular development generally observable in such men. His performances are exceedingly clever; he does all the original Blondin carried out, and much besides. His balancing act on the back of a chair placed on the rope is really marvellous; the blind-fold performances are most interesting; and his simulated slips very clever. But perhaps the most striking and wonderful feat is travelling the whole distance, some 120 to 130 feet, on a velocipede. The really difficult parts of this act appear to us to be the pulling up, backing, and starting whilst on the rope; but the feat was accomplished apparently with great ease. The finale was what is termed in the programme "wheeling a barrow over Vesuvius." The performer—dressed in a light fire-proof dress, and armed at every point with fireworks of sundry descriptions—proceeds to the centre over the fire platform, and ignites the whole mass. Blondin is here entirely lost to view, the smoke being most dense, and we could not but feel a sense of relief when he emerged from the suffocating fumes.—Indian Daily News, Dec. 24.

THE FAMINE.

We take the following from the famine telegrams placed at our disposal:—

GANJAM, Dec. 15.—Cholera continues. Rain 2·15 Surada and Russelconda. Light paddy being cut.

VIZAGAPATAM, Dec. 17.—Cholera declining. Crops withering in some parts from want of water. Rain-fall only Parvatipur Taluq 4 inch.

GODAVERY, Dec. 17.—Cholera and small-pox prevalent, fever slight. No rain. Crops generally good, though slightly suffering from blight. Water over anicut 8 inches.

KITSNA, Dec. 13.—Ague and small-pox continue. Rain-fall 1·15. Crops generally good. Later crops require some rain. Locusts damaging varige crop in parts.

NELLORE, Dec. 15.—Fever and ague very prevalent and fatal; small-pox, dysentery, and diarrhoea slight; cattle-disease in Kandakur. Rain-fall 2·37. Crops fair, but suffering in parts from insects.

CUDAPAH, Dec. 14.—Cholera, fever prevails. Rainfall 21 inch. Cholera, raga, in some places suffering from the effects of locusts.

BELLARY, Dec. 14.—Fever prevalent. Rainfall 7 inch. Standing crops of pulses, oilseeds, corra, and cotton as yet in fair condition. Future prospects hopeful.

KURNOOL, Dec. 15.—Cholera and small-pox rare; fever prevails exceedingly. Rain-fall 41 inch reported in Cumbum and Markapore.

NORTH ARCOT, Dec. 14.—Cholera, small-pox, fever, dysentery in some places. Rain-fall 1·42. Crops good.

SOUTH ARCOT, Dec. 15.—Cholera increasing. Rain general; district average 1·55. Crops good except cholera, slightly damaged in parts.

TRICHINOPOLY, Dec. 15.—Rain-fall district average 0·90 inch. Cholera and small-pox much decreased. Standing crops suffer in some parts from excessive rain and locusts; otherwise good.

TANJORE, Dec. 15.—Cholera and small-pox still lingering. Rain-fall 1.13. Rivers half to full. Crops wet thriving, some suffer from excess water; dry generally in good condition, some suffer from excess rain.

MADRAS, Dec. 15.—Rain-fall average 1.01. Freshes continue in the rivers.

TINNEVELLY, Dec. 15.—Cholera continues. Rain-fall 1.55 inches. Standing crops generally good, though dry, seriously damaged and injured by continued rain and disastrous floods.

KOIMBATUR, Dec. 15.—Cholera abating; fever, small-pox. Rain-fall 1.33. Crops generally good. Damage from excessive rain and insects in some places reported in six taluqs.

SILIGURIS, Dec. 15.—Small-pox prevails in Wynad. Rain-fall 3.39 inches in parts; crops damaged by excessive rains; very stormy weather.

SALEM, Dec. 17.—Rain-fall .60. Crops thriving.

SOUTH CANARA, Dec. 15.—Cholera cases reported chiefly Udipi and Cassergode, small-pox exists Udipi. Rain-fall inches 1.03. Second rice crop in good condition.

MALABAR, Dec. 15.—Small-pox prevalent, cholera slight in two taluqs. Rain-fall 2.42, unnecessary for crops, which in some places are suffering, good for fruit trees; second crop gingelly and gram in good condition; prospects good.

CHINGLEPUT, Dec. 15.—Small-pox, fever, and dysentery in all the taluqs, except Conjeveram, where no disease is said to prevail. Rain-fall average one inch. Crops generally good in all the taluqs; some slight damage by insects in Trivellore and Ponnery.

MADRAS, Dec. 18.—Expenditure sanctioned Rs. 3,55,849. Small-pox, dysentery, and fever prevalent, cholera in one division only; cattle healthy. Rain-fall 0.17 inch.—Madras Athenæum.

Miscellaneous.

CAPTAINS LONGLEY and Pearson have been removed from the 43rd Regiment by order of the Duke of Cambridge, the former for being one of the prime movers in the Colonel Smith scandal, and the latter for being concerned in the agitation regarding the rights of the officers.

MILITARY.—The 11-8th (late 4-5th) Brigade Royal Artillery embarked for Rangoon on the morning of the 24th December, on which date the Barrack Master, Fort Saint George, proceeded to that station in order to take charge of the military buildings, &c., that were in use with the above Battery.

MYSOR.—A correspondent in Mysor writes:—"I have never seen anything like the quantity of water now throughout the province. Many tanks have gone for want of a little timely repair at an expense of a few rupees. To repair them now will cost hundreds. Forage is in abundance. The race of 'murghi' has died out altogether in many parts, but there appear to be as many sheep as ever."

THE NIZAM'S RAILWAYS.—Major Jopp, R.E., the Engineer in charge of the Bellary-Hubli State Railway, reports that the necessity for commencing the railway in the Nizam's territory as a relief work has almost passed away. The Madras Government have ordered that all hands now sent by the civil officers should be employed in completing work, ballast, &c., on the Madras side of the river, and the railway beyond the Madras boundary should only be used as a safety-valve in case Public Works Department works within the Madras boundary are not available for the employment of the famine coolies sent by civil officers. The Railway Engineer is under no circumstances to recruit labour.

SOUTH INDIAN RAILWAY.—The Collectors of Malabar, Koimbatore and Madras have been directed to report how far the opening of the Southern Extension of the South Indian Railway has diverted the traffic which formerly existed along the roads leading from Palghat and Coimbatore towards Dindigul and Madras. They will also furnish all available statistics regarding the existing traffic in passengers and goods upon the roads in question; and they will state their opinions as to the remunerative results which may be expected to follow the construction of a railway leading from Dindigul in a north-westerly direction to the South-West Line of the Madras Railway, and as to the route which should be adopted.

CATTLE RUN OVER BY TRAINS.—Colonel Shaw-Stewart, R.E., has submitted to the Madras Government an interesting report about the cattle run over on the Madras railways during the quarter ending the 30th of September. There were fifty cases in all, "and the behaviour of the cow-catcher, wherever the engines were fitted with them, was efficient." The Madras Government, it is said, wishes to know how the cow-catcher behaved when the engines were not fitted with it, or them; and feels uncertain also about the following part of the report. "One bullock" came into collision with the goods train from Bangalore. "The driver, on observing the cow on the line, shut off steam, and applied his brakes; but before he could pull up, the bull was knocked down by the cow-catcher."

VIZAGAPATAM.—Cholera has been very bad at Vizagapatam lately. Mr. Seton (lately arrived), Range Officer of the Golconda Range, lost first of all his wife, then two of his three children, and finally himself fell a victim. Mr. Willock had a severe attack at Vizianagram, and was in great danger for two days, but recovered. In the district jail there were thirty-nine deaths out of less than sixty cases, and the deaths reported in the district in the first three weeks of November exceed those of any weeks in the past eighteen months, being 914, against 904 in the same period of March last. The deaths reported since June, 1876, have exceeded 7,000. The disease has shown itself in every taluq and in every part of every taluq.

BAMBOO PAPER.—Mr. Routledge has written a letter to the Rangoon Gazette, denying that there has been any failure in making paper out of bamboo according to his patent. There has been failure in getting crushed bamboo home to England to the paper works from Burmah, but Mr. Routledge has every reason to believe that experiments this season will be more satisfactory, and that bamboo will become as much in demand for paper manufacture as Esparto grass, which, he says, is far inferior to it in quality. Once commenced, Mr. Routledge thinks that bamboo converted into a fibrous staple will assume as prominent a position as jute has done, and whilst thus adding to the exports and material prosperity of the Indian Empire, reduce the present necessity which exists at home of procuring our supplies altogether from foreign countries.

FORGING A REGISTER.—At the recent Sessions at Nellore, a young Brahmin was charged and found guilty with forging a famine relief register. The Sessions Judge in passing judgment said:—"On this evidence I am of opinion that the prisoner must be convicted either under Section 468 or Section 420. The man admits that he prepared the register which has been proved to be grossly incorrect, and it could only have been framed in this manner with the object of defrauding the Government. I think, therefore, it is my duty to pass a severe sentence in the case as an example, for if all the stories current are well founded—and some of them must be—a great deal of the money which this famine entails on the Government finds its way into pockets never intended for it. The sentence of the Court therefore is, that the prisoner be kept to rigorous imprisonment for four years, and that he pay a fine of Rs. 500, or be kept to rigorous imprisonment for a further period of one year."

A BRAVE NATIVE OFFICIAL.—Mr. Whiteside, Collector of North Arcot, has brought to the notice of Government the brave conduct of a village Munsif, named Venkatrama Razu. It appears that when a search was about to be made by the police in the house of a prisoner named Venkatapa, in connection with a house-breaking case, the prisoner ran "anuck" armed with a large billhook, with which he gave a police-constable a fearful cut on his neck and then attacked the head constable. The Munsif, who was near at the time, very bravely seized the prisoner and held him until he was secured by others. In doing this he received a severe blow which caused the loss of the whole of the fingers of his left hand, except the thumb and a stump. The Munsif was also put to heavy loss of property owing to his house having been burned down, since the date of the above occurrence, by the relatives of the prisoner. The Government have given the Munsif a trumpery reward of Rs. 50. The rebuilding of his house must have cost nearly the whole of this sum; so that the Munsif's left hand must have been valued very low indeed.

KURNOOL RELIEF COMMITTEE.—Major J. W. Hindle, S.C., District Engineer Office, Kurnool, reports to the Central Relief Committee that he was disgusted with the manner in which the proceedings of the first meeting of the Kurnool Relief Committee were conducted:—"After several motions had been put to the vote and passed, they were reread and canvassed by the native portion of the assembly and altered without a further vote being called for; so I left the room. My experience of meetings of this kind where natives and Europeans are mixed up is, that one cannot really get at the wishes of the native community, and when the natives are called upon for an opinion they think that they are individually called upon to strike out some new line of their own. Whenever I have had anything of the kind to carry out, I have always called upon the native gentlemen to meet together and talk the thing over, and decide amongst themselves what policy they would recommend to be adopted, and then select one of their members to be a mouth-piece when the General Committee was assembled. Some of the suggestions made on Tuesday were puerile to a degree, especially those of the schoolmaster, who was about the last person that ought to have been called upon for an illustration of the views of the native portion of the meeting." Pleasant, this, for the pedagogue.

Ceylon.

MR. BIRCH.—It is understood that Mr. Birch proceeds to Europe early in January, on three months' privileged leave; his duties will be undertaken by Mr. O'Brien, Assistant Colonial Secretary.

NORMAL SCHOOL.—We (Ceylon Times) learn that a gentleman is now on his way out to Ceylon as a teacher of art and science at the Normal School. One had been selected for the Colombo Academy, but failed to stand the necessary medical examination.

CIVIL.—The last Gazette announced the appointment of Allanson Bailey, Esq., as Acting Assistant Agent at Badulla from the 10th inst.; H. L. Crawford, Esq., to be extra Assistant at Badulla; C. A. Murray, Esq., is appointed extra officer Assistant at Kandy.

THE BISHOP AND THE MISSIONARIES.—The Ceylon Diocesan Gazette says:—"We have good reason to believe that letters brought by the mail have made possible a solution of the question at issue between the Bishop and the Church Missionary Society on one side and the Tamil Coolie Committee on the other."

AN EPISCOPAL LINGUIST.—Bishop Coplestone is reputed as possessing a remarkable capacity for speedily acquiring a good knowledge of any language he applies himself to master. In twelve months after his arrival in Ceylon he preached in Singalese with facility and correctness. He is now preaching in Portuguese.

PASSENGERS FOR ENGLAND.—The following passengers proceeded home by the M.M. steamer Anadyr, of Dec. 12:—Mr. and Miss Sabonadiere, Miss Layard, Mrs. Bowden Smith, Mrs. Pouncefort, Mrs. Holloway, Mr. E. A. Cooke, Mr. E. M. Rossiter, Mr. A. E. Acklom, and Assistant Commissary General Eichbaum, Mr. H. L. Hubbard, and Mr. W. B. Ferris.

CIVIL.—C. Edmonds, Esq., is to be extra Assistant at Nuwara Eliya to the Government Agent for the Central Province. Leave of absence having been granted to P. Arunachalam, Esq., F. C. Fisher, Esq., has been appointed to act as Police Magistrate, Commissioner of Requests, and Coroner for Matara for three weeks from Feb. 11 next. The Agent for the North-Western Province will continue at his post until Jan. 1, when his successor will relieve him.

IMMIGRATION.—The draft report of the Immigration Commission is nearly completed, and it is generally understood to embrace strong recommendations for the establishment of cooly quarantine depots at Dutch Bay, with a view to the general disuse of other routes. The Serendib will convey the following party to Dutch Bay next month, with a view to examine the locality for purposes of immigration:—Lieutenant-General Street, the Queen's Advocate, the Auditor General, and Messrs. Downall, Wilson, Mitchell, Wall, Elphinstone, Thomas and Saunders.—Ceylon Times, Dec. 20.

LEGISLATIVE COUNCIL.—There has been quite an animated debate in the Ceylon Legislative Council about the Madras famine, and what Ceylon has done to mitigate its effects. The discussion arose on a vote of the Government for Rs. 25,000 "in aid of the Madras Relief Fund." Two or three speakers pointed out that as the Duke of Buckingham had informed the Lord Mayor no further subscriptions were required, it was hardly worth while now for Ceylon to contribute this money. The Tamil member of the Council, Sir Coomaraswamy, did not object to the vote, but insisted on information being given as to what the Ceylon Government had done in the way of providing relief works for the immigrants from Southern India. The Colonial Secretary said he could not give details as to the whole of the 170,000 immigrants who had come to Ceylon this year, but that he found there were 107,000 coolies employed by the local Public Works Department in June, July, August, and September this year, against only 69,000 so employed in 1876. He added that work had been provided for every able-bodied coolie who would work, and food and medical comforts for the weakly. The hospitals had been enormously overcrowded during the year, and great difficulty was experienced in getting the coolies to work. "They did not want work, they came to pick coffee leaves," said the Colonial Secretary. Sir Coomaraswamy threw doubts on the statement that the colony had taken any extraordinary measures for relieving the immigrant population, but was informed in reply that the Ceylon Government "had expended in labour over and above the ordinary estimate no less a sum than £80,000, and found employment for 40,000 more labourers than were in the island last year."

THE death of Major-General Smith, formerly of the Stud Department, is announced as having taken place at Ambala on Dec. 8.

Miscellaneous.

GREAT DISASTER AT SEA.—(MADRID, Jan. 16).—The Imparcial of to-day states that the steamer Trise, coming from India, with 450 passengers and crew, has been lost at sea, and that only a sloop of the vessel has been recovered on the Galician coast.

EXPORT OF SPECIE.—The Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamer Kashgar sailed on Thursday afternoon for the East with £35,300 in specie. Of this sum £172,300 was in gold for Alexandria, and the remainder, £213,000, was in silver for Bombay.

ROYAL ASIATIC SOCIETY.—A paper will be read at the meeting of the Royal Asiatic Society, on Monday next, Jan. 21, at four o'clock, "On the Migrations and Early History of the White Huns, principally from Chinese Sources," by T. W. Kingsmill, Esq., President of the North China Asiatic Society.

THE "FRIESLAND."—The report published on Thursday that a steamer named the Friese, coming from India, had been lost on the coast of Spain, is believed at Lloyd's to refer to the Friesland, from Batavia, which was posted at Lloyd's as a missing vessel on Wednesday last.

BILLS ON INDIA.—India Council drafts to the amount of £263,000 were on Wednesday allotted out of the £265,000 (26,50,000 rupees) offered at last week's minimum of 1s. 8½d. per rupee. Calcutta obtained £148,000, Bombay £53,000, Madras £12,000, and all tenders at and above that rate received in full. Silver at one time realised 54d. per oz., and the quotation in the afternoon was 53½d. to 54d.

EASTERN TELEGRAPH COMPANY.—The report of the Eastern Telegraph Company for the six months ended Sept. 30 exhibits a net revenue of £197,488. Of this £61,453 has been applied to repairs and renewal of cables, &c., and after the payment of some small items £134,455 remains, to cover £29,251 debenture and preference interest, and two interim dividends at the rate of 5 per cent per annum.

THE "GLENERICHT."—A telegram has been received at Lloyd's, from Madras, reporting the safety of the captain and a portion of the crew of the new ship Gleniericht, for Singapore, which was reported a few days ago as having been passed, in the Southern seas, on fire and abandoned. The telegram states that the captain and family and some of the crew (nineteen in all) had been landed at Cocos by the Cheviot. The fate of the remaining portion of the crew is still unknown.

INDIAN FAMINE.—A meeting of the Indian Famine Fund Committee was held on Monday at the Mansion House. The late Lord Mayor (Alderman Sir Thomas White) presided, and stated, in reply to Mr. F. W. Buxton, that the expenses of the Fund amounted to £9,052—viz., advertising £7,631, and stamps, stationery, and gratuities, £1,561. The late Lord Mayor expressed a hope that at their next meeting they might be able to close the fund; but a gentleman present said it would be well not to do so too soon, seeing that all danger was far from over, especially in the North-West Provinces of India.

INDIAN APPEAL.—HURVOPERSHAD ROY CHOWDRY AND ANOTHER v. SHAMAPERSHAD ROY CHOWDRY AND OTHERS.—This was a suit principally between two brothers as to property left by their father. The litigation commenced in 1853, and the decree on which the present appeal came before the Court was dated in August, 1873, from a decree made in 1861. The suit was to recover mesne profits of certain lands which were claimed as amounting to upwards of Rs. 207,893, and the High Court reduced the amount to Rs. 21,302. It appears that the litigation commenced respecting the property in 1827, between the two brothers, and in 1829 a compromise was effected. In 1860 the matter was before the Judicial Committee on the question of the Indian law of litigation. A suit was in 1861 commenced for mesne profits, and the litigation between two brothers, now represented by the appellants and respondents in the present suit and the present appeal, which is likely to occupy their lordships several days, will probably end the long litigation.

CAMPBELL v. THE AGRA BANK (LIMITED).—This was an action brought to recover the sum of £3,000, with 5½ per cent. interest, which the plaintiff alleged had been deposited on July 1, 1860, with the Agra and United Service Bank (Limited), whose liabilities had been subsequently transferred to the present defendants. The defence was that there had been no deposit upon that day, but that a similar sum had been received in 1859, which had, however, been repaid to the plaintiff. The plaintiff admitted that allegation, but stated that a second deposit of £3,000 was paid on July 1, 1861, which had not been repaid. The plaintiff, Mrs. Agnes Campbell, was a widow lady residing at Edinburgh. Her husband had carried on a very lucrative business in Calcutta, and upon his death, several years ago, left a title to his wife in the partnership profits in the business with which he had been connected. The surviving partner transmitted considerable sums to the plaintiff from time to time, the total of which amounted at present to more than £40,000. She was in the habit of banking with the defendants' predecessors, through whom her money was generally transmitted. The plaintiff kept no accounts herself, but left her financial business to the care of her solicitor, who had since died. After his death a deposit note for £3,000, at 5½ per cent. interest, dated July 1, 1860, was found among his papers, and, as it bore the customary notice that the money would not be repaid unless the receipt was returned to the bank, the present action had been brought in order that the opinion of the jury might be obtained upon the matter. The jury, before the conclusion of the defendants' case, intimated that they were unanimous in their opinion of the case, and ultimately gave a verdict for the defendants. Mr. Justice Hawkins expressed his opinion that clearly some mistake had occurred as to the deposit note produced, and the plaintiff should not recover upon it.

Capt. Mulloy and Jones, Lieuts. Jervois, Sinclair, Cleeve, McCreagh, and Meade, and Veterinary-Surg. Kemp, of the Royal Artillery; Lieuts. Chippendell, Bethell, Connor, and Fullerton, of the Royal Engineers;

Lieut. Meares, 21st Foot; Capt. Barstow, 72nd Foot; Lieut. Fraser, 33rd Foot; Capt. Brereton, 89th Foot; Capt. Charley, 60th Foot; Lieut. Davenport, 83rd Foot; Lieut. Brown, 92nd Foot; Quartermaster Brown, 21st Foot; Major Harkness, 5th Foot; Lieut. Gale, R.E.; Capt. Morrison and Lieuts. Read and Fenton, 1st Foot; Lieut. Freeman, 13th Hussars; Capt. O'Brien, 11th Foot; Capt. Tidmarsh and Lieut. Preston, 33rd Foot; Lieut. Watson, 34th Foot; Capt. Campbell, 65th Foot; Lieut. Wingfield, 54th Foot; Lieut. Stainforth, 65th Foot; Col. Brown, 83rd Foot; Capt. Beauchamp, 7th Foot; and Surgeons-Major McLean, Bolton, Ongleton, Harvey, Quinton, and Preston, of the Army Medical Department. The Crocodile is due in Bombay on Feb. 15.

The Indian troopship Malabar is appointed to leave Queenstown on the 23rd inst. with the 1st Battalion 1st Foot for Malta, and take the 2nd Battalion 2nd Foot from Malta to India, reaching Bombay on or about March 1; the Junna sails from Portsmouth with the 61st Regiment for Malta on the 10th proximo, and takes the 2nd Battalion 13th Foot from Malta to India, being due at Bombay on March 15; and the Serapis is ordered to sail, if required, on the 24th proximo from Portsmouth, being timed to reach Bombay on March 29.

SIR A. COTTON ON INDIAN FAMINES.—Sir Arthur Cotton attended a special meeting of the Birmingham Chamber of Commerce on Jan. 16, and delivered an address upon famine and irrigation in India. He said he had been fifty-seven years connected with the business of engineering in India, and was for twenty-six years in charge of the very province that suffered most from the late famine. They might conceive the magnitude of the famine when he told them that thirty millions of people were affected by it, and that almost all of them had been ruined by it. It was probable that not more than one million would perish, but the entire population had to sell all they possessed to keep them alive. The country had been so ruined that it could not pay the revenue for years to come. The Government had spent altogether out of the treasury about thirty millions. It was a fact that the whole of the famines in India were caused by a want of water; and how could it be questioned that water was the proper remedy for it? In the way of irrigation the natives had constructed, in the Madras Presidency alone, 40,000 tanks for collecting water, and in Mysor, Hyderabad, and Bombay there were [thousands more—perhaps 80,000 altogether. The first question was, when they got possession of the whole country, whether they could not improve the tanks and supply them from a great river. They had never been attended to, nor even had existing works been kept in repair. He instanced the case of a great tract of country which would yield £50,000 a year, revenue, but which had, by reason of an imperfect water supply fallen to £10,000. He said that with an outlay [of a few thousands a year the tanks could be kept in repair. There was, he continued, only one possible way of preventing famines in India, and that was by water, which was to be used in two ways, namely, for irrigation and transmission, and both objects could be accomplished in exactly the same way. He would admit that the Government had been doing something in the matter of irrigation. They had now in hand many large works, and had nearly completed fourteen. They had spent about twenty millions, and it would take another ten millions to complete them. He pointed out the importance attributed by the natives to irrigation, and quoted statistics to show that whereas the Government had altogether sunk 160 millions in the construction of railways, which had proved to be a most unremunerative investment, the construction of irrigation works had returned a good interest of the outlay, varying from 5 to as much as 87 per cent. He also showed that if the traffic of India were conducted by means of water ways there would be a great saving in the cost effected, and this country would be enabled to derive an enormous supply of wheat upon cheaper terms than at present. India would be better enabled to dispose of her produce, and the result would be a greatly increased trade between the two countries. He would not hesitate to say that it was possible for the whole of India to be more or less irrigated and protected in the future against a recurrence of famine.

Imperial Parliament.

The Parliamentary Session was opened on Thursday by Commission. The following paragraph in relation to the late Indian Famine occurs in her Majesty's speech:—

I am thankful that the terrible famine which has ravaged Southern India is nearly at an end. Strenuous and successful exertions have been made by my local Governments to relieve the sufferings of the population, and in that duty they have been powerfully seconded by the liberal aid of my people at home and in my colonies. I have directed that an inquiry should be made into the measures most proper to diminish the danger of such calamities for the future.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, Jan. 17.—NOTICES OF MOTION. Lord G. HAMILTON: On Monday next, select committee to inquire into and report as to the expediency of constructing public works in India with money raised on loan.

Sir G. CAMPBELL: On Jan. 25 to call attention to the question of taxation in India.

Mr. FAWCETT: In reference to the motion of the Under-Secretary of State for India, I give notice to move to extend the scope of the committee so that it shall inquire into the best means for preventing and mitigating the effect of famines in India, and to inquire whether by greater economy, especially in regard to military and other charges which are under the control of the home authorities, a fund may not be provided for famines which will render it unnecessary to impose on the people of India taxation so burdensome as that of the contemplated increase of the salt duty.

Mr. D. ONSLOW: On Monday next to ask the Under-Secretary of State for India whether the Maharajah of Scindia, during his recent visit to Calcutta, had omitted the usual courtesies to the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal; and if so, what steps had been taken to mark her Majesty's displeasure. Also, whether it was true that the Maharajah was evading the treaty which enabled him to keep a certain number of his subjects under arms, and thus converting his whole people into trained soldiers, and whether it was the intention of her Majesty's Government to allow such a state of things to continue.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FRIDAY, Jan. 18.—NOTICE OF MOTION.—Mr. Alderman M'ARTHUR: Monday next, to ask whether any reply had been sent to the memorial from the inhabitants of Ceylon praying that the votes for ecclesiastical purposes on the revenues of the island shall cease.

NAUTICAL INCIDENTS.

The Alma (Swedish schooner), from Akyab to London, has passed up Channel with loss of foretopgallantmast.

The Vermont, Richardson, arrived from Maulmain at Falmouth, on Jan. 15, and reports:—"Left Maulmain, July 29. From Aug. 3 till 12th had a succession of terrific gales, at times a hurricane, and tremendous sea, and had hard pressing to hold to windward, especially on the night of Jan. 5. When about twenty miles off the Mocosales, a terrific squall broke on us from W.S.W. Had to furl all lower topsails, ship drifting fast toward land with both wind and current. At about midnight, still blowing hard, wind veered to W. and W.N.W., the water suddenly shoaled from twenty to fifteen and thirteen fathoms, mixed ground, a tremendous sea running; thought we saw the breakers to leeward. About this time I threw over the bottle which was picked up. Cannot remember what I wrote on the paper, but we all thought it was our last night. About 1.30 a.m., wind W.N.W., still in fifteen fathoms, mixed bottom, I concluded it would be prudent to press on canvas, even if we carried something away, and I try to keep along the shore as long as possible; so set everything we possibly could. Ship diving and pitching fearfully and lying over, but heading S.W. by S., and making little lee way, expecting every moment something to give way, but all held well. At 4 a.m. deepened to eighteen fathoms, mixed bottom. At 6.30 in twenty fathoms, shells, and less wind, but still dark and rainy. At seven wind veered to S.S.W., and moderated; were ship to westward off shore. A French steamer, the Iraoudady, passed closed to us, in lat. 5 N., long. 92 E.; asked her to report us."

ENCOUNTER WITH A BISON.—Mr. R. F. Phillips, of Kotagiri, has had the good luck to kill a fine old bull bison, whose head now forms one of the finest trophies ever seen of this particular kind of game. Mr. Phillips the other day came to the knowledge of the presence of a herd of bison at a spot at the foot of the hills, and one morning set out, before dawn, in the hope of intercepting the animals as they were returning to their cover. He found their tracks, followed them up, and eventually sighted the herd, moving across a small glade about ten yards wide. An old bull was in the middle of the herd, and him Mr. Phillips spotted. There was just time for a quick shot—one shell from an express hit, but though it struck well as to height, it was not fairly behind the shoulder, but some eighteen inches too far back. The beast stumbled and fell, but was up again in a moment, and as quick as thought was hid from sight in the jungle. A second chance was out of the question, not only on account of the old bull's quick movement, but because of the dashing about of the cows that surrounded him. The sportsman, however, followed the trail, and noticed that though no blood showed on the spot where the animal fell, there was a lot of it discernible from about a hundred yards further on. Acting on his experience, Mr. Phillips determined to leave the animal in peace for an hour or two, and went off himself to the nearest chuttrum for rest and refreshment. In about two hours he resumed the attack, taking with him, this time, a little fox terrier, that proved a valuable ally. The tracks of the bull were taken up and followed, the little terrier keeping about ten yards ahead. Suddenly the terrier barked, and the next instant the old bull was nearly on his enemies, for with a snort of rage he dashed back on his tracks, giving Mr. Phillips barely time to jump through some terrible prickly-pear bushes on the right, and the gun-bearer to save himself by the skin of his teeth by doing ditto on the left. Having charged for about twenty or twenty-five yards, the wounded bull stood stock still, sniffing the scent of his human enemies, who for some time dared not move. The little terrier, however, was very active, and kept teasing the bull, causing him after a while to move about every now and then. Matters became very trying; for nearly two hours both parties kept each other at bay as it were. Now the bull moved on a little, then he moved back again, once or twice he was within ten or fifteen yards of Mr. Phillips, who could not even then get a fair sight of more than his horns. The undergrowth was so dense, that it would have been folly to fire at random, and a forward movement—attempted once or twice—was detected—and caused the beast to charge or move on. Eventually Mr. Phillips headed him, and secured standing room where the scrub was comparatively open. A shot fired in his rear by the shikaree drove the bull forward, and the terrier (who kept running at the bull, and then running back to his master) at the same time succeeded in drawing the beast to the right spot, and with an "at last!" the sportsman settled the grand old fellow, by sending a couple of shells into him. What adds interest to this capture is that about seven years ago, within a mile from the same place, Mr. Phillips fired at a bull bison, which he believes to be the same animal he has now killed. His shot then missed its mark, but struck one of the horns. The animal then stood for a moment, dazed, shook his head, and escaped. On one of the horns there is the mark of a bullet. Mr. Phillips measured the animal, while still warm, and has put him down as a "twenty-hand bull." The measurements of the horns are extraordinary.—Neilgherry Courier.

Near Woking Station, Surrey.

Is intended for the Sons of Gentlemen and Professional Men, under twelve years of age, preparatory to their entering the Mission College School, Southwark, or other Church of England Public Schools.

The teaching and immediate superintendence of the boys is managed by the Lady Superintendent, assisted by Governesses and Masters. The Warden himself conducts the religious instruction and general discipline of the School.

The School Fees (Board, Tuition, and Washing) are Forty-five Guineas per annum (payable a Term in advance). One Term's notice is required before the removal of a Pupil.

Parents living in India or elsewhere abroad can leave the entire charge of their Sons with the Warden for any lengthened period, by making a special arrangement for that purpose.

Parents desiring further information should apply to the Warden, the Rev. A. B. GOULDEN, St. Bernard's College, Goldworth, Woking Station, Surrey.

AN ORIENTALIST of experience, whose knowledge of Oriental Languages has been acquired in the East, is DESIROUS of having a FEW PUPILS in HINDUSTANI, HINDI, or PERSIAN.

For particulars apply to Messrs. WM. H. ALLEN and Co., 13, Waterloo-place, Pall-mall.

MEMORIAL IN HONOUR OF LORD NAPIER OF MAGDALA.

By Public Meeting in Calcutta, 16th March, 1878, a Committee was constituted under the Presidency of Sir
RICHARD TEMPLE, to collect Funds for the Erection of a Fitting Memorial of LORD NAPIER OF MAGDALA, for which they require about £5,000. About £2,800 has already been raised in India, and an Auxiliary Committee (named below) has been formed in London to collect Subscriptions in this country.

Subscriptions are now invited, and it is requested that they may be paid into the Bank of Messrs. CURTIS and Co., Strand; or to the Honorary Secretary, Captain R. TEMPLE, late 35th Royal Sussex, Junior Army and Navy Club, who will give any further information.

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT. WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS COMPANY (Limited).

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer.

Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.
 Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. postage, free. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, free. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, free.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.
 NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS, &c.

The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, free.

JOHN WHITE, MANUFACTURER, 228, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

THE FOLLOWING IS AN EXTRACT FROM A LETTER

dated 15th May, 1872, from an old inhabitant of Horningham, near Warminster, Wilts:—
 "I must also beg to say that your Pills are an excellent medicine for me, and I certainly do enjoy good health, sound sleep, and a good appetite; this is owing to taking your Pills. I am seventy-eight years old.
 "Remaining, Gentlemen, yours very respectfully,
 To the Proprietors of "L. S."

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—See Article in the Civil Service Gazette.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are—from Bombay, January 7; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, January 5; Calcutta, January 4.

The Pioneer gives some further particulars of the advance of our troops in the Jawaki country. On December 31 the force under General Keyes at Shinda and Turkhi advanced northwards through Ghariba to Pushtoni, reaching the crest of the hills at noon. They burnt the village of Wallai, encamped that night on the crest, and returned next morning to Shinda and Turkhi, after shelling the heights. Although the enemy was in great strength there were no casualties on our side. Meanwhile the force under General Ross had also come down on the Afridis from Shergasha southwards. This second force advancing through the difficult Bori Pass, occupied Pushtoni, with the loss of one camp follower, on the 31st. On the 2nd January, General Ross blew up the Pushtoni towers, burnt the Malik's house, and retired down the Bori Pass to his camp at Shergasha, without a casualty, the troops working splendidly over most difficult ground. A great many cattle were captured, but the Jawakis had evidently made up their minds not to fight, and went off to Tirah and the Pass Afridis. It is said that the political results of the expedition have thus far satisfied the authorities, as the most difficult position of the Afridi hills has now been entirely overrun by British troops.

We learn from the Indian papers that the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab was on his way from Kohat to Bannu. Sir Richard Pollock was to meet him on the 2nd January, and to decide on a further programme. A levée, darbar, and parade of all the troops in the Kohat garrison were held on New Year's Day in honour of the Imperial Assemblage of last year.

THE latest mail news about the Naga expedition reports the attitude of the Angama Nagas as one of sulky defiance. They were scattered in bands over the country; prepared to waylay weak or unwary parties of our men. The pretence about suing for peace ended in nothing. Our little force at Mozima, which had been stockaded and entrenched with stone-work, was attacked at midnight on the 26th December, but the attack was repulsed. Attempts were made to poison the water, but without success. The Superintendent of Police, with a strong escort, had been deputed to keep open the communications.

THE Calcutta papers give long accounts of the State ceremonies which ushered in the new year in the capital of British India. The pith of their statements has already been taken out of them by the telegrams, and we have no room for the smaller details. Sindia, as we know, was made a G.C.B., the first Indian prince who has ever received that honour. Sir R. Temple was made a G.C.S.I., and General Kennedy a K.C.S.I. The new Order of the Indian Empire, for rewarding services to her Majesty in her Indian Empire, and commemorating the proclamation of her style and title of Empress of India, consists of her Majesty the Queen as Sovereign, the Viceroy as Grand Master, twenty-three Councillors of the Empress as ex-officio Companions, and fifty Companions. Future nominations to the order are not to exceed twenty in any one year, exclusive of ex-officio appointments. Ex-officio members are Companions for life. The secretary of the Order is Mr. C. U. Aitchison. The following are ex-officio Companions:—Sir Alexander Arbuthnot, Sir Edward Bayley, the Maharaja Raja of Bundi, the Duke of Buckingham, the Maharaja of Kashmir, Sir Andrew Clarke, Sir George Couper, Sir Robert Davies, Mr. Eden, Mr. Egerton, the Maharajah of Gwalior, Sir Frederick Haines, Sir Arthur Hobbhouse, the Maharaja of Jaipur, the Raja of Jhind, Sir Edwin Johnston, Sir Henry Norman, the Nawab of Rampur, Mr. Stokes, Sir John Strachey, Sir Richard Temple, and the Maharaja of Travankor. The following are appointed Companions:—Mir Mahmud Khan, heir to the Khan of Kheilat, Justice Louis Jackson of Calcutta, Sir Richard Meade, Rao of Pedla in Mewar, Dr. John Muir, Dr. Brandis, Sir Rajamani Raja Deo of Madras, Justice Turner of Allahabad, Mir Ali Khan, heir of the Jam of Las-Bela; Mr. Paul, Sirdar Asad Khan, Colonel Owen Burne, Sirdar Gohar Khan, Mr. Puckle, Dr. Jameson, Sayad Vilayat Ali Khan, Colonel Mainwaring, Dr. Rajendralala Mitra, Dr. Beatson, Dr. Ross, Mr. Pogson, Dr. W. W. Hunter, Colonel Hearne, Colonel Williams, Hon. Kristodas Pal, General Cunningham, Admiral Bythelsea, Mr. Moraji Gokaldas, Colonel Walton, Colonel Moore, Tiruvarur Muttuswamaiyar, Colonel William Gordon, Inspector of Musketry, Bengal; Saleh Hindi Khan Bahadur, the Hon. Mr. Graham, Dr. Hewlett, Cettapalliam Ranja Charlu, Colonel Macgregor, Mr. R. B. Shaw, Dr. Bühler, Babu Deva Shastri, Mr. Patrick Carnegie; Mr. Gibbon, Mr. Roper Lethbridge, Babu Bhudeo Makaji, Dr. George Smith, Edinburgh, Mr. John Henry Rivett-Carnac, Captain the Hon. George Campbell Napier, Mr. Roscoe Bocquet, Mr. James Blackburn, Knt., and Pandit Nain Singh.

WITH regard to the members of the new Order the general feeling—says the Pioneer—seems to be that too much has been attempted and too little done; and that an opportunity has been lost of making reparation in some notorious instances of neglect of public benefactors. The Civil Service find occasion for sarcastic comment, and the Indian Press are unlikely to appreciate the left-handed compliment of decorating a man who has long ceased to belong to it.

WE hear no more of the complaints mentioned in a Times telegram of the shortcomings of the Indian Commissariat in the Jawaki war. Such as they were, they seem to have been due to the fact that the commissariat officers had very short notice, at the last, of the service they were required to perform. We are told indeed that Colonel Mylne, the chief commissariat officer at Peshawar, had no notice, until the last moment, of the intention to move into the field more troops than the carriage kept up for the movable column would have sufficed for. The moment he was told that more troops would move, he telegraphed to Rawal Pindi, whence all needful carriage was sent off by double marches, and would have been at Peshawar in ample time; but on reaching Attok it found the bridge over the Indus broken by the heavy floods. Getting the cattle over the river in boats was a long and tedious business. Government only sanctions the maintenance of a certain quantity of carriage at Peshawar. When more is wanted, it has to be got from a distance, generally from Pindi, whence it can reach Peshawar in four or five days at the soonest, if no extraordinary difficulties are thrown in the way.

JOAQUIM BRITTO will not be hanged after all, the Bombay Government having granted the prayer of those memorialists who are anxious he should be kept alive for the encouragement of other persons disposed to commit brutal murders. It is alleged in Britto's behalf that when he stabbed poor Roonan he was almost if not quite as insane as several of his relatives, who were actually shut up in a mad-house, and that he himself was once under restraint. But the question is, not whether he had been or might be mad, but whether he was sane enough to know the consequences of his acts.

AMONGST the general news of the week from India we glean the following items:—The Secretary for India has accepted the resignation of the Civil Service by the Hon. R. A. J. Drummond, Commissioner of the Agra Division.—An observatory is sanctioned for Diamond Island, connecting Bengal with the nearest land to the Andaman Islands. The object is to get early warning of cyclones.—Mr. H. M. Plowden has been appointed Judge of the Chief Court of the Punjab, in the place of the Hon. Mr. C. Boulnois.—On the 1st January at a private darbar held by Mr. Gibbs, the senior member of the Bombay Council, Dosabhai Framji, and Rao Sahib Mandlik were presented with the insignia of C.S.I.—Major-General the Hon. Arthur Hardinge has accepted an extension of his command of the Meerut Division until October next.—Sir Richard Temple and his staff were expected at Calcutta on the 14th instant, and would stay there as guests of the Viceroy.

ACCORDING to a Times telegram of Jan. 20, in Madras the general prospects are described as fair, but the prices are abnormally high. The number in receipt of gratuitous relief has decreased to 210,896. In Mysor the harvest of dry crops shows a very poor outturn. Mr. Bright's speech on irrigation is generally condemned. Sir A. Clarke's elaborate statement in the Council was evidently intended as a counterblast and an antidote to the mischief which might possibly ensue from Mr. Bright's representations, supported by his reputation for eloquence. Sir A. Clarke sets forth a vast array of facts and figures, which, though not always marshalled with due regard to logical sequence, indisputably support his main proposition, that railways must invariably form the chief means of insurance against famine. He shows that irrigation works have proved financially a failure, while railways have proved a financial success. He states that in no circumstances, out of the 740,000 square miles covered by British India proper, could more than 210,000 be successfully irrigated, the probable outlay of which would be £700,000,000 sterling. If this inference be correct, it concludes the question.

FROM the same source we learn that nothing of importance has transpired from the frontier. General Keyes's force left Durzai heights on the 17th and bivouacked in the Naru Khula defile. On the 16th Major Rice, commanding the Sikhs, was severely wounded. The neighbouring tribes are reported to have sent several deputations to intercede. The Jawakis and Nagas still hold out. There is a probability, however, of their soon coming to terms. There are many rival claimants for the vacant office of Akhund of Swat. Major Sandeman is on his way to England from Quettah. It is believed that he brings important proposals from the Khan of Khelat with reference to the British occupation of Quettah. These proposals are now before the Council. He states that the Baluch tribes are in no way dissatisfied with British occupation. The scheme for a frontier administration has been shelved for the present, the Viceroy's proposals being clogged with such conditions as to render the scheme worthless.

THE following items are taken from the same telegram:—

The dismissal of Sir Salar Jung's private secretary, which has caused considerable comment in Bombay, has received no official explanation. The reason is generally believed to be that Sir Salar Jung, relying on the condescension shown to him by distinguished personages in England, has assumed so defiant an attitude towards the Indian Government that it was found necessary to teach him a lesson. Domestic sorrow has forced Col. Burne, private secretary to the Viceroy, to resign. He is a man of large administrative experience and of proved ability. General regret has been caused by his resignation.

A CALCUTTA telegram of Jan. 23 states that the British expeditionary force has scoured the Jawaki country, the enemy everywhere retreating into the mountains on the approach of the troops. General Ross's force has returned to Peshawar. The Afridi tribes are pressing the Jawakis to make an unconditional surrender to the British.

ACCORDING to another telegram the Naga Hills expedition has been completely successful. Mozima, the principal village of the raiders, has unconditionally surrendered; the fine imposed has been paid, and the natives have also given up their arms and restored their plunder.

ACCORDING to a Times telegram of yesterday's date from Calcutta, the Naga disturbance has virtually ended. A telegram from the Chief Commissioner of Assam states that Mozima has paid the fines inflicted, restored the plundered mails, and surrendered the fire-arms demanded. From the North-Western frontier it is reported that 500 Daka Khel Afridis marched through the Kohat Pass in order to join the Jawakis, and fired on a British Cavalry escort, wounding a couple of horses. A later telegram states that the Afridis being very indignant have put pressure on the Jawakis to sue for terms. A deputation, accordingly, of sixty Jawakis, headed by two chiefs, have since arrived at Keyes's camp.

FROM the same source we learn that a rumour of doubtful authority, though transmitted through official channels, reports that the Amir of Kabul is massing troops at Kandahar. This, we are told, may possibly mean a menace to Persia rather than a hostile movement against us, as the Amir is actuated with an equally hostile feeling against Persia as against England, in consequence of the recent arbitration, according to which a part of Sistan was awarded to Persia. Russian envoys are represented as constantly passing to and from Kabul, being latterly, it is said, treated with much consideration. The Amir—it is added—makes no attempt to conceal his enmity to England.

ACCORDING to a Calcutta telegram of Jan. 25, the Indian Government has under consideration the creation of a native civil service for which a certain proportion of the posts at present held by English officials would in future be reserved.

THE famine news, according to the same informant, is not quite so satisfactory from Madras. The outturn of the harvest is reported in many districts as indifferent. An equally bad report comes from Mysor. In consequence of the loss of crops there is also every probability of a famine in Kashmir.

CONTRARY to its usual practice the India Office has already divulged the contents of a despatch addressed on Jan. 10 by Lord Salisbury to the Viceroy of India. After awarding the usual meed of thanks to Lord Lytton and all who aided him in dealing with the late famine, the Secretary for India goes on to say:—

It must be for some time doubtful how far the meteorological phenomena of the last twelve years are to be taken as a fair sample of the climate of India. But, in any case, it is evident that the protection of the people of India from the effects of the uncertainty of the seasons will constitute in the future no inconsiderable portion of the work of the Government. It is, therefore, a duty to collect with the utmost care all information which may assist future administrators in the task of limiting the range or mitigating the intensity of those calamities. A commission, constituted of three or five of the most competent persons your Excellency is able to select, will be the most suitable instrument for conducting this investigation. It should consist of men who have not taken any active part in the labours or controversies of the past year, and it is desirable that it should include at least one Native commissioner. It should enter upon its labours as soon as the local authorities have been released by the return of normal conditions from the pressing duties of relief.

With regard to the principle enforced by the Indian Government, that the task of distributing grain throughout the famine area should be left to the unrestricted operations of trade, Lord Salisbury remarks :—

The experience of famine relief hitherto obtained in India would seem to show that the rule observed by your Excellency is sound under ordinary circumstances, but that there are contingencies under which it cannot be sustained, especially where communications are liable to sudden interruption by the weather. In the Madras famine it appears to have been highly successful; in the Bengal famine a considerable deviation from it was found to be necessary; and its too rigid observance in the Orissa famine led to a great calamity. A careful examination, therefore, into the circumstances of its application during the past distress will be of material utility.

WITH regard to irrigation works the despatch admits their usefulness in times of drought, and has no doubt of the benefit they confer "wherever they can be had without excessive cost, and where there is a permanent and sufficient supply of water to sustain them." More than sixteen millions sterling have already been laid out on such works, and those which are now in course of construction, or which have been sanctioned, will cost £6,373,000 more. But the financial results of these undertakings have "varied remarkably." The earlier works, especially those which have been constructed in places already selected for that purpose by the earlier rulers of the country, have been "singularly profitable." According to official estimates the Eastern Jumna Canal has yielded 36 per cent. and the Western Jumna 27 per cent., no account, however, being taken of the value of the work which had been done by former rulers, or of the cost which has still to be incurred before these undertakings are complete. The irrigation works in the low countries of the Madras Presidency have also produced large returns :—

The Cauvery Delta, one of the earliest English works, is stated to have yielded 86 per cent., the Godavery Delta 21 per cent., and the Kistna Delta 15 per cent. But more recent undertakings have been very much less successful, and some, in a financial point of view, have completely failed. The Orissa Canal system and the Madras Irrigation Company's canal, stretching over a length of 749 miles, and costing together more than £3,000,000, have not only returned nothing for the money laid out upon them, but have not, up to this year, paid their working expenses. The aggregate amount of interest which has been paid by Government on account of the capital sunk on these two undertakings has been £1,400,000, making the total sum lost £4,400,000. The greatest number of acres irrigated by the Orissa Canal in any one year up to the close of 1876-77 has been 94,777; by the Madras Company's canal, 94,945. This unfortunate result is due, in some degree, to the refusal of the ryots in the vicinity of these canals to avail themselves of the water offered to them. The cause of their reluctance is imperfectly ascertained, but it probably arises from the fact that in ordinary years they enjoy sufficient rainfall to conduct their traditional methods of cultivation.

FROM the experience already gained, and from the calculations furnished by Government engineers, it is probable that the localities suited for profitable irrigation are "very limited in area, and that the list of canals which the Government can undertake without loss cannot be largely extended." Great caution, therefore, is enjoined in authorising the commencement of new works, as well as a rigid scrutiny of the grounds on which, in any instance, hopes of a remunerative yield are founded :—

In view, however, of the frequent famines of recent years it must be admitted that the value of an irrigation project is not absolutely negated by the proof that it will not yield full interest on its cost. The case is conceivable that a canal which paid little or no interest in ordinary years might in a famine year protect so large a population as to repay to Government the cost of its construction by savings in relief expenditure. The essential matter is to ascertain how far irrigation works are practicable which shall be capable of giving protection against famine in a degree at all corresponding to their cost. Very much stress has been laid, from time to time, upon the financial and other advantages to be derived from expenditure on these works, and during the past autumn the construction of them in the Madras Presidency upon a vast scale has been strenuously urged. The fact that demands of this kind have recently been made by persons of authority would of itself suffice to make a searching investigation of the question highly expedient. If there is room, by such undertakings, materially to relieve the Madras people from so much suffering and the Indian Treasury from an intolerable burden, the construction of the works ought to be commenced with the least possible delay. If, on the other hand, this resource is not to any great extent available, and any such undertaking, on the contemplated scale, would only impose fresh burdens on the taxpayers without effecting any notable diminution of the evil, it is of high importance that the evidence of that fact should be set forth with sufficient fulness and cogency to dissipate all illusion upon the subject.

In the reports which the Viceroy has forwarded from time to time Lord Salisbury finds much reason to believe that the very cause which produced the famine in many cases has made irrigation works wholly or partially ineffective, "the same want of rain which parched the fields, emptied the tanks, and lessened the volume of the rivers. The absence of glaciers in the hills of Southern India would naturally render the irrigation canals far more liable to be affected by want of rain than similar works in the valleys of the Ganges and the Indus. . . . It will be one of the most important tasks of the Commission to ascertain how far this failure extended; what was the condition, for the purposes of irrigation, during this drought, of the canals, the tanks, and the wells in the famine districts; to what extent they performed the function of protecting the population against famine, and to estimate, as far as possible, the amount of saving thus effected in the cost of the Government relief. They should also report upon the measures which may, in their judgment, be practicable for extending a similar protection to portions of the populations of Madras or Bombay, who do not now enjoy it, either by the improvement of existing works or the construction of new works. In particular, it would be desirable that they should ascertain the feasibility, both in respect to physical and to financial conditions, of Sir R. Temple's suggestion, that tanks should be made capable of containing and retaining a two years' supply of water." Lord Salisbury also adverts to the fact that "the value of railways as an assurance to the population against the worst sufferings of famine has been singularly illustrated during the past year."

ANOTHER Blue-Book on Baluchistan has just been issued. From Lord Salisbury's despatch of November 29, 1877, it appears that the Viceroy had proposed "that the frontier, (r Trans-Indus, districts of the Punjab and Sind, should be formed into a separate frontier Government of India, by a Chief Commissioner and Governor-General's Agent at Peshawar; that this officer should be charged with the general conduct of all our frontier and trans-frontier relations; that he should be provided accordingly with subordinate officers at Peshawar and Jacobabad, the latter having the special charge of the administration of the lower frontier and our relations with Baluchistan; and that the Sind and Punjab frontier forces should be amalgamated and placed under the Commander-in-Chief in India, retaining, however, their local and special character, but becoming interchangeable within the limits of the frontier Government." In the place of these proposals Lord Salisbury is prepared to sanction the following measures :

(a) The Trans-Indus districts of the Punjab and Scinde to be divided into two divisions, taking the dividing line at the point where the Belooch gives place to the Pathan.

(b) A Commissioner to be appointed over each division by the Viceroy, but in respect to all internal affairs to take his orders from the Punjab Government.

(c) The Northern Commissioner to be styled Governor-General's Agent and Frontier Commissioner; to receive the salary of a Chief Commissioner; and upon all external matters—i.e., matters concerning those who are not subjects of her Majesty, to correspond with the Viceroy direct, and be the superior of the Southern Commissioner, who upon those matters will correspond with him alone.

(d) The frontier forces, for the present at least, to be under the orders of the Governor-General's agent, not under the orders of the Commander-in-Chief.

It would be for your Excellency to decide, in respect to each class of cases whether the communications of the Frontier Commissioner should be sent under flying seal through the Punjab Government, and it would also be for your consideration whether, in view of the present financial exigency, the post of Commissioner of the Southern Division should not be filled by the Commissioner of Sind.

I do not deem it necessary to enter at present into the minor questions involved, such as the residence of the Frontier Commissioner, or the number of Deputy Commissioners, or any of the military details. Upon these points the Punjab Government should be directed to submit to your Excellency in Council, as speedily as possible, detailed proposals in conformity with the above principles, after consideration of which you will be in a position to make specific recommendations for the approval of her Majesty's Government. I trust that, having regard to existing financial exigencies, it may be found possible to establish the new organisation without any considerable increase on the present cost of administration in the Punjab and Sind.

WE are glad to see that the Victoria Cross has been conferred on Captain Andrew Scott, of the Bengal Staff Corps, "for his gallant conduct at Quetta, on July 26, 1877, while serving in the 4th Sikh Infantry, on the occasion of an attack by some Pathan coolies on Lieuts. Hewson and Kunhardt, of the Royal Engineers. On the evening of that day Captain Scott, while on duty at the regimental parade-ground of the 4th Sikh Infantry, at Quetta, hearing an alarm that British officers were being killed, spontaneously rushed to the rescue, and, finding Lieutenant Hewson cut down, and Lieutenant Kunhardt retiring, hard pressed and wounded, and only protected by Sepoy Ruchpal Singh, of the above-mentioned regiment, fell on the assailants, and with his own hand bayoneted two men, and closed with a third, who fell with him to the ground, and was killed by sepoy of the regiment. This act of courage and devotion saved the life of Lieut. Kunhardt."

MESSRS. SMITH AND ELDER have lately published a volume of poetry entitled "Constance, a Tale," which contains, to our thinking, a good deal of true poetic fire. If it be true that the anonymous author is an old Bengal officer of high mark among the "Politicals" of the old Punjab days, when the Lawrences ruled at Lahor, we may congratulate him on the bays which he has intertwined with his laurels. The poem which gives its title to the book consists of five cantos written in the good old "heroic" metre of the "Corsair" and the "Pleasures of Hope"; and it hardly needed the announcement in the preface to convince the discerning reader that it was written before Tennyson and his successors set the poetic fashions of our day. The swing and simple vigour of the versification and the very characters of the story seem to carry us back to the days of Byron and Campbell. In the Spenserian stanzas which open some of the cantos there is more than a faint reflection of Byron's strength and passion, while not a few passages in the body of the poem suggest the influence of the same master. We could wish, however, that a little more correction had been bestowed on the poem in its altered shape; especially in the matter of the rhymes. "Strown," for instance, hardly rhymes with "home," or "on" with "wrong." The story, too, is rather thin and hazy. But these are trifles compared with the real merits of a poem marked by passages of great descriptive power and rich in utterances of genuine pathos. The beauty and grandeur of the Himalayas have never before been so fitly rendered in verse. The same flow of strong, tuneful rhythm may be caught in the shorter poems, such as "The Reunion," "The Appeal," and "Lucknow;" the last reproducing the well-known story, or was it a myth? of Jessie Brown and the bagpipes. In the Appendix there is a fine fragment on some of the heroes who fell in the Mutiny.

Odds and Ends.

MAJOR CHAMPAIN, Director-in-Chief of the Indo-European Telegraph Department, has been appointed Director-General of Indian Telegraphs, left vacant by the death of Colonel Robinson.

MR. RIVERS-THOMPSON and Colonel Trevor, will, it is said, visit Calcutta early in January to confer with the Viceroy on some important administrative measures respecting British Burma.

LORD WILLIAM BERESFORD's tour of service on General Keyes's staff has terminated. He returned to Calcutta on Saturday, Dec. 15.

A PLAN and estimate have been sanctioned for the construction of a harbour at Tuticorin.

ROBERTS played his first match at Bombay on Tuesday, Dec. 18, having for his opponent a Mr. Bridger, to whom he conceded 650 points in 1,000, and won by 136 points.

THE MAHARANI SURNGMAI of KASIMBAZAR has given a donation of Rs. 2,000 to the Indian Association, in furtherance of the Civil Service movement which has been set on foot.

MR. JUSTICE PONTIFEX returned from leave on Dec. 13, and resumed his seat as a Judge of the Calcutta High Court. Mr. Justice Kennedy will probably continue to officiate until the arrival of Mr. Justice Cunningham in Jan. next.

MR. PRICE, chief clerk at the Murshidabad Government Agency, has obtained permission to bring a charge of defamation against the editor of the local paper, the Pratihar.

THE Collector of Karnul—one of the worst of the Madras Famine districts—reports that famine officers would not be required there after the 20th January.

AN observatory is sanctioned for Diamond Island, connecting the country with the nearest land to the Andaman Islands. The object is to get early warnings of cyclones.

IF Mr. Saunders retires from Mysor next year, it is understood that he will be succeeded by Mr. C. A. Aitchison, of the Foreign Office.

THE HON. D. ARBUTHNOT, Second Member of the Madras Board of Revenue, resigns the service from the 1st of January.

THE RAJAS OF BHARTPUR AND BENARES, Maharajah Sindiah, and a number of others, had arrived in Calcutta to attend the Chapter of the Star of India on the 1st current.

ACCORDING to the local paper there is still a great deal of small-pox and dengue abroad in Lucknow, both in the station and native town. Cantonments, however, are fairly free of these ailments.

MAJOR SANDERSON, the Cantonment Magistrate at Allahabad, is appointed Deputy Judge Advocate-General at Meerut.

THE latest news from Atchin looks more peaceable. The chiefs are gradually submitting, and the rural population at the most important points are settling down to their usual pursuits.

THE Burmah harvest has begun, and promises to be a very fine one.

TRUMPED-UP CHARGES.—There has been a good deal of discussion on the Macgregor case lately; and as an example of the audacity of natives in getting up a charge occasionally, and of the curious and artful way in which a grain of truth, overlaid with a mass of falsehood, is made up into an apparently consistent story, I note an event which happened to a local planter here the other day. He was surprised by a visit from an inspector of police, who informed him that a charge of assault of an aggravated nature had been preferred against him by an old man, near the plantation. The assault was said to have consisted in a sound beating administered to the old man, and an attempt to cut his throat with a large knife. The planter was puzzled for some time; but on the complainant being brought forward for the inspector to investigate the case, he recalled to mind the circumstance which had given rise to this dreadful assault. The old man had been extremely insolent one day, obstructing the passage of some of the planter's carts or his people; after warning the old fellow out of the way several times, the gentleman, finding him obstinate, turned to one of his men saying: "Turn that old fellow out of the way, and make him be quiet, for he is only annoying me; but he is an old man, so I don't want him hurt." A man thereupon took the old fellow by the shoulders and walked him off out of harm's way. Now this man had been pruning, and had his pruning-knife in his hand at the time; this fact, and the pushing off the road by the shoulders, were the sole foundation on which the complaint of assault and use of a knife was based. Of course the matter was very soon settled in this particular case; but had it occurred in an out-of-the-way place, no doubt the old fellow would have easily procured a dozen witnesses to swear that the schib thrashed him severely, and tried to cut his throat, and the planter might have been punished heavily for an aggravated assault.—Dehra Doon Correspondent of the Pioneer.

CASUALTIES BY DEATH IN THE INDIAN SERVICES, &c., REPORTED SINCE LAST PUBLICATION.

H.M.'s BRITISH FORCES IN INDIA.—Capt. J. W. LAY, of the 4th Hussars, at Rawal Pindoo, Northern India, Dec. 16. Wm. Tomkyus Grafton, Esq., late 9th Lancers, at Fellborough, Wiltshire, Jan. 16. ## INDIAN FRONTIER POLICY.

SIR JOHN ADYE has done his countrymen good service by coming forward to endorse Lord Lawrence's recent protest against the new frontier policy, which seems to have been inaugurated by the establishment of a British garrison at Quetta. Sir John's letter in the Times of Wednesday last clinches the arguments urged by Lord Lawrence against a move which has no apparent justification on military, political, or commercial grounds. What is the object of that move? Clearly, as Sir John puts it, "There is a larger question involved than the mere suppression of robbery and outrage in the Trans-Indus district." If it means anything, it means a demonstration of some sort against Russia. But a calm survey of the Russian position in Central Asia ought to convince any reasonable being of the absurdity of such a demonstration. The contrast drawn by Sir J. Abye between India's defensive strength and Russia's weakness for aggressive purposes should furnish a conclusive answer to those alarmists who are seeking to revive the craze of 1837. Let them read Sir John's letter, and then quietly ask themselves what on earth we have to fear from a Power which holds with 40,000 troops at the most, a vast tract of barren, thinly peopled, nearly roadless territory, divided from India by "a rugged and poor country, devoid of what we should call roads, inhabited by men who are brave, but ignorant, suspicious, and irascible; by men who are fanatical Mohammedans, and who particularly dislike the presence of Europeans or foreigners of any kind." Through such a country as this, Russia, weak as she is, would have to "force her way for hundreds of miles before she reaches the gates of India." Hitherto our frontier policy has been one of "conciliation, of mediation, and of subsidies." Why should this now be changed for one of coercion, and of rash advance beyond our natural frontiers?—

It is true that by a clause in the Treaty of 1854 we have authority to occupy positions in Beloochistan, but, perhaps, the best proof of our wisdom has been that until now the permission has not been acted on. A permanent English garrison at Quetta must inevitably alter the aspect of our frontier policy. Should troubles arise, its isolated position would at once render it a source of anxiety, and it must be either strengthened or evacuated. But, in truth, the establishment of a considerable English force in a fortified and important post in the territories of a foreign Power means nothing short of domination—a domination which must insensibly grow, and the limits of which it is almost impossible to foresee. Herein lies its danger. Lord Napier speaks of it as the "safeguard of a legitimate and useful influence." But delicately-worded phrases cannot alter the significance of material facts; we no longer hold a well-defined frontier line, but stand, as it were, in a maze of mountains, inhabited by restless, warlike fanatics. It is very easy to say that the ruler and people of Beloochistan acquiesce, but our knowledge and experience are all opposed to any such conclusion. The very circumstances related in the last Gazette by which Captain Scott gained the Victoria Cross in saving the life of an Engineer officer, another having been assassinated, by Pathans at Quetta, in July, 1877, afford strong proof of the temper with which our presence is received.

If the occupation of Quetta produced no worse result than the estrangement and ill-will of our Afghan neighbours it would stand sufficiently condemned. As a precaution against the supposed designs of a distant Power in Central Asia it is absurdly premature. As an encouragement to the trade of neighbouring countries, it is wholly superfluous while that trade passes through Afghanistan; and as a military measure it can only be deemed a blunder of the first magnitude.

THE NEW COMMITTEE ON INDIAN PUBLIC WORKS.

LORD GEORGE HAMILTON's speech on Tuesday in the House of Commons, and the discussion which followed it, served to throw some necessary light on the motion which the Under-Secretary for India had previously promised to make. In moving the appointment of a select committee "to inquire into and report on the expediency of constructing public works in India with money raised on loan," Lord George took his time in reaching what we may call the point of his explanations. It was not till he had gone through an elaborate history of the public works undertaken in India during the last twenty years, and had done his best to influence his hearers against Sir Arthur Cotton's irrigation schemes, that he set himself to explain what he wanted the Select Committee to do. They are to inquire, it seems, into "the results of our irrigation works; to obtain from officers connected with public works the causes of their failure, and to see whether the principle of forecasts on which their receipts are estimated is sound or not." The Committee are also left to "satisfy themselves as to the comparative merits of railroads and canals." Read even by this light the proposed inquiry seemed hardly to bear out the reference in the Royal Message to an inquiry into "the measures most proper to diminish the danger of such calamities (i.e. famines) for the future." What are the measures most proper for that end? That is the question raised by the words just quoted, and not the question whether railways or canals pay best. We want to know how famines may best be prevented, and Lord George invites us to consider the causes of the alleged failure of certain irrigation works. There are other preventive means to consider besides canals and railways; other ends to aim at besides due interest on capital outlay. The saving of a million lives, for instance, as Mr. Bright contended, should count for something on the credit side of a public work which financially might seem a failure. The fact that some costly mistakes have been made in constructing particular canals proves nothing against the general usefulness of irrigation as a remedy for drought. Have not some famines been intensified by the heavy pressure of the land-revenue assessments on hosts of needy rayats? Mr. Fawcett's amendment proposed too wide a range of topics for a single committee, but the moving of it availed to draw from the Under-Secretary a concession which may keep the coming inquiry from altogether missing its supposed mark. The Committee are to report on the questions prepared for them, "both as regards financial results and the prevention of famine." Meanwhile the Local Commission ordered by Lord Salisbury to consider certain questions raised by the Madras famine will help in its own way to further the ends desired by all well-wishers to the English rule in India.

THE last section of the Holkar State Railway from Choral to Mhow was to be formally opened on the 1st of January.

SNAKE LORE.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—The following extract from "White's Selborne" may be interesting:—"Several intelligent folks assure me that they have seen the viper open her mouth and admit her helpless young down her throat on sudden surprises, just as the female opossum does her brood into the pouch under her belly upon the like emergencies; and yet the London viper-catchers insist on it that no such thing ever happens."—Yours obediently.

THE FINANCIAL STATEMENT.

The Pioneer observes that Famine taxation will take the two-fold form of a land cess to reach the agricultural classes, and a trade or license-tax to tap the commercial interest; and these new burdens are henceforward to be a regular feature in our fiscal administration, and their proceeds will be regarded as appropriated to the prevention or mitigation of famine. A land cess equivalent to one per cent. on gross annual rental, or about two per cent. on net profits, together with a graduated license-tax, varying from one rupee per annum to two hundred rupees as the highest possible contribution, limited in every case to two per cent. on annual profits, and with total exemption in favour of those who would be assessed at less than one rupee on this scale, are briefly the terms of the new taxation throughout India. These, with the gains to be obtained, without any taxation at all, from the development of the decentralisation scheme, and those to be secured by a most important and valuable fiscal reform, to be noticed presently, will suffice, not only to meet all reasonable charges that may henceforward be expected to recur periodically with the return of famine, but also to provide a yearly surplus, small, but enough to put the finances of the country on a sounder footing than they have ever yet attained. The fiscal reform to which we have just referred is not the least important or the least striking of the surprises prepared for the lieges by Sir John Strachey. It is one that, in Northern India at least, will be received with acclamation; and we hope that, even in the south and west, the obvious advantages that must ultimately accrue to all parts from its adoption will atone for its slight immediate pressure. The reform is no less than the equalisation of the salt tax throughout India, and the subsequent abolition of that disgrace to British rule, the Inland Customs' line. The absolute equalisation cannot be carried into effect at once; but the immediate result of the present legislation is to be the reduction of the rate in Bengal by two annas a maund, and of that in the North-West Provinces by four annas. This valuable remission will affect all those vast populations north and east of the Customs' line. Even in Madras and Bombay, where the rate is to be immediately raised to two rupees eight annas, the increased incidence will not be much more than one anna per annum per head of population, that being ever spread over the whole year in infinitesimal fractions. Furthermore, as this increase in the Madras and Bombay salt rates falls mainly on the agricultural classes, it will be accepted, in conjunction with the present distress felt in those presidencies from the recent famine, as a sufficient reason for exempting those portions of India from the additional taxation on the landed interest which is to be levied in all other parts of the country. Such a change being obviously necessary at some time or other, and being certain (whenever it might come) to fall at first on the inhabitants of Southern and Western India—it was a happy thought which suggested its introduction just now, in lieu of the land cess that must otherwise in justice have been imposed on Madras and Bombay as well as on Northern India and Bengal.

THE RAYAT AND THE MONEY LENDER.

The Times of India remarks that as it is, the three years within which a suit must be brought to recover on a bond is generally a sufficiently long period to allow of the interest accumulating to the full extent of the principal. So that nearly one-half of the indebtedness of the cultivating classes consists of the insurance they have to pay for the risks incurred in advancing the loans. To diminish these risks should then be one of the first objects of legislation. It is, indeed, a very serious consideration, and one that very greatly affects the question even from this point of view, that so much suspicion attaches to the statement of accounts, between Marwarree and ryot. The ryot generally has to go some little distance from his native hamlet, to find the obliging capitalist who will accommodate him with a loan. He takes, perhaps, a friend or two from his own village with him, but generally he has no one at hand of sufficient astuteness or sufficient training to examine the accuracy of the document by which he binds himself. And thus he is in most cases dependent upon the good faith of a sowkar—whose very raison d'être it seems to be to fleece the poor—and in the integrity of a strange writer in the habitual employ and wholly in the interests of the other party. The witnesses look on open-mouthed while the mysterious document is in preparation; they touch the pen when it is concluded, and go their way perfectly convinced that they have done everything that could possibly be expected of them. For three years the debtor never troubles himself except to make occasional payments, or to transfer to his creditor a head or two of cattle to silence his importunities. The sowkar with many protestations assures his debtor that all such payments are duly credited, and it is not till the debt is nearly time-barred, that the wretched Kunbi is startled by a notice to pay a sum nearly double the amount that he received. His witnesses have forgotten all about the matter by that time, and it is impossible for him to appeal to them to show how much he received, or the terms he had accepted. He has no evidence as to his payments, for he was lulled into security by the assurance of the conscientious sowkar that all payments had been duly endorsed upon the bond. He has then one of three courses to adopt—either to lie desperately and protest that he never went near the sowkar's and never contracted any such debt at all, and so cling to the chance that the sowkar may not be able to prove execution satisfactorily, or to come into Court and tell the truth, without the slightest possibility of being believed, or lastly, to save himself further trouble and expense, to admit the whole claim and put in no appearance whatsoever. Now all these courses might, it seems, be avoided by giving the debtor some chance of detecting and exposing the monstrous misstatements of accounts while they are yet recent and susceptible of exposure. It is not to be expected that such means should be forthcoming after a lapse of three years, nor is it possible that a ryot should be able to dispute and disprove the Marwarree's accounts, when those accounts are kept solely in the Marwarree's hands, without any opportunity being given to the debtor, either of examining their correctness himself, or getting them examined by any competent person on his behalf. The Marwarree has the whip hand of him. The Marwarree keeps the bond; and the debtor never has an opportunity of inspecting it; the Marwarree writes the accounts according to his own sweet will; and the debtor cannot take them away and get them tested at his leisure. The bond-writer enacts with perfect impunity, for the benefit of his patron, the reverse of the role of the Unjust Steward. If the debtor admit to owing fifty measures of wheat, the bond writer takes his bill and writes down quickly one hundred measures—and the ryot is none the wiser. But all these complaints, and the very serious injury to both classes that arise from them, might be averted by what seems to us a very simple and practicable expedient. If the stamped papers on which bonds are written were made to consist of two parts with a perforated division, such as is common in cheque books and the like, and if when the bond was written on one of such parts in full, the essentials of the contract were recorded according to some prescribed form on the other part of the paper—that other part could be severed from the bond and given to the obligor at the time, and he could preserve it as a genuine counterpart of the original.

THE ORDER OF THE INDIAN EMPIRE.

The new Order of the "Indian Empire," which was inaugurated at Calcutta on the 1st of the New Year, appearing simultaneously with its sister constellation of the "Imperial Crown of India," has on its first creation been only bestowed on three officers of her Majesty's Army—viz.: Colonel Sir Richard Meade, K.C.S.I., Bengal Staff Corps, Chief Commissioner of Mysor and Coorg; Major-General Alexander Cunningham, C.S.I., Director-General of the Archaeological Survey of India; and Lieutenant-Colonel Owen Tudor Burne, C.S.I., half-pay, late 20th Foot, late Private Secretary to the Viceroy of India. Sir Richard Meade, who was a pupil of the Royal Naval School at New Cross, joined the Bengal Infantry in 1838, and first came into notice at the time of the Indian Mutiny, when he raised and commanded a regiment of cavalry. He was brigade-major of the Gwalior Contingent when its mutiny took place in June, 1859, and after serving in the Central Indian campaign at the capture of Gwalior and other operations, commanded a flying column which pursued and finally captured the notorious rebel leader, Tantia Toppe. After the Mutiny he was appointed political agent at Gwalior, and was subsequently agent for the Governor-General in Central India, from December, 1861, to February, 1870, when he received his present appointment as Chief Commissioner of Mysor and Coorg. Major-General Alexander Cunningham, C.S.I., joined the Bengal Engineers in June, 1831, from the late East India College at Addiscombe, and served as a subaltern in the Gwalior campaign of 1843, including the battle of Punnar (bronze star). He was subsequently aide-de-camp to Lord Auckand, when Governor-General of India, and served throughout the Punjab campaign of 1848-49, including the battles of Chillianwallah and Goojerat (medal with two clasps, brevet of major, and mentioned in despatches). General Cunningham, after serving in command of the Engineers at Lucknow and in British Burmah, retired on full-pay with the rank of major-general, and was subsequently appointed by the India Office Director-General of Archaeology in India. He is the author of several works on Indian archaeology and folk-lore, and is a fellow of the Geographical and Asiatic Societies. Lieutenant-Colonel Owen Tudor Burne, c.s.i., entered the Service in 1855, and served as adjutant of the 20th Regiment in the Indian Mutiny, and also as brigade-major to the force under Brigadier Eveleigh, his services obtaining frequent mention in despatches, promotion to an unattached company, and a brevet majority. In 1861 he was appointed Military Secretary to Lord Strathnairn when Commander-in-Chief in India, accompanied Lord Strathnairn to England in 1865, and remained on his staff during his service as Commander-in-Chief in Ireland, receiving the thanks of the authorities for his services during the Fenian disturbances. In 1868 he proceeded to India with the Earl of Mayo, and served with him as Private Secretary until the assassination of the Governor-General, in 1872. Colonel Burne, who was with his chief on that sad occasion, received the thanks of the Indian Government, was promoted to an unattached majority, and appointed a c.s.i. He has been subsequently Private Secretary to the present Governor-General, and will shortly take his seat at the Indian Council.

SIR JOHN STRACHEY'S BUDGET STATEMENTS.

FAMINE INSURANCE.

In the course of his statement before the Viceroy's Council, on December 27, Sir John Strachey said :—

Without troubling the Council with further details I have said enough to show that the actual cost of a famine must, to the end, be the subject of estimate rather than account.

The Bengal Famine of 1874 is, in this way, estimated to have cost £6,750,000, and the famine in Southern India, which in March last was expected to cost £5,250,000, is now estimated to cost £9,250,000, making a charge of £16,000,000 for famine relief in the five years from 1873 to 1877.

The serious character of such a fact can hardly be exaggerated; its gravity becomes more apparent when it is understood that, by the end of the current year, the public debt of India will be larger by at least £16,000,000, and the annual charge for interest by £640,000, than they would have been if there had been no famine in these five years. I make no attempt to estimate the vast waste of private capital due to the same causes.

Happily, there are grounds for believing that this has been a period of exceptional disaster. Famines are, indeed, so far from being uncommon occurrences in India, that scarcely a year passes without distress in some part of the country; but their frequency, severity, and extent during the last few years have exceeded what past experience would lead us to expect hereafter. Moreover, we trust that we are constantly learning more of the best and most economical way of dealing with these calamities; that every famine wisely administered will leave behind it works which will tend to make similar future difficulties less serious and less costly; that the material improvements we otherwise continue to make will enable the country to bear the effects of drought more and more easily; and we may hope that the cost of famine relief will hence be less in the future than it has been in the past.

Making all allowances for these considerations, I cannot now venture to estimate the yearly average cost of famines in loss of Revenue and actual expenditure at less than £1,500,000. This amount has necessarily been arrived at in a somewhat arbitrary manner, and it will be seen to correspond approximately with the sum that would be requisite to distribute the charges of the last five years over a period of ten years. It will remain for the Government in the future to reconsider, from time to time, the practical result of the assumption which we are now constrained to make on what are necessarily imperfect grounds, and to take all requisite steps in the way of correcting any error into which further experience may indicate that we have fallen, either in the one direction or the other.

What, then, we have now to do is to improve our financial condition as it was at the beginning of the present year, by £1,500,000 a year on account of famine alone. This, however, is not all.

Successive Secretaries of State have urged the Government of India to provide a margin on our annual estimates of from half-a-million to a million sterling, some such moderate surplus on the ordinary account being obviously necessary to enable us to meet those contingencies to which every great Government is always liable, and which cannot be foreseen, and to provide the means for carrying out administrative and other improvements. The latest injunction upon this subject was given in a despatch of October, 1877, reviewing the financial arrangements of the present year, which contained also the renewed recognition by her Majesty's Government of the duty of making definite provision for the cost of famine. Inasmuch, therefore, as at the time when the present famine began our income did little more than suffice to meet the charges, even if that was secured, I consider that our revenue were on the whole about £2,000,000 a year, short of what was necessary. We required £1,500,000 for famine, and at the very least £500,000 of ordinary surplus.

MILITARY CHARGES.

Turning to the military expenditure, I examined in some detail in my Minute laid before the Council on the 15th March the accounts of the army. I showed that it now costs upwards of £17,000,000 a year; that its cost has increased by upwards of £1,000,000 since 1875-76; and that a large share of this increase is in the expenditure recorded in the Home Accounts. I need not recapitulate the details thus reviewed, but I will repeat the conclusion which I then stated as follow :—

"The Government of India must certainly endeavour to find the means of meeting the increased Military charges, some of which are apparently inevitable, by economies in other departments of the Military Service; this endeavour must be largely dependent for success upon the support of her Majesty's Government. I do not assert that the whole of the additional expenditure on the Army has not been incurred for excellent objects, or that it could have been avoided; but, that the Indian Revenues are liable to have great charges thrown upon them without the Government of India being consulted, and almost without any power of remonstrance, is a fact, the gravity of which can hardly be exaggerated."

We have not neglected this matter during the year; it has been the subject of elaborate inquiry, the results of which have still to be considered. Whether we shall be able to carry out reductions which some high authorities have advocated, depends upon considerations, the effect of which on the ultimate conclusions of the Government I cannot now foresee. Judging from the past, we may esteem ourselves fortunate if further additions to the Home Military charges are not thrown upon us; but what is possible on our part to prevent such a result shall certainly be done. We know that we may rely upon the support of the Secretary of State in securing this object, and we may hope that some reconsideration of the burden thrown upon us on account of this branch of charge may be found possible, which shall lead to an arrangement more consistent with our own views of what is equitable to India. Meanwhile, for its immediate need, the Government of India can plainly not count upon any material saving in our military charges.

THE JAWAKI CAMPAIGN.

CAMP, SHERGASHA, Dec. 23.—The troops in camp are at present employed at manual labour, road-making being the order of the day. The new road over the Shergasha Ridge has been completed, and we have now attacked the old one, and are rapidly making a respectable thoroughfare of it. So anxious are the authorities to finish it quickly, that the working parties of the different regiments have been increased to reliefs of 100 men each, and the work will be completed in a very short time. The gradients of the first road are excessively steep, and the soil is very unfavourable for traffic in wet weather. Our last road is also much shorter than the other, and altogether it promises to be the favourite one. I wonder what our Jawaki friends will think of it? They heard we are making roads through the hills here, and by all accounts they are dreadfully disgusted at the energy of the Sircar. The British are said to leave their mark wherever they go, and the Boriwals would certainly find it very difficult to destroy our roads, which seem to have been made so as to defy any attempts in that direction on the part of the enemy. Talking of the enemy, allow me to tell you the story of a friend. Scene: Twelve midnight in camp. Native Sentry. "Halt, who come dar?" Stranger: "Friend." Native Sentry (who jumbles up countersign and parole); "Halt, friend, advance one and give the county parole." Friend: "Arrah, thin, is it the County Cork ye mane?" The answer of the sentry to the friend's question has not been recorded, but entre nous the friend had been dining out. If our reconnaissance comes off to-morrow, I will tell you all about it in my next letter.—Pioneer Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

ANNIVERSARY OF THE PROCLAMATION.—A request was sent round to the principal householders of Calcutta, asking them to illuminate their house on the evening of the 1st of January. The public buildings were illuminated.

THE VICEROY.—On Christmas Day the Viceroy and Lady Lytton paid a visit to the Sailors' Home. The Home was very prettily decorated with bunting, and the tars received their Excellencies with unbounded enthusiasm. The Viceroy gave the sailors a Christmas present of a pound of tobacco each, and their Christmas cake. The condition of the Home was considered by the illustrious visitors to be on the whole most satisfactory.

TELEGRAPHIC DEPARTMENT.—Experiments have lately been made by Mr. Brough, the Officiating Electrical Superintendent of Government Telegraphs, in duplex telegraphy between Bombay and Calcutta, which showed that it was necessary to have a repeating station at Jubbulpore.

THE BENGAL MILITARY SECRETARIAT.—On the recommendation of the Government of India, the Secretary of State has sanctioned a special invalid pension of Rs. 350 a month to Mr. C. F. Rutledge, Registrar in the Military Secretary's office of the Government of India. Mr. Rutledge has served the Government altogether for upwards of forty-two years.

BEHAR.—A new postal circle, involving a small decrease of expenditure in consequence of savings in other departmental expenditure, is about to be created in Behar. The Behar paper states that the Calcutta High Court has submitted to Government a fresh scheme for the grading of the subordinate judicial service. The Court proposes that there should be five grades of munsiffs, instead of three, as at present, the pay of the lowest grade being Rs. 150 per mensem.

CHRISTMAS AMUSEMENTS AT CALCUTTA.—The last week of the old year was signalled by a ball at Belvedere on Dec. 26, and another on the 31st, with an assembly on the 28th, were enough to please the most enthusiastic of dancers, and the races on the 24th, 27th and 29th gave plenty of excitement for anyone who had the leisure to give himself three half-holidays. The attendance at the races was very good on all three days, and the whole meeting has been successful.—Pioneer Mail Calcutta Correspondent.

TECHNICAL EDUCATION.—We wrote privately a day or two ago, to a high authority on education amongst us, to ascertain what his views were as to the wisdom and practicability of converting some of our schools into schools for teaching the mechanical arts. His reply is now before us:—"I do not see my way quite clearly on the question of technical education, I confess. But, in my humble opinion, our University education is a sham. Our B.A.s and M.A.s are unable to think or write anything; they have only a respectable amount of mathematics; no philosophy, and no literature."—Statesman, Dec. 20.

CHITTAGONG: FIRE AT A MONASTERY.—On Dec. 29 the Presbytery and Orphanage of the Benedictine monks at Chittagong were burnt down. The Roman Catholic priests of the Vicariate of Eastern Bengal, says a contemporary, are all Englishmen from the Benedictine Monastery at Ramsgate. They have only recently come to this country, and this accident, almost at starting, is a heavy blow to them, and will, it is greatly feared, materially retard one of the most important objects they were projecting—the establishment of a first-class school in this part of Bengal. The fire, it is said, broke out in a bustee behind the dak bungalow, and, owing to a high wind, spread rapidly, burning down to ruins the Mission buildings, notwithstanding the efforts made to save them. The mishap occurred at midday.

BHUTAN.—The Darjeeling paper gives further information regarding the condition of affairs in Bhutan, and says that there is every prospect of a civil war soon breaking out there, unless the Indian Government should interfere. "The present Government in Bhutan has never been a strong one, and the Penlows are practically the rulers; while both the Dharma and Deb Rajahs are little more than lay figures. It was owing to the real Government of Bhutan being in the hands of a number of Penlows that our last misunderstanding, and by no means creditable (to us) war, with that country arose. The present Pharo Penlow, the same man who figured so prominently in our war with Bhutan, is now asserting himself against the rajahs; and the latter are anxious for British assistance to put him down. The Pharo Penlow was the ringleader in the terrible insult offered to our embassy, which (without a sufficient escort) had been into Bhutan to try and so arrange the matters in dispute as to avoid an invasion of the country. The Pharo Penlow was also morally responsible for our war with Bhutan. With the internal quarrels in Bhutan we appear to have little or nothing to do one way or the other, so long as both belligerents keep the peace towards us. The Behar paper announces that no compulsory irrigation cess will be imposed in Behar at present.

THE NAGAS.—According to the Pioneer, the little affair going on in the Naga Hills affords a curious contrast, in some respects, to the more imposing transactions in Jawakiland. While generals and elephant batteries go out against the north-west tribes, policemen and lieutenants are appointed to deal with similar difficulties in the north-east. The preparations in this case having been cut a little too fine, the force pauses for reinforcements, and is to be strengthened by a supplementary corps d'armee of one hundred men. It is not in any trouble; it has suffered no losses or reverses, but finding several other sections of the Naga tribes making common cause with those against whom it is operating, the original handful of troops are not quite strong enough to grapple with the emergency. To make them strong enough they want not half-a-dozen more regiments, but an extra hundred men. Probably the Afridis are more dangerous foes than the Nagas, and better armed; and we may be sure that every man engaged on our side in the Jowaki war is as good a man as any other on the north-east frontier or elsewhere. Nor are we called on to assume that Assam troops are cleverer than Punjabis in dealing with an enemy, but merely to take note of the difference between the systems in force in the east and the west. Outside critics, away from any scene of warlike operations, must always of course feel immense diffidence in suggesting that the force is larger than the difficulties before it require; but clearly it must be possible, in all warfare with savages, to overshoot the mark in aiming at making the results quite certain. Where they would be equally certain with a handier force, it is not unreasonable to suppose that a handier force might achieve them more quickly."

KABUL AND THE FRONTIER.—With regard of the affairs of Kabul we understand that the Amir did not move any troops or even order them to be moved towards Quettah, as was reported frequently that he had done. There is not any truth in the report, and many similar statements have been made regarding the sayings and doings of the Amir; the rumours of his hostility, and especially his hostile movement of troops, are nothing more than bazaar gup, which never ought to have been published, and certainly not credited. The Government of India has contradicted these rumours, but not so effectually as might have been done; but there is no foundation for any of them. The story of the proceedings of the Amir with regard to writers for the press, some of whom he is reported to have hung, has no solid foundation either. One of the secretaries of the Amir was proved to have been guilty of carrying on secret correspondence and writing falsely of his master, and as the writings were found in his possession the Amir asked his advisers what should be done to the man, and they replied "let him be stoned," and stoned he was accordingly, a retribution which he must have anticipated. The Amir of Kabul is like the Khan of Khelat, a Chief of Chiefs, more powerful than he of Khelat, but not so powerful, apparently, as the native writers for the Lahor paper have ingeniously made him out to be. He has an army of trained men, numbering 20,000, with a militia of about 30,000, who are, of course, a very wild and rough lot. That the Amir is dissatisfied with the Government of India is very probable, inasmuch as he has not received all that he expected in the shape of arms; but if he had been made as great a man as he hoped to have been his subjects would, probably, have been the sufferers, as his disposition is eminently tyrannical, a failing which is intensified by his exceedingly bad temper, which displays itself in a variety of ways and on any occasion. Russian intrigue is a matter about which we have heard and been left to suspect a good deal more, but we believe that no Russian has been or is in Kabul, though some messengers who have been called agents may have been sent to Kabul to learn the news. The Amir necessarily fears the approach of the Russians, inasmuch as a great part of his territories is exposed to their attack, but there is no evidence, as far as we can discover, and judiciously considered there can be none, that the Russians have made the inroads into Cabul and the Amir's affairs, as is commonly believed. Russophobia has incultated a belief in much more than Russia has yet taken into consideration. The Amir and the Khan of Khelat and all the Chiefs of both Afghanistan and Beloochistan take great interest in the war that is now going on, and the rapid advances of Russia in Armenia might possibly affect our prestige in the East, as far as Chiefs are concerned, but at the same time the people are rejoiced in having peace and order where anarchy formerly prevailed, and the advances that our troops are making will show the Chiefs that we are as ready as ever to display our power; but our prestige is not, we should suppose, in question just yet, and to do any more now would be a desperate because a useless proceeding. We might write much more on these topics, but have only space left to mention that the question of the separation of Sind from Bombay is exactly where it was several months ago, and that, we believe, is in a pigeon-hole in the India-office in London. Whether there will be a frontier province too is very uncertain. A few weeks ago we suggested that the ultimate decision of that matter would be left till the result of the war in Turkey was known; and that, we believe, is likely to be the time to which the determination of that question is left.—Sind Beacon, Dec. 28.

SIR ANDREW CLARKE AND THE MADRAS HARBOUR.

Major Thomason, R.E., arrived in Madras on Dec. 18, from Calcutta, to collect professional data regarding the harbour scheme, in anticipation of the arrival of Sir Andrew Clarke, R.E., about the middle of the next month. His instructions from Sir Andrew are, according to the local Mail, as follows:—As regards the engineering aspects of the question, the main points for his inquiry will be under the following heads:—The general directions, duration and force of the prevailing winds in the Bay of Bengal, as affecting the Roadstead of Madras. Also the tides and currents, especially the local currents. The silt-bearing qualities of the water in the immediate vicinity of the commenced harbour works. The direction of the silt deposits, more especially as shown by the deposit on the foreshore resulting from the portions of the piers already constructed, comparing, if possible, the actual contours of the foreshore with records of what existed previous to the commencement of the works. The practicability of removing, by means of dredging or otherwise, such deposits of silt which, to the detriment of the harbour, may occur in or near it; the effects of the waves and currents on the portions of the piers already constructed; the determination of the nature of the sea-bed in and near the proposed works as affecting moorings, &c.; to ascertain as far as practicable the varying depths below the surface at which dead water may be looked for. The probable effects, from a sanitary point of view, of the proposed piers on the sewage from the town discharged into the sea at or near the proposed piers. The estimation from the results of experience hitherto, of probable excesses or savings in actual construction as compared with the estimates already submitted. To view the question from a financial standpoint it will be necessary to collect information—As to the number of ships at present resorting to the harbour, their tonnage, &c. The present cost of lighterage as compared with probable cost of lading and unlading when a successful harbour shall have been completed. The probable revenue to be expected from the completed harbour in the form of harbour mooring and wharfage dues. Inquiries should also be made with a view to determine to what extent the interests of the mercantile community will be affected, and thereby to what extent the cost of the proposed works should be recovered from port dues, &c., from the Provincial Funds, or be considered a fair charge on the Imperial revenues. Nautical opinions and data should be collected. As to the probable difficulties, to ships under steam or sail, of entering or leaving the proposed harbour. The probable dangers to the entering and moored ships. The number of ships that may be safely moored in the harbour ordinarily and in times of emergency. The possibility of danger to ships already moored from the action of high waves entering the harboured mouth and of wind in cyclones.

Miscellaneous.

BANGALORE.—A ball was given by the residents of Bangalore to Major-General and Mrs. Bruce on their leaving the station.

BURMAH.—Burmah is promised the excitement of a divorce case, in which also is involved the partition of property worth a lakh of rupees. The parties to the suit are native Burmese, and some very important questions of Burmese law are likely to arise in the case. It is said that the attorney for the petitioner, the wife, proposes to engage barristers from Calcutta.

THE LATE SHOOTING OF A NATIVE.—It is now stated that it was not Mr. F. H. B. Skrine, the Bengal Civilian at present employed on famine duty in Madras, who was charged in November last with having accidentally shot a native when out shooting, but another gentleman of the same name belonging to the Madras Presidency.

DEATH OF COLONEL A. F. WILLIAMS.—The Madras papers record the death, at the General Hospital, on Dec. 27, from acute dysentery, of Colonel Augustus Frederick Williams, of the Madras Staff Corps, wing commander (2nd in Command), 14th M.N.I. The deceased officer obtained his commission in the army on the 4th Feb., 1846, and was appointed to the Staff on the 12th September, 1866. The official "Army List" shows that on the 29th November, 1875, he obtained two years' leave to proceed to Europe, so that he must recently have returned to India, and, as his death shows, had not benefited by the change. The late Colonel Williams served during the Burmese war, 1852-53, and was present at operations before, and an attack on Rangoon on the 11th, 12th, 13th, and 14th April, 1852. He received a medal for Pegu, and was employed with field detachments on the Hyderabad frontier from 16th November, 1858, to 12th March, 1859.

RUMOURED OFFICIAL CHANGES.—There is some probability, it seems, that Mr. C. B. Saunders will shortly retire from the Chief Commissionership of Mysor. If that should happen, a good many changes are talked of as likely to be made. It is suggested that Mr. Aitchison would perhaps go to Mysor, in which case Mr. Alfred Lyall would probably replace him at the Foreign Office. Mr. Aitchison has been spoken of for the Chief Commissionership of Assam, which would no doubt be offered for his acceptance if Colonel Keatinge goes home on leave next spring; but the other arrangement with Mysor would supersede this, in which case either Mr. Stuart Bayley or Lord Ulick Browne would be likely to have Assam. Of course, officially speaking, all this speculation is premature. Colonel Keatinge, indeed, has not yet formally intimated his intention of making a vacancy in Assam; but the reader may be meanwhile interested in knowing the course expectation is taking in circles where appointments of this nature are fairly likely to be divined beforehand.

LOCUSTS.—Mr. Price, Acting Collector of Kadapah, reports with much regret the appearance, in portions of the Kadapah and Pulivendla Taluks, of flights of insects which appear to be locusts, and which, wherever they settle, entirely destroy the crops. He writes:—"I have had some samples of ragi and cumboo so injured, and some specimens of the insects brought in to me. The former were completely destroyed. The leaves had not only been eaten off, but the stalks had been nipped down and the ears devoured. The insects seemed to be of two varieties, both much like a grasshopper, but considerably larger. I suppose that they must be the locust, though they differ in size and colour from the African species. The men who came in told me that these pests appeared about twenty days ago; that they, when on the crops, are so thick as to look 'like a red cloud,' and that wherever they settle everything green is eaten up by them. The damage done appears to be comparatively very severe, but to be at present confined to a small area. I will make further inquiries and report the result. I fear that nothing can be done to relieve us of this new trouble. I suggested brushing the insects into baskets and burning them, but the people said they were

LADY CHAMBERLAIN'S CHRISTMAS BALL.—A general brightness (writes the correspondent of the Pioneer) pervaded Lady Chamberlain's at-home, given on the night of Dec. 26. Some excellent dancers were present; and in one or two instances "grace of movement" was really well exemplified. A ball in India is the one romantic thing to be found in the country. The rooms are large and lofty, and exquisitely decorated with leaves and creepers, the wide doors and open windows look out on a wilderness of green, on waving palms and cocoanuts, which acquire some grace under the stars, or touched by the brilliant rays of the moon. At the Commander-in-Chief's the supper was laid in tents in the compound, gazing from whence you were struck by the bright touches of scarlet and gold, of dark blue, of pale blue with silver, moving to and fro in a mass of snowy draperies and shining silks. In Russia such effects are produced by wonderful conservatories, radiant with flowers and marvellous exotics, but nothing can buy the beautiful deep colour of an Eastern sky, or vie with the richness of verdure and the exquisite effects produced by an Eastern moon. Indoors the romance was partly destroyed by ungraceful dancing and intense heat. A few of the dancers were "spinning machines of ugliness." On others the heat seemed to have a withering effect, and turned many bright faces into pale and haggard ones. Still Lady Chamberlain's ball was a brilliant one, and it is to be hoped some equally good dances may follow. The Durbar will be a good beginning for the New Year, and the public ball which is to come off shortly will be amusing in more senses than one. It is a pity we cannot have more private concerts. There is some excellent musical talent in Madras at this present moment, and we boast of many pianists with souls above "scrambling, thundering, and arpeggios," and who are capable of delighting us with true harmony as distinguished from "blurred, discordant noises." But a word of advice by no means new to music lovers. In Madras, as elsewhere, there will be little good music played until music ceases to be a mere cover for conversation.

THE HOLKAR STATE RAILWAY.

The completion of the Holkar State Railway is at last unfurling; the first train passed through from Choral Chowkie to Mhow on Wednesday afternoon, carrying in it the Prime Minister to H.H. Holkar, accompanied by Mr. A. C. Cregeen, the Executive Engineer of the Ghat Division, his assistant, Mr. Floyd, and Mr. J. Durrand, sub-Engineer. The engine was decorated with flags and evergreens, and was intended to make a gay appearance on entering Mhow. The Fates were adverse, however, for, on the train mounting the one in forty incline, the sparks from the engine set fire to the flags, and so frustrated the pleasing fancy. The great obstacle to the earlier completion of the Ghat section has been tunnel No. 2, and how trying this work has been to all who have had anything to do with it may be easily imagined from the time it has taken to master it. The tunnel in itself is of no great length; but the character of the rock of which it is composed, and the peculiar position in which it was found to set, combined with its extreme friability, have all contained elements of difficulty, such as were never looked for, and have baffled all attempts to cope with, till at last it was found that the only way to deal with it successfully was to reduce it first to a cutting, and afterwards run an arch through. This has at last been accomplished, but not without a very heavy outlay, some injury to human life and limb, and a considerable trial of the patience, skill, and energies of the executive engineer and his subordinate, Mr. Durrand. Happily, however, the job is at last accomplished; and if this circumstance should afford, in however infinitesimal a degree, any satisfaction to the public at large, I will gladly leave them to imagine what must be the present feelings of those with whom rested the responsibility, care, and anxiety of carrying it to a conclusion. If there is one thing, however, in connection with the accomplishment of this truly great work which is wanting, and felt to be unnecessarily wanting, it is, as is usual in such matters, the observance of the ceremony of its opening with some éclat. Had it been a guaranteed line, there would have been some smart ceremony in connection with the opening. Government, however, being concerned, the affair is to come off like any ordinary event, though the event is one really of no ordinary character. I understand trains will run through daily, but the formal opening will not take place before the 1st proximo.—

Miscellaneous.

DEPARTURE OF H.M.'s INDIAN TROOPSHIP "SERAPIS."—Her Majesty's Indian troopship Serapis, 4,173 tons, Captain D. Davidson, sailed on Jan. 3 for Aden and England, with 57 officers, 14 ladies, 24 children, 1,422 men, 150 women, and 209 children.

ODEYPORE.—Colonel de Kantzow, since parting with the Portuguese Envoy, in connection with whose mission he was on special duty at Simla during the summer, has been appointed a Boundary Settlement Officer in Rajpootana, where he is now engaged in defining some internal boundaries in Odeypore.

A BRAZILIAN MAN-OF-WAR.—The Brazilian man-of-war Bahia lately arrived in Bombay harbour from Bourbon. She will remain in Bombay about twenty-five days, and will then sail for Dieu, Goa, and Mauritius. She has been out about eighteen months, and carries a crew of two hundred and fifty men. On her arrival she fired a salute of twenty one guns, and a return salute of twenty-one guns was fired from the Saluting Battery. She also saluted the Undaunted with the same number of guns. During the firing one of her crew was severely hurt by an explosion of gunpowder.

DEATH OF COLONEL MOYLE.—We are exceedingly sorry to announce the death of Colonel C. A. Moyle, Commandant at Asseerghur, which melancholy event took place at the residence of Surgeon Major Salamon, at Yerrowda. The deceased officer had been sick for some time, and all that medical skill could do was done for him, with no avail. His bodily sufferings were very great. The following station order has been issued by Major General J. M. Primrose, commanding at Poona:—It is with extreme regret that the Major General Commanding announces the death of Colonel C. A. Moyle, Commanding at Asseerghur, which took place at the residence of Surgeon Major Salamon, at Yerrowda, at 11 A.M. this day. The funeral of the deceased officer will leave Yerrowda so as to arrive at the Poona Arsenal at 6.30 A.M. to-morrow, and all officers off duty are invited to attend. Full dress. Staff in red. The 5th Regiment N.I. will parade to-morrow (as a firing party) in review order, under the command of Lieut. Colonel Des Vaux, and meet the body of the deceased officer opposite the Poona Arsenal. The regiment to be drawn upon the road facing the Arsenal, ready to march off at 6.20 A.M. Three rounds of blank ammunition per man to be issued.—Deccan Herald, Dec. 31.

KHELAT.—The arrival of Major Sandeman, Governor-General's Agent for Beluchistan, in Kurachee, on Saturday last, is an event of considerable interest at the present moment, when frontier affairs are engrossing a good deal of consideration. Though Major Sandeman's attention has been given, since his special appointment, to the affairs of the Sind frontier more particularly, yet his long and intimate connection with the Punjab frontier, dating from 1859, has made him thoroughly acquainted with the affairs of the whole of our western frontier. We have, therefore, great satisfaction in being able to give our readers some reliable information about frontier affairs which we have had the advantage of obtaining. Major Sandeman, with 200 of the 1st Sind Horse, under the command of Major Malden, left Jacobabad early in November last, and has visited Quettah and Khelat and passed through the whole of the territories of the Khan of Khelat and of the Jam of Lus Beyla, going as far as Sonmeanee, on the coast, and thence to Kurachee. The results of the advance of our troops for Quettah, or Shal, as that place should be called, are becoming daily more visible, and the benefits derived by the people of the whole of Beluchistan and, we may add, Candahar as well, are very apparent. The effect of having the passage of the Bolan Pass made secure has produced very substantial financial results to the Ameer of Cabul, whose revenues will have been increased to the extent of one and a-half lac of rupees, the trade with Candahar having increased so rapidly that this large sum has already been netted by the Ameer. The trade from the Bolan Pass towards our own frontier has increased in a proportionate degree, as the official returns that have been published amply testify. The Khan of Khelat possesses a fine country, which is capable of great development; there is plenty of water, but much of it runs to waste. The Khan levies no taxes on his subjects, his revenues being derived from his own estates, and he lives in this patriarchal fashion a Chief of Chiefs. His rebellious Chiefs are now reduced to submission, and the Khan is happy and contented with the present condition of affairs in his territories, indeed, he has no reason to be otherwise. He has never offered any obstacle whatever to the approach of our troops, nor since they have been there, nor is there any probability, apparently, that the existing arrangements will be interfered with. With regard to H.H. the Jam of Lus Beyla, who with his son is now in Kurachee, there is a similar prospect of increased trade between Kurachee, Sonmeanee, and other parts of his territories. The Jam was, it will be remembered, detained here by the Government of India on his escape into British territory a few years ago, but he has returned to Beyla, and has now been acknowledged by the Government of India, the salute of eleven guns of which he had been deprived has been again allowed him, and was given him for the first time, on the occasion of his formal visit to Brigadier General Howard-Vyse. His Highness is to have charge of the telegraph line through his territories which runs through Sonmeanee and along the coast to Gwadar and beyond; a postal line will probably be established through his territories, and the carrying out of these plans inaugurates a new era of trade, and promises the recovery of much profitable commerce which has been lost during the difficulties of past years.

SHAIKHAPUR.—The following address was presented to Sir R. Temple on his visit to Shaikhapur:—"To his Excellency the Honourable Sir Richard Temple, Bart., K.C.S.I., Governor of Bombay.—May it please your Excellency,—We, the Municipal Commissioners for the town of Shaikhapur, have sought permission to offer to your Excellency, on behalf of our fellow townsmen and ourselves, our respectful homage and our hearty welcome. This being the second occasion on which a Governor of Bombay, since the conquest of Sind, has honoured Shaikhapur with a visit, we gladly and eagerly embrace the opportunity of giving expression to our grateful acknowledgment of the many blessings and advantages which have, under British rule, been enjoyed by the people of this town. The city of Shaikhapur, built in A.D. 1617, is well known for having extensive commercial relations with Central Asia, to which country numbers of our citizens resort for the purposes of trade. The revenue of this Municipality, which is chiefly derived from octroi duties on articles consumed in the city, amounts to about

Rs. 60,000 per annum, four-fifths of which are spent on establishments and current expenditure. The cause of education is not neglected by us. There are fifteen boys' and four girls' schools in the city which enjoy grants-in-aid, the number of pupils in them aggregating 1,928 and 167 respectively. The High School sent five boys for Matriculation this year to Bombay, of whom three were successful. The city was formerly surrounded with hollows made in old times by the excavation of earth for building purposes; these used to become full of percolation water, from which most offensive exhalations, prejudicial to the health of the community, used to arise, and the small saving from our municipal funds has for some years past been devoted to filling up these hollows. In some places where it has been found too expensive to pursue this course, portions of them have been converted into tanks, the excavation from which has been used to raise the level of the ground in their neighbourhood, whilst the cultivation of lotus in the tanks has tended to keep the water pure. As the areas reclaimed by us at a considerable outlay will hereafter be useful as building sites, we trust that your Excellency will be pleased to take into consideration an application which we propose submitting for their free grant to the Municipality, as some compensation for the expenditure incurred upon them. Thus up to the present time we have not been able to execute so many important works as could have been desired. The only works of note constructed from municipal funds are the Dispensary, the 'Dunsterville Viaduct,' and the Town Hall. We are, however, glad to bring to the notice of your Excellency that we are, at the desire of the townspeople, about to pave the main bazaar, 2,400 feet in length, at an estimated cost of Rs. 29,000, to introduce kerosine lamps for the better lighting of the town, and to construct a market for the accommodation of the wholesale trade in fruit and vegetables at a cost of Rs. 5,000. We were in hopes that the line of railway, completing the communication between the Punjab and the sea at Kurachee, would have passed close to this city, but as the line has taken another direction, being now ten miles distant, we venture to express a hope that under the Government of your Excellency we may yet obtain the advantage of railway communication by means of the branch line which it was proposed to construct in the direction of our frontier on the North-West. We beg, in conclusion, to tender our best thanks for the honour of your Excellency's visit, and to pray for your Excellency's health and prosperity."

SALARIES.—The salaries of the civil servants of the higher grades are to be increased by 25 per cent. on and after the 1st of January 1878.

CEYLON BUDGET.—The budget lately passed by the Ceylon Legislative Council includes a sum of four lakhs for new irrigation works and fifteen lakhs for new roads, bridges and other works. The Secretary of State has also sanctioned an increase of twenty-five per cent. to the salaries of the senior Civil Servants.

FURLOUGHS.—We understand that Mr. Parsons, Government Agent Central Province, has applied for leave to proceed to Europe at once, which we believe will be granted; and he will probably take his departure early in next month. Mr. Morris, we hear, will proceed in the first instance to the Nilgiris, in order to avoid the winter season in Europe. It is probable that Mr. Templer may proceed to Kandy to take up the duties of Agent of the Central Province, pending the absence of Mr. Parsons, in which case Mr. Hume may go to Galle, and Mr. Sharpe to Batticaloa. But as yet nothing has been determined by Government.—Ceylon Times, Dec. 26.

CIVIL.—The following changes in the service were notified in the last Gazette:—R. Reid, Esq., to be Acting Collector of Customs, Galle, and Justice of the Peace for the Southern Province. L. Lee, Esq., to be Acting Landing Surveyor, Customs, Colombo. J. H. de Saram, Esq., to be Acting District Judge, Commissioner of Requests, and Police Magistrate, Kalutara, and Coroner for the District of Kalutara. C. E. D. Pennycook, Esq., to be Acting District Judge, Commissioner of Requests, and Police Magistrate, Kurunegala, and Coroner for the District of Kurunegala. R. W. Ievers, Esq., to be Acting Assistant at Kegalla to the Government Agent for the Western Province. H. C. P. Bell, Esq., to be Acting Office Assistant at Colombo to the Government Agent for the Western Province. C. M. Lushington, Esq., to be Acting Commissioner of Requests and Police Magistrate Balapitmodera.

SIR ANDREW CLARKE was to leave for Madras in January to inspect the harbour works.

HIRAM FARRELL, a veterinary surgeon, has, after a trial lasting some days before the High Court at Allahabad, been found guilty of cheating and criminal misappropriation, and sentenced to two years' rigorous imprisonment.

THE East says that the Turko-Russian war has entailed a heavy loss on the weavers of Dacca. Large quantities of Kasida, or cloths flowered with muga or tasar silk, were annually exported from Dacca to Turkey, where they were chiefly used as turbans. Since the breaking out of the war trade in this fabric has come almost to a standstill.

Home.

EXPORT OF SPECIE.—The Peninsular and Oriental steamer Poonah has left with £246,175, £275 being in silver coin for Alexandria, and £104,000 and £4,000 in bar silver for Bombay and Calcutta. The whole of the balance is in dollars, £19,700 being for Penang, £4,200 for Singapore, £9,200 for Hong Kong, and £104,800 for Shanghai.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The tenders for £265,000 in bills on India were received on Jan. 23 at the Bank of England, and, in addition to that amount, the Council were successful in selling the balance of last week's allotment (£52,000), making together £317,000 as the total disposed of now. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £194,100, at an average rate of 1s. 8<sup>6</sup>/<sub>17</sub>d.; and to Bombay, £122,900, at an average rate of 1s. 8<sup>5</sup>/<sub>17</sub>d. Tenders on both Presidencies at 1s. 8<sup>1</sup>/<sub>2</sub>d. will receive about 24 per cent.; all above in full. Compared with last week's rate there is a fall of  $\frac{1}{2}$  per cent.

INDIAN FAMINES.—A despatch addressed by the Secretary of State for India to the Governor-General of India in Council, and bearing date the 10th of the present month, was issued on Monday morning. It directs the formation of a commission, to consist of three or five of the most competent persons, including at least one native, and none of whom shall have taken an active part in the labours or controversies of the past year, whose duty it shall be to collect with the utmost care all such information as may assist future administrators in the task of limiting the range or mitigating the severity of famines in India, or of placing the people in a better condition to endure them.

EASTERN TELEGRAPH COMPANY.—The half-yearly general meeting of the Eastern Telegraph Company (Limited) was held on Jan. 24 at the Victoria Rooms, Queen Victoria-street, E.C. Mr. J. Pender, M.P., the Chairman, presided. The report having been read and adopted, a discussion followed, and, in reply to Mr. William Abbott, the Chairman said, as to the laying of a cable to the Cape, he believed they had satisfied the Colonial Government at home, and he hoped before this the Colonial Government abroad, that there was no other company which could do the work as cheaply as they. Colonel Glover was re-elected to his seat at the Board, and the retiring auditors were also re-elected.

THE VICTORIA CROSS.—The Queen has been graciously pleased to signify her intention to confer the decoration of the Victoria Cross on the undermentioned officer, whose claim to the same has been submitted for her Majesty's approval, for his gallant conduct at Quetta, in the East Indies, as recorded against his name, viz.:—Captain Andrew Scott, Bengal Staff Corps, for his gallant conduct at Quetta, on July 26, 1877, while serving in the 4th Sikh Infantry, on the occasion of an attack by some Pathan coolies on Lieutenants Hewson and Kunhardt, of the Royal Engineers. On the evening of that day, Captain Scott, while on duty at the regimental parade-ground of the 4th Sikh Infantry at Quetta, hearing an alarm that British officers were being killed, spontaneously rushed to the rescue, and, finding Lieutenant Hewson cut down, and Lieutenant Kunhardt retiring, hard pressed and wounded, and only protected by Sepoy Ruchpal Singh, of the above-mentioned regiment, fell on the assailants, and with his own hand bayoneted two men, and closed with a third, who fell with him to the ground, and was killed by sepoys of the regiment. This act of courage and devotion saved the life of Lieutenant Kunhardt.

THE INDIAN FAMINE.—On Jan. 21 the Lord Mayor received a draft for £1,000 from the Mayor of Hobart Town, being the second contribution from that city in aid of the Indian Famine Fund. The former donation of a like amount had been remitted direct to Madras, but it had been found cheaper to forward the remainder through the Mansion House. A communication was also received from the Mayor of Brisbane, stating that £1,500 had been collected there and sent to Madras, and adding that the long drought under which a large portion of the colony had been suffering had greatly militated against the success of the appeal. A letter, giving particulars of the collection of £4,000 at Dunedin likewise came, as well as a despatch from the Mayor of Christchurch, New Zealand, stating that £5,000 had been collected there among a population of 72,000 and remitted to India. On Jan. 19 Lord Derby forwarded to the Lord Mayor a draft for £38. 9s. 6d., collected among British subjects in the province of Coquimbo, and a sum of £15. 16s. 2d., the balance of Masonic contributions at Hong Kong has also been received. The fund now amounts to £504,000.

INDIAN APPEAL.—HURROFERSHAD ROY CHOWDRY AND ANOTHER v. SHAMPERSHAD ROY CHOWDRY AND OTHERS.—This was an appeal from a judgment of the High Court of Calcutta, in a suit between members of the same family on the subject of the mesne profits of an estate. The litigation in the matter was originally entered upon in 1827, and had been continued at intervals from that time to this. Their lordships, in the result, intimated that they would humbly advise her Majesty that the decree of the High Court be reversed, and the previous decree of the Principal Sudder Ameen affirmed as to the amount granted to the plaintiff for mesne profits, and reversed as to the residue. The defendant would pay interest on the sum decreed for mesne profits at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum from the date of the commencement of the suit to the decree. The costs in the First Court and in the High Court would be paid by the parties in proportion to the amount decreed and disallowed. The defendant would further pay interest at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum on the total sum decreed by the amended order from its date to that of realisation. The respondents would pay the costs of this appeal.

TROOPS FOR INDIA.—The Indian troopship Malabar, Capt. Luxmore, C.B., embarked troops for India at Portsmouth on Jan. 23, comprising eighteen officers, and a draft of the 48th Regiment to join the headquarters; five officers' wives and families, and five soldiers' wives and nine children also embarked. The following officers were also provided with passage:—

Capt. Cartwright and Lieut. Chaytor, 48th Foot; Capt. Hood and Lieut. Atkinson, 2nd Foot; and Surgeons-Major Carter and Pennington, and Surgeon Anderson, of the Army Medical Department; Sub-Lieut. Lamont, 9th Lancers; Captains Younger, Dumville, and Douglas, Majors Wodehouse and Harris, and Lieuts. Bedford and Mackenzie, Royal Artillery; Capt. Napier, 3rd Hussars; Majors J. Hanwell and Price, 2nd Batt. 60th Rifles.

The Malabar proceeded to Queenstown to embark 22 officers, 9 officers' wives and families, 944 non-commissioned officers and privates, 56 soldiers' wives and 47 children, of the 1st Batt. 1st Foot for Malta, to relieve the 2nd Batt. 2nd Foot. The latter will proceed in the Malabar to Bombay.

INDIAN TEAS.—These teas, by their great strength and usefulness for mixing purposes, attract every consumer's attention, and the general public conclude they must be buying fine teas if they only ask for the "India or Assam tea." It is satisfactory to hear that the inferiority noticed in the "new season's" teas is not due to the increasing demand and supply or the imperfectness of hurried manufacture, but to the bad weather experienced in India, where the nights have been cold and the rains uncertain. Sometimes rain would fall for a fortnight together, and then a baking sun would prevail for a similar period, thus damaging many "gardens." The planters seem to have had a bad time of it, many of their productions having been sold in the home market under the cost of manufacture; but the very low prices ruling for the last four months are greatly due to over-supplying our home market. It may not have been generally noticed, but we have already received about 23,000,000 lbs. of the new season's teas in the first four months, which by present calculations is more than two-thirds of the crops of 1877-78. The original estimate of this season's crop was put down at 34,000,000 lbs., but the season being already proved to be a very bad one, the out-turn is not likely to exceed 31,000,000 lbs., against 23,500,000 lbs. in 1876-77. The imports for the year are about 31,800,000 lbs., against 29,400,000 lbs. in 1876, while deliveries have been about 28,200,000, against 26,735,000 lbs. in 1876, thus showing 1,500,000 lbs. increase in consumption, and 2,500,000 lbs. increase in the imports. All the foregoing figures point, therefore, most satisfactorily to the increase of both supply and demand. Last year the low prices ruling for common to medium grades, or for any grade of tea lacking strength, which strength is so necessary for the success of Indian teas, was noticed. Prices for these grades of Congou, Souchong, and Pekoe Souchong, have ruled even lower this year, and medium Pekoes have shared the same fate with very low prices ruling, the reason of which is, that they cannot compete with the same grade of China tea, as they lose their value when lacking the strength. All fine to finest Pekoes and broken Pekoes, have, however, met with good competition, and firm prices have generally resulted.

Imperial Parliament.

THE PUNJAB.—Lord G. HAMILTON informed Sir G. BALFOUR that a large mass of papers was being printed with reference to India, and would certainly include a quantity of information as to the general principles of our military, political, commercial, and financial policy towards the tribes on the North-West frontier since our occupation of the Punjab.

MAHARAJAH SCINDIA.—In reply to a question by [Mr. OXSLOW, Lord G. HAMILTON said they had received no official intimation of any act of disrespect shown by the Maharajah Scindia to the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, or as to the evasion by the Maharajah of the spirit of the treaty which entitles him to keep a certain number of men under arms by enlistment for short periods. Until they received some information on the subject it would not be right to assume that there had been any discourtesy to the Lieutenant-Governor, or any evasion of the treaty.

THE CHURCH IN CEYLON.—Replying to Mr. Alderman M'ARTHUR, Mr. J. LOWTHER said, in reference to a memorial of the inhabitants of Ceylon to the Queen, transmitted by Sir W. H. Gregory, praying that all votes for ecclesiastical purposes from the revenues of the island should cease, that Lord Carnarvon had communicated with Sir W. H. Gregory since his arrival in this country, and the Government were unable to sanction any discontinuance of the extremely moderate sum applied to these purposes.—Mr. Alderman M'ARTHUR gave notice that on an early day he would call the attention of the House to the subject.

THE CHEFOO CONVENTION.—Mr. STEWART asked the Under-Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs whether the remaining portion of the report of Sir Thomas Wade would be laid upon the table of the House, and whether it was the intention of the Government to ratify the Chefoo Convention.—Mr. BOURKE: The consideration of the Chefoo Convention was suspended until the views of the Indian Government had been ascertained with regard to certain commercial questions. A telegram has been received from the Government of India stating that a despatch reporting on the Convention is on its way home. When it arrives it will immediately receive the attention and consideration of her Majesty's Government, and the papers will be presented as soon as a decision has been arrived at.

ECCLESIASTICAL SALARIES IN INDIA.—Mr. BAXTER asked the Under-Secretary for India when the return regarding ecclesiastical salaries in India, ordered last session, would be laid upon the table of the House.—Lord GEORGE HAMILTON: We have not yet received from India the return demanded by the hon. gentleman. It was a return requiring minute information concerning ecclesiastical establishments and the attendance at church, the compilation of which would necessarily take some time.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, Jan. 23.—PUBLIC WORKS IN INDIA.—Lord G. HAMILTON moved for a Select Committee to inquire into and report as to the expediency of constructing public works in India with money raised on loan. After an interesting retrospect of the system and principles on which public works have been constructed since the commencement of Lord Dalhousie's Viceroyalty, he referred to the pressure recently brought on the Government to construct schemes of irrigation at the public cost, and showed the speculative character of the calculations on which they were based by the examples of the Godavery, the Madras, and the Orissa irrigation. On the whole, he regarded the agitation as barely honest while these facts were suppressed, and he much regretted the countenance which had been given to it by Mr. Bright. But in order to put an end to this interminable controversy the Government desired that it should be referred to a Select Committee, before which the advocates of these schemes could state their views. With regard to the amendment of which Mr. Fawcett had given notice, to include within the scope of the Committee a general inquiry into the best means of preventing famines, &c., the Government would oppose it, because it would prevent any report being agreed to this session.—Mr. FAWCETT, regarding the order of reference as too vague, moved as an amendment that the Committee inquire into the best means of preventing the recurrence or mitigating the intensity of famines in India, and also whether by greater economy, especially with regard to military and other charges under the control of the home authorities, a fund for the relief of famines may not be provided without subjecting the people of India to such burdensome taxation as will be imposed on them by the contemplated increase in the Salt duty.—Mr. BRIGHT, after reiterating his confidence in Sir A. Cotton, insisted that the Indian Government, in some way or other, ought to devise a scheme of complete irrigation for India, not necessarily to be carried out at once, but the completion of which should be looked forward to as part of our duty to the people of India. Possibly some of the projects might not pay, but they would save life, and the subject ought not to be dealt with in a shopkeeping spirit.—Sir G. CAMPBELL supported the Committee, though he thought the order of reference a little too vague, and from his own experience bore testimony to the wholly unreliable calculations of Sir A. Cotton.—Mr. G. DUFF suggested the addition of some words to the motion which would show that the prevention of famine was contemplated.—After some observations from Sir G. BALFOUR in defence of Sir A. Cotton, Lord G. HAMILTON offered to add words to ensure that the inquiry should have regard both to the financial results of public works and their effect on the prevention of famine; and the motion as thus amended was agreed to.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FRIDAY, Jan. 25.—OCCUPATION OF QUETTAH.—In answer to Mr. FAWCETT, Lord GEORGE HAMILTON said that, as far as he was aware, the occupation of Quettah would cause no increase in the military estimates of India. There was certainly an apparent increase of political charges, and probably an increase of salaries caused by the augmented charges of Major Sandeman's establishment, for an explanation of this reference might be made to the Blue-books. The buildings erected at Quettah were of a temporary character, and the works had been constructed by the troops stationed at Quettah. There was telegraph communication between Quettah and British India, as was the case wherever our troops went. The Government had not received any request, for or sanctioned the construction of, a railway to the entrance of the Pass.

CEYLON.—Mr. LOWTHER wished to make a correction of the answer which he gave a few evenings ago to a question put to him by the hon. member for Lambeth with regard to the religious endowments of Ceylon. He had stated that Lord Carnarvon had communicated personally with Sir William Gregory upon this and other subjects connected with Ceylon. From a letter of Sir William Gregory it appeared that his noble friend was in error in supposing that this was included in the sums mentioned.

THE INDIAN BUDGET.—On the motion for going into Committee of Supply, Sir G. CAMPBELL called attention to the Indian Budget, which he criticised with some severity, as showing a tendency to place new burdens on the food of the poor, while the rich are not taxed in due proportion. Taking particular exception to the proposed increase in the Salt Duty, he moved a resolution declaring that, being already excessive, it should not be raised, and that it is especially inexpedient to increase its pressure on the population of Madras and Bombay at a time when they are enfeebled and emaciated by a prolonged and severe famine.—Lord G. HAMILTON deprecated a discussion of the Indian Budget before it had been laid before the House in an authentic form, and insisted that the House could not come to a just opinion on the increase of the Salt Duties without being put in possession of all Sir John Strachey's motives. Highly eulogising the ability of Sir John's financial statement, he showed how, after securing £450,000 for a Famine Reserve Fund from a Land Tax, and £650,000 by License Duties, he had no other resource open to him for obtaining the additional half-million which he required but from this equalisation of the Salt Duties. This was an object which had been long desired, and it had been carried out, he maintained, in the only feasible way. Moreover, he pointed out while in some portions of India the tax had been increased, in others the burden had been diminished, and the measure had been accompanied by administrative reforms which would lead to a considerable saving.—In the short discussion which followed, Dr. PLAYFAIR objected to the increase of the Salt Duty, on account of its injurious effect on the health of the people.—Mr. ONSLOW pointed out that most of the local taxation fell on the rich.—Mr. GRANT DUFF regarded the Budget as having been dictated by circumstances, and admitted that, assuming the impossibility of an Income-tax, Sir John Strachey had no option but this slight increase in the Salt Duty.—Mr. LANG took the same view, while Mr. HIBBERT, in the interest of Lancashire, suggested an Excise Duty on the goods manufactured at Bombay which were now admitted duty free at Calcutta, while Manchester goods paid a tax of five per cent.—Sir G. BALFOUR and Mr. O'DONNELL also spoke, and the Resolution was withdrawn.

THE HON. MR. PAUL and Mr. E. C. Morgan have been appointed members of the Legislative Council of India.

THE SALT DUTIES.—To get rid of these Inland Customs lines, two things are necessary. We have to enter into arrangements with the Native States of Rajputana, which will enable us to levy our duties at the places of production, and we have to remove the great inequalities in the rates at which salt is taxed in different parts of India. Our negotiations with the Native States of Rajputana are not completed, but they are in active progress, and there is no doubt that they will before long be brought to a satisfactory conclusion. There will then remain the equalisation of the duties, which now vary from 1 rupee 13 annas a maund (82 lbs.) in Madras and Bombay, to 3 rupees a maund in Northern India, and 3 rupees 4 annas a maund in Bengal. As I stated to the Council in March, the Government of India has, for many years past, never lost sight of this question, and important and effectual measures were adopted by Lord Mayo and by Lord Northbrook towards the removal of the great evils which I have been describing. But for the steps which they took, the completion of our task would not now have been brought so nearly within our reach. Although the necessity for equalising the Salt Duties has so long been recognised by the Government of India and by her Majesty's Government, action has been till now in great degree prevented by the anxious desire that the object in view should be at least partially effected by a reduction of the Salt duties in the Bengal Presidency, and not only by an increase of those in Madras and Bombay. The state of our finances has never in the past permitted, still less does it now permit, the sacrifice of revenue which a simple measure of reduction would have involved. I said in March last that if it had been possible we should have been glad to see the rates of duties on this side of India reduced immediately to those in force in Madras and Bombay, but that I feared it would be found financially impossible to bring about the equalisation in this manner, and that we must in the first instance, and at least temporarily, increase the lower duties without reducing the higher to the full extent ultimately desired. Unfortunately our financial difficulties continue, and although I still look forward hopefully to the time when we shall be able to relieve the people of the Bengal Presidency from the high Salt duties which they have now to pay, it is clear that under present circumstances we can do this only to a limited extent. The object at which we aim is, as I have said before, to give to the people throughout India the means of obtaining, with the least possible inconvenience, and at the cheapest rate consistent with financial necessities, a supply of salt, the quantity of which shall be limited only by the capacity of the people for consumption.

THE report that a staff of engineers had been organised and already commenced work on the survey of the line of country for a railway from Rawalpindi to Kohat turns out to be incorrect, as the line is not likely to be undertaken at present.

SANCTION has been given to the deputation of Mr. Burgess to England for the purpose of compiling, with the assistance of Mr. Fergusson, and at a certain estimated cost, a complete work on the rock-cut temples of Western India.

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT. WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS COMPANY (Limited).

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer.

Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.
 Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. postage, free. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, free. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, free.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.
NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS, &c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price—4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, free.

JOHN WHITE, MANUFACTURER, 228, PICCADILLY, LONDON.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail, through Brindisi, are—from Bombay, January 14; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, January 12; Calcutta, January 11.

THE telegraph has forestalled what little news the Indian papers had to give us concerning the Jawaki and Naga campaigns. Poor Mr. Carnegie, whose death from a wound accidentally inflicted by a sentry at Mozima in the Naga Hills has already been reported, was still alive and going on favourably when the mail left Bombay. Mr. Williamson had started for Mozima to take over Mr. Carnegie's political duties. The Nagas seem to have kept our people steadily on the alert. On the 27th December they took advantage of a dense fog to attack again the force at Mozima, but were repulsed with loss. A small escort of our men was attacked on the same day between Samugating and Piphima. They beat off their assailants, killing one and wounding three. A great Council of Nagas was held at Konoma on the 29th, to decide on the question of peace or war. Jotsoma was "showing signs of unfriendliness," and the smaller villages were wavering. A small party of Sappers had arrived at Mozima. The cold seems to have been very great, but there was very little sickness. The reinforcement under Lieutenant MacGregor arrived at Samaguting on the 3rd January. Outposts had been established between Samaguting and Golaghat, with the view of keeping the road free of the enemy and escorting the dak runners. Wokha was quiet. It is believed that the Chief Commissioner will remain at Jorhat till matters are quieter in the Hills.

At the sitting of the Viceroy's Legislative Council on January 9 the Select Committee's report on the Opium Act Amendment Bill was passed. Before adjourning the Council, the Viceroy informed the members that Sir John Strachey would explain at the next meeting the course he proposed to follow regarding the Taxation Bills, leave for the introduction of which was accorded on the 27th December. His Excellency also mentioned that, as Sir Andrew Clarke was obliged to leave Calcutta for a short period on public business, he would take the same occasion to make a statement on the policy of Government regarding public works. The Hon. Ashley Eden hoped that Sir John Strachey would take the opportunity of explaining definitely the scheme which the Government of India has under consideration regarding the expenditure of the funds raised for famine insurance.

THROUGHOUT the Madras Presidency Famine batta has been reduced to one rupee per mensem from Jan. 1. The net decrease for the previous week in the numbers on relief works was 32,516, and in those on gratuitous relief was 34,141. Destructive floods have again occurred in Ramnad.

THE Mysor famine report, for the week ending Dec. 29 states that the number of civil relief works was being steadily reduced, and a lower scale of wages had been lately sanctioned. On the D.P.W. relief works the number of labourers decreased during the week by over two thousand; whilst the number in relief camps decreased by nearly as much—"a gratifying reduction." These relief camps were being steadily but cautiously closed in all directions; and before long, it was hoped, there would be only one in each district at the head-quarters stations, and in some districts not even this.

THE Englishman announces with regret the death from cholera, on Jan. 7, of Surg. major John Elliot, M.D., Surgeon Superintendent, Presidency General Hospital. We are told that "To marked professional ability Dr. Elliot united the most thorough conscientiousness both in the discharge of his public duties and in his private practice; and the sad news of his sudden death, in the midst of a career of usefulness, will be deeply deplored by all who knew him." The funeral took place at the Military Cemetery at eight o'clock the next morning.

It appears that even in Bombay the cotton industry is not very flourishing just now. The Millowners' Association had been obliged to call a meeting to discuss the question of working the mills short time as a check upon over-production. "Most of the mills," says the Bombay Gazette, "have large stocks of goods on hand for which they can find no sale; and there is no present prospect of improvement in the demand. It is proposed, therefore, we believe, to reduce the working time of the mills to seven hours a day." This proposal will hardly please those agents or managers who get a commission on the gross outturn, but the general body of shareholders will probably have the sense to see that some limit must be placed to production; for "most of the Bombay mills are burdened with heavy debts, and to go on manufacturing yarn which nobody would buy would ere long bring matters to a crisis."

IN announcing Colonel Hatch's retirement from the post of Judge Advocate General, the Commander-in-Chief in India "desires to record the very valuable services rendered by this officer throughout an unprecedentedly long period of office. The sound judgment and special knowledge possessed by Colonel Hatch have been of great service to successive Commanders-in-Chief, and materially assisted the administration of the Army in a most important branch.

WE are sorry to hear that Colonel Burne, Private Secretary to the Viceroy had been compelled to leave India by the outgoing mail, owing to his wife's serious illness in England. It was understood that Mr. Stuart Bayley would carry on the Colonel's duties till Colonel Colley returned from leave. Colonel Burne will not return to India. His substantive appointment which he will now resume is that of Political Secretary at the India Office, although, for the last two years he has been acting as Private Secretary to Lord Lytton. He is said to have fulfilled the delicate duties of that office with singular tact and amiability.

If the Bombay Gazette is rightly informed, instructions had been received from the Government of India to the effect that Britto is to be imprisoned for life with hard labour. This decision, if true, is a curious sequel to the previous proceedings in Britto's case. He was reprieved from death on the ground of insanity, and now he is being punished just as if he was not insane at all. If Britto was insane he ought to be treated as such, and if he is not he ought to have suffered the penalty which his cold-blooded murder of Mr. Roonan richly deserved.

SOME indirect effects of the late famine on departments of trade, which seemed to have no connection with the scarcity of the rainfall or the famine, are brought out in an Indian paper. The price of salt, for example, rose from two to four annas a maund in the North-West Provinces during the middle of the past year. It appears that the railways were so blocked with the immense traffic in grain going southwards that they were unable to deliver to the markets of the North-West Provinces their customary supplies of salt. This province depends largely upon the salt of the Sambhar Lake, and the policy of the Inland Customs Department is to develop the manufacture at the lake to its fullest extent. Sambhar is connected with Agra by the Rajputana State Railway; and in order to facilitate trade, a system of through booking was devised in connection with the East Indian and Oudh and Rohilkhand Railway Companies. This was in force up to the end of May last, and Cawnpore and Allahabad were thus brought into direct communication with Sambhar. But in May the want of rolling-stock on the railways became so great, and the demand for grain carriage so imperative, that the system of through booking was discontinued. Thousands of maunds of salt consequently lay at Sambhar for months; the down-country markets found their supply getting low, and hence both retail and wholesale prices rose. Nor was this the worst. Not only had the salt lying at Sambhar been bought from Government by traders, but the duty on it, at Rs. 3 a maund, had in many cases been paid into district treasuries. The department engages to supply salt to traders living at a distance, on the production of a treasury receipt that the price, plus the duty and cost of bags, has been paid into a Government treasury. Many salt dealers availed themselves of this convenience, and found that they could not get their salt, although their money was safely locked up in the coffers of Government. We are sorry for the energetic officers in charge of the Sambhar Lake, who, after devising a cheap and simple method of supplying the provincial trade with salt direct, found their efforts neutralised by this unfortunate breakdown of the railways.

MR. W. W. HUNTER, of the Bengal Civil Service, is evidently one of the gold spoons of Anglo-Indian Society. Here is the latest bit of news concerning that fortunate gentleman:—

With the confirmation of the Supreme Government, the Government of the Fort Saint George has sanctioned the grant of an honorarium of £500 to Mr. W. W. Hunter, LL.D., Director-General of Gazetteers, for the preparation of a School History of India for the use of the Madras Presidency.

Five hundred pounds for writing a School History of India is not bad payment for Mr. Hunter's condescension in sparing a little time from his other well-paid duties for a service which many a less eminent writer would gladly have rendered at half the price.

WE learn from India that an answer has been received from the Secretary of State to the memorial of Rajah Amir Hasan Khan. This memorial, purporting to be on behalf of the inhabitants and talukdars of Oudh, prayed for a reversal of the orders which gave the administration of Oudh to the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West, and for a return to the old arrangement. Lord Salisbury answers that the complaints made by the memorialist are for the most part of an impractical character, and that the amalgamation in no wise affects injuriously the rights and interests of those classes from whom the memorial pretends to come. His Lordship refuses therefore to listen to the memorial. It is worthy of notice here, that in spite of its pretended origin, the memorial has been distinctly disavowed by most of the Oudh talukdars, including all those of any consequence.

IN the course of his financial statement Sir John Strachey dwelt on the manner in which the agriculturists and the traders of the most distant parts of the Empire, prompted by the hope of gain, hastened to pour their surplus stocks into the distressed provinces of the south. "Never in the history of India has such a spectacle been presented as that which we have seen during the last few months; railway stations in districts 2,000 miles away encumbered with grain awaiting the means of transport, and our ports filled with ships destined to bear to the starving millions the plenty of happier regions. My friend the Lieutenant-Governor will, I think, bear me out when I say that never has the Ganges or the port of Calcutta been the scene of such an active trade as it was during August and September last, when the grain traffic to Madras was at its height." He went on to illustrate the immense activity of the grain trade during the late famine by comparing the receipts of Indian railways in the past year with those of the year before:—

The receipts on the whole of our Guaranteed and State Railways from 1st October 1875 to 30th September 1876 amounted to £8,700,000. In the corresponding period for 1876-77 they amounted to £12,000,000, and the increase has been spread over every one of the lines without exception. I do not propose to dilate on the immense advantages which these Railways have conferred upon India during the late great calamity. This would be foreign to my present purpose. But having mentioned these Railways, I will ask you not to forget that at least four-fifths of the food imported into the Famine country travelled over them, and I believe that the average journey made by each bag of grain was hardly less than 500 miles. When it is remembered that barely one-quarter of this food could have reached the Famine districts at all without the railways, some idea may be formed of the millions of lives they have saved, and of the priceless boon they have conferred upon the country. A great engineer, for whose services to India no one can have a higher esteem than I have, asserted, a short time ago, that the railways were causing to India a loss of three millions a year. The facts that I have just given are a sufficient comment on such a statement, but it leads me to repeat, what I before mentioned, that we now have good ground for hoping that the net earnings of our railways during the year 1877 (including the receipts from the famine traffic) will suffice to pay the whole of the interest on the capital which has been expended on all the guaranteed railways, and that no burden on their account will be imposed on our Treasury.

It appears that during the past year more than a million-and-a-half tons of food have been carried into the Famine districts from other parts of India. "The profits on this great trade, after paying all expenses of carriage, have been estimated, on what appear to be fair grounds, at not less than 40 rupees a ton, and I believe that I am understating the fact if I estimate that the producing and trading classes have made a clear profit of six millions sterling on this business of supplying grain to the Famine districts."

THE Pioneer correspondent in General Ross's column dwells admiringly on "the staunchness with which our Pathans (including Afridis, and even Jawakis) have done their duty" in the Jawaki campaign. "People who saw it admired the sight of the 20th Bengal N.I. swarming up a steep hill-side like monkeys, under a smart fire from the enemy. General Ross more than once had occasion to compliment Colonel Rogers on the behaviour of his regiment. Nor were the 22nd and 27th Bengal N.I. a whit behind Brownlow's when there was work to be done. As for the 14th Sikhs, the crack regiment par excellence in the Bengal Army, their old commander had reason to be proud of them as he eyed their movements on the 9th. With such troops to clear the way, we should never have a difficulty in getting to Kabul or Herat; and more than one British officer who saw them in the field at Bori felt convinced that our native soldiers are now as near perfection as possible." We are quite satisfied with their late exploits, and trust that they may never be called upon to show the way to either Kabul or Herat.

EVENTS in Kashgar have followed each other fast since the death of the redoubtable Yakub Beg. The report of the taking of Kashgar by the Chinese is confirmed in the following extract from the Turkistan Gazette:—

The Ruler of Kashgar, Beg-kuli-Beg, has fled, and his wives have taken refuge in the Narain fort on our territory; 2,000 Mussulmans have likewise arrived there from Kashgar, fleeing from the sanguinary vengeance of the Chinese conquerors. The fugitives begged protection, and desired to become Russian subjects. Among them were five Turks, who had been sent to Yakub Beg as military instructors. On arriving at our frontier they were all disarmed. The Turks were sent under a guard to Tokmak, and permission was given to the others to pass on, as there was no room for them in the fort. Thus the Mohammedans in Kashgar have received a fatal blow. The Khanate was held together only by the iron hand of Yakub Beg, and his death on the 8th of June of last year was a fatal event for Jityshar. The Chinese, advancing rapidly from Manas and Urumchi, occupied the whole of Jityshar almost without encountering resistance, and some towns, such as Khotan, voluntarily invited the Chinese troops. Our traveller, Przhevalski, was right when he said that the whole people of Kashgar hated Yakub Beg, and awaited with impatience the arrival of the Russians. He predicted that if the Russians did not occupy the country, the people would without the slightest resistance recognise the authority of the Chinese. His prophecy has now been fulfilled.

A Times telegram of yesterday's date from Calcutta gives the following news:—

The most memorable event of the week has been the annual dinner of the Calcutta Trades' Association, which was held on Wednesday last. It bears close analogy to the great London civic banquets, and, like these, has accorded to it an undefined, but generally acknowledged, political character. All the high officers of State are invited, and, by a sort of recognised custom and tacit understanding, the mantle of official reticence is partially laid aside for this one night, and the privilege is afforded to persons in high station of airing their grievances and ventilating their political views. When the singularly secret and bureaucratic nature of the Indian Government is remembered, it can easily be understood that this annual dinner is of peculiar interest, and forms a rather valuable factor in Indian administration.

The Commander-in-Chief, in returning thanks for the Army, said that within the last two years he had inspected the greater part of the troops, and found them in every cantonment in good training and admirable discipline. The present war had taught us the value of our rifles, which the Turks had used, and of our schools of musketry, as also the importance of earthworks. There was one other lesson to be laid at heart—namely, the value of big battalions. The spade of Todleben would hardly have prevailed over that of Osman Pasha unless the Russians had been in force sufficient to encircle fortresses like the folds of a boa-constrictor. Admirable as our Army was, it was his duty to state that it did not consist of big battalions; it was a small Army. Yet there were many who advocated reduction rather than increase as a measure of insurance against war.

Admiral Bythessae, responding for the Navy, stated that England possesses forty-seven ironclads, some of which were armed with 80-ton guns and protected by from 12in. to 24in. of armour-plate. Others, though models of naval architecture, were regarded as obsolete; yet the worst carries 4in. of plate, and is heavily armed. Thirty-three thousand trained seamen were ready at a moment's notice to bring this vast force into play, and the number could be raised by various reserves to 60,000.

The Chief Justice, replying for the Bench, said the life of a Judge in Calcutta was no sinecure. It was impossible to see the increasing stream of business pouring into Court without realising the difficulties Judges had to encounter. These difficulties would not be lessened by introducing that monster prodigy the New Procedure Code, to which the Legislative Council had been fortunate enough to give birth safely in the spring of the year. He did not desire to question the necessity or the wisdom of the introduction of this monster Code. That was a matter of which Judges, who were merely practical lawyers and had spent half their lives in Courts of Justice could, of course, know nothing, and upon which, moreover, they were not consulted. Still less did he desire to question the wisdom or the expediency of the gigantic system of codification proceeding so merrily. This was a subject deemed far beyond the comprehension of Judges, and could only be properly understood in the celestial heights of Simla. He would, however, express an earnest hope, not only on behalf of the Judges, but of the general public, that the flood of new laws might keep pace in some measure with the real requirements of the community, and that they might accord a little more closely with the established laws and usages of India than they at present appeared to do. He trusted the Government of India might be induced to afford Judges the assistance and encouragement they so much required. It possessed no servants more loyal and faithful than the Judges of the High Court, and none the less so that they felt it to be their bounden duty to administer justice to the people at whatever cost to themselves, according to their own earnest convictions of what the law was, and without regard to the dictates of extraneous authority, however exalted in station that authority might be.

The same informant thus explains and endeavours to justify Sir J. Strachey's financial measures:—

With reference to the Licence Tax, a minimum has been taxed, exempting in Bengal annual profits less than 100 rupees, in the North-West and Oude profits less than 200 rupees. Now, these profits represent something very different from the apparent equivalents of £10 and £20 respectively. Measured by the standard wages, coupled with purchasing power, the money is really equivalent to £100 and £200 respectively. It must also be remembered that in fixing 200 rupees as the minimum of annual profits taxable in the North-West Sir John Strachey adopted the identical sum which formed the original minimum limit of the first Income Tax devised by Mr. Wilson and the first Licence Tax of Mr. Massey's, each of which measures purposely excluded all but the prosperous classes in the operation of the tax. In order, however, still more to relieve the poorer classes the maximum licence fees have since been raised from 200 rupees to 500 rupees.

The increase of the Salt Tax in Madras and Bombay does at the first blush appear less defensible, but is justified by the fact that the agricultural classes in Madras and Bombay are exempted from taxation which is imposed on other provinces. The attempt to carry out the scheme of abolition of the Inland Customs was formerly denounced by Sir George Campbell himself in most unmeasured terms. This Salt Tax has been reduced in Bengal to the extent of £200,000, thus affording partial relief to sixty millions. The policy of the measure is not to raise an increased revenue from salt, but to equalise the Salt Tax all over India, and so at once and for ever get rid of that barbarous and costly fiscal machinery, the Inland Customs line. The Madras Salt commission states that the report of the Madras and Bombay salt being greatly inferior in quality is absolutely incorrect.

FROM the same source we learn that a telegram from Mysor states that the census shows that 25 per cent., or a million and a quarter, died during the famine, and that 35 per cent. of the poorer classes have disappeared.

LIEUTENANT COLONEL W. TWEEDIE, First Assistant Resident at Haidarabad, has been offered the post of Resident at Mandalay, in succession to Colonel Duncan, who retires.—Major C. Hunter, R.A., who had been recommended by the Indian Government for the new appointment of Superintendent of Military Stores at the India-office, was to start for England immediately, the recommendation having been accepted by the Secretary of State.—Lieutenant-Colonel Monro, Inspector-General of Police in Bengal, being about to retire under the Commutation Scheme is to be succeeded by Mr. Halliday, Magistrate and Collector of Gaya, whilst Mr. Ware Edgar, C.S.I., from Darjiling, goes to Gaya. Sir Richard Pollock, Commissioner of Peshawar, is reported likely to take leave to England this spring. In that case Mr. Donald Macnabb would probably officiate for him.

THE directors of the Bank of Madras have issued their report, which is locally regarded as very satisfactory. The result for the twelve months is a dividend of 11 per cent., and the reserve fund has been increased by Rs. 75,000. The capital of the Bank is Rs. 50,00,000, and the net profits for the year just ended were Rs. 6,26,193. The amount would have been considerably larger if the value of Government securities had not fallen heavily during the year. We may add that the Bank of Bengal, after placing Rs. 1,00,980 to its reserve fund; allowing Rs. 83,377 for depreciation in the investments in Government Securities; and carrying forward Rs. 23,395.13 to the profit and loss account for the next half-year—have declared a dividend at the rate of eight per cent. per annum.

A GENERAL public meeting has been held in the Chamber of Commerce Hall at Karachi, condemning the Bombay Government's proposal to discontinue postal communication by land between Karachi and Bombay. A Committee was appointed to prepare a memorial to Government on the subject.

It is stated that small-pox was still very severe both at Cawnpore and Lucknow. Half of the Buffs were out in camp, owing to an epidemic of the disease in the former station, and at the latter three officers and a lady had been attacked by it. Small-pox has also broken out at Aden, having been carried thither in ships from Jeddah.

WE learn from the Army and Navy Gazette that, after a series of investigations and trials extending over a period of nearly two years, the members of the Ordnance Select Committee have decided upon a form of 12-pounder field guns for Royal Horse Artillery and light field batteries in place of the present 9-pounders. It is said to be a much more powerful and efficient weapon, and the carriage and equipment have been considerably lightened.

A RECENT order published in the Gazette provides for the retirement of those general officers of the Indian Army "who shall have attained or shall attain the age of seventy years." It is decreed that "every general officer who shall have attained or shall attain the age of seventy years, by or after Oct. 1, 1877, shall be permanently removed from the establishment of effective general officers to the Retired List, unless in any special case it shall be represented to us by our Secretary of State for India in Council that a relaxation of this rule would be for the good of our Service." Any general officer who may have held a staff appointment on Oct. 1, 1877, will continue to hold it until the expiration of the term for which he was appointed, "unless it appear to our Secretary of State for India in Council to be expedient that he should sooner be removed to the Retired List."

On the 7th January there died at St. Calais in France, in his ninety-first year, a noble relic of the old Indian Navy, whose deeds have been so worthily commemorated by Lieutenant Low. On the 30th June, 1815, Lieut. Boyce, commanding the Hon. Company's brig Nautilus, of fourteen guns, was cruising in the Straits of Sunda, when the United States corvette Peacock, of twenty-two guns, hove in sight. As Lieut. Boyce had learned that peace had been proclaimed with England, he sent a boat with two officers to inform Capt. Warrington of the fact. That officer, however, detained the boat's crew, and summoned the English captain to haul his flag down as a token of submission, or stand the alternative of being sunk. But the gallant Boyce, preferring death to dishonour, sent back a peremptory refusal. The odds against him were tremendous, for he had only forty men to fight 220, and the corvette had more and heavier guns. The fight began, and soon the brave young captain of the Nautilus lay on the deck with a large grape shot in his hip, and his right knee and thigh-bone shattered by a round shot, while his first lieutenant lay by his side mortally wounded. Feeling that his country's honour was satisfied, and wishing to spare the lives of his brave seamen, he gave the order to the boatswain, the officer now in charge, to strike his flag. In spite of his terrible wounds the tough old sea-dog lived to the age above mentioned, with the aid of a pension conferred upon him by the American Government, as some amends for the illegal conduct of the American captain.

SYMMETRICAL FINANCE.

THE more we look at the main features of Sir John Strachey's budget statement the less we come to like them. Sir John had an excellent opportunity, or so it seemed, of readjusting the taxation of India in furtherance of his plan for providing a permanent insurance against future famines. But how has that plan been carried out? In the words of Mayfair—"The Government of India has (1) put a new cess on the already rack-rented peasantry of North-Western India; (2) it has raised the salt-tax in the provinces of Madras and Bombay, which have not yet begun to recover from famine; and (3) it has made a new transfer from itself to the irresponsible and obscure Provincial Governments of its proper duty of enforcing and levying taxes. This is the essence of Sir John Strachey's financial statement to the Central Legislative Council of India, on the 27th December last." With regard to the last count of this indictment we think that Sir J. Strachey may fairly claim an acquittal. The policy of transferring certain powers and responsibilities from the central to the local Governments was first put in practice by Lord Mayo, and its wisdom has been so far justified by the results. The Indian Government has now gone a step or two further in the same direction, and in so doing we are inclined to think that it has done well. But the other two charges seem to rest on firmer ground. To levy a new cess on the peasantry of the North-West may seem a "simple and easy" method of raising money for a special purpose; and a cess of one per cent. on the land in order to balance a new demand on the mercantile classes may look at first sight like a praiseworthy effort to enclose two kinds of fish in one net. But when we remember that in one shape or another the landholders already contribute fifty-five per cent. of their net rental to the wants of the State, while the trading classes pay next to nothing for the benefits they enjoy under British rule, we may be excused for thinking that Sir John's love of symmetry in fiscal matters carries him a little too far. A cess of one per cent. may in itself be a mere fleabite, but a prudent Finance Minister would hardly care to test the practical truth of the old proverb about the last straw. Still less are we disposed to welcome Sir J. Strachey's scheme for equalising the salt duties at the expense of the famine-stricken people of Bombay and Madras. On this point we are entirely at one with Sir G. Campbell, who called attention the other day in Parliament to "the injustice of placing new burdens on the food of the poor, while the rich were not taxed in due proportion," and strongly protested against enhancing the salt tax in provinces which had just been suffering from a cruel famine. It is easy to say with Lord G. Hamilton that any attempt to equalise the salt tax by levelling downwards instead of upwards would have resulted in a large sacrifice of revenue. But that is a very sorry reason for adding twelve annas, or eighteenpence a maund, to a tax which, even at the old rate of R. 1. 12a., tended to check the consumption of one great necessary of life. It is not many years since Lord Hobart wrote a strong minute against any increase of a tax which pressed heavily on the poorer millions in Madras, slaying their cattle by tens of thousands, and making the people an easy prey to every passing epidemic. Our readers have been told again and again of the misery caused even by a moderate salt-tax in those parts of India where the mass of the people are too poor to buy as much of the life giving condiment as would serve to keep them and their cattle in a due state of health. But facts like these appear to weigh for nothing in the eyes of a financier who wants more money and prides himself on the symmetry of his fiscal arrangements. Even from his point of view, however, we fail to see the fairness of an adjustment which adds twelve annas to the tax in one half of India and remits only two or three in the other. The half-starved rayats of Madras, indeed, must admire the impartiality which taxes their salt, but forbears to burden them with a one per cent. cess. The Finance Minister distributes his favours with mathematical precision. There is a licence-tax for the men of trade, a land cess for the rayats in Upper India, and an enhanced salt-tax for those of the Dakhan. In looking about for ways and means he has somehow forgotten one class which might have yielded him a handsome revenue. To quote Sir G. Campbell, "if the horses, servants, and luxuries of the rich were taxed as in this country, a much larger sum than that to be raised by the addition to the salt-tax would be realised."

Here is a fine field open to the distressed financier; a field which, to our constant amazement, has never yet been explored. In England you cannot keep a small boy to help the housemaid and run errands for everybody, without paying the State fifteen shillings a year for the privilege. But in India, a nobleman or a wealthy householder may keep up a whole army of servants and retainers, mounted or on foot, and the Government takes no toll of all that social grandeur. A light tax on luxuries of this sort, with which no native of any mark would dream of dispensing, would probably furnish the Government with twice or thrice as much as it could possibly lose by gradually reducing the Salt-tax in Upper India to the lowest level hitherto reached in Madras. The experiment might be made with perfect safety and comparative ease; and it really ought to be made in the interests of those "dumb millions" whose patience under their growing burdens cannot be expected to last for ever.

QUETTAH.—II.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

The people of the Punjab and India, and probably Afghanistan, have never for a moment given their credence to Lord Ellenborough's honest proclamation of entire content at the vengeance exacted from Cabul by General Pollock. They believed firmly, even before the last war, which certainly must have confirmed their belief, that we are nursing projects of still further revenge, and making the Punjab a stepping-stone to Cabul. You indignantly disavow such an idea, and the hearer winks at you as if you were his accomplice—looks at you with admiration, as the best liar he ever saw for a white man; and when you get thoroughly angry, walks off in raptures at your acting, and tells his friends that you are the very deepest fellow he ever met with, and will certainly rise to the Governor-

Generalship of India! Even Time, that bleacher of sullied reputations, will never prove to native satisfaction that we desire not Cabul; and if, as from my heart I trust, the next, and the next generation, still find us unburdened with that heap of stones, they will only say that we "let I dare not wait upon I would."—Page 506 of Vol. I. of Sir Herbert Edwardes's "A Year on the Punjab Frontier," 1851.

SIR,—From the time of Mount Stuart Elphinstone up to the lamented death of Major James none of our distinguished Political Officers have done more to uphold the honour and to earn the gratitude of their countrymen than Sir Herbert B. Edwardes, who managed, with tact and temper, with justice and firmness, the wild republican descendants of Afghan, the son of Irmia, or Berkia, son of Saul, King of Israel.

I am anxious to point out that our false position at Quettah may, at any moment, be the cause of grave internal disturbances in India; the necessity of supporting our soldiers on that heap of stones may at any moment drain our most fertile and productive provinces of their means of protection from dacoit-robbers and other insurgents.

I beg those among our statesmen who profess to understand Indian policy, to study the events of the rebellion in the Nerbuddah territories during the first Afghan war. Our best civil officers could do little or nothing for the protection of British subjects, because our troops had been transferred to the North-Western Frontier. Since that time the value of property in the Nerbuddah territories has increased fourfold, and has become a rich prize in expectation, for murderous and torturing Pindaris.

The mobs, not soldiers, which our civil officers are authorised to enlist in a hurry on an emergency are very expensive, and are often worse than useless.

Can Lord Lytton inform us how he would provide for the protection of all the Europeans in India in the event of a rebellion? Has he realised to himself the vast responsibility he has undertaken?

There are many passages in Sir Henry Rawlinson's book warning us of the danger of a chronic conflagration in the heart of India. Unsuppressed rebellion will cause national bankruptcy. I will here quote one extract:—

But such reasons leave entirely out of consideration that India is a conquered country, where a certain amount of discontent must be ever smouldering which would be fanned into a chronic conflagration by the contingency of a rival European Power.—Page 144.

Lord Macaulay has narrated how delighted a Prime Minister was on hearing that Oleron was an island. The ignorance of the India Office as well as of the Foreign Office on the subject of geography is something marvellous. Lord Napier and Ettrick in his letter remarks:—

After the lapse of two years of persuasion on one side and procrastination on the other the Viceroy found himself compelled to act alone. He drew the northern frontier of Afghanistan under the advice of the Indian political geographers; his decision was sanctioned by the India Office, adopted by the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, imparted to the Amir, and notified to the Government of Russia. Nor was the equity and correctness of Lord Mayo's award seriously disputed by Prince Gortchakoff, who replied, with great moderation and some malice, that as the English Government had fixed the frontier they had incurred the responsibility of causing it to be respected.

Now let us see what Sir Henry Rawlinson, a very competent judge, has written regarding the non-performance of their duties by our Indian political geographers:—

But the Russian authorities, before replying, required to be informed as to the political geography of the countries beyond their frontier, and to this end obtained from Sir Roderick Murchison, President of the Royal Geographical Society, a map which had been recently compiled by Mr. Weller, a cartographer of some note, and which, being coloured according to ethnic rather than political divisions, gave rise to much embarrassment in the sequel. In Weller's map, indeed, Afghanistan Proper was bounded to the north by the line of the Indian Caucasus, while the whole of Afghan-Turkestan, between the mountains and the Oxus, and extending east and west from Badakhshan to Mymeneh, was coloured yellow, as if it constituted an independent territory.—P. 300.

And in page 6 of the Geographical Magazine for this month we read that our political geographers have, through their blundering, relinquished to Russian ambition not only Karateghin, but also Darwaz, Roshan, Shignan, and the Pamir, with part of Wakhan, which is tributary to Kabul. Queer friends these the Ameer may exclaim; they not only have incorrectly painted all of my dominions north of the Hindoo Kush, as independent of me, and have incorrectly drawn a boundary line showing that part of Wakhan is not tributary to me, but they send their soldiers to threaten me on the south in the midst of my own countrymen:—

The reasons which guided the selection of the course of the Oxus as the boundary through Wakhan are entirely groundless. They were derived from the historical disputes for the possession of the Oxus lowland, which pointed to the Oxus as the best boundary between Balkh and Bokhara. Hence it was determined to make the Oxus the boundary, not only in the lowlands, but also through the Alpine valleys and secluded communities of the highlands. It was all one to the learned pundit who had studied the conflicts of Persian, Afghan, Bokharian, and the rest, which had especially related to the possession of Balkh; and he entirely overlooked the altered nature of the case when he thought it an easy matter to carry his red line, which fitted so well along the rider in the plains, also along the river in the mountains, about which history told him next to nothing, and geography only revealed herself obscurely to her most ardent admirers.

—Your obedient servant,

Jan. 21.

THE FAMINE BUDGET.

The Madras Times thinks that Sir John Strachey seems to have anticipated the objections which would be expressed in Madras to increased taxation at this juncture, and, looking at his remarks from the stand-point of those who have to pay, we must express our conviction that justification for the measure proposed is amply made. The increased impost is so trifling that it will scarcely be felt by the poorest ryot, and therefore, on this point, no further objection can be urged; whilst on another, and a most important, matter, namely, that, as a part of the Empire, Madras must take its share in burden-bearing, we may be glad that matters are not worse. It would have been manifestly impolitic and unfair to put additional appreciable taxation on the ryot in either Madras or Bombay. The land tenure of Bengal and the North-West Provinces permit of increase in this direction; the ryotwary tenure does not. The expedience of a licence-tax to take in trades and others not immediately dependent upon the soil was, therefore, an inspiration, the full credit of which should be given to the authors of it. It is true that, when the ryots cease to be able to purchase, the petty trader's occupation is gone; but, with the return of means of living, comes renewed prosperity to the purveyors of articles of daily consumption. Some very sad cases of the suffering of petty traders in Chingleput, in consequence of the famine, recently came before us, and at the first blush we hesitated to approve the proposal. Further consideration, however, shows that, in this respect, as in the other form of taxation, namely, the increased duty on salt, the Supreme Authorities have acted wisely in making the imposition, and the local Government in deciding that the measure should come into operation at once. To recur for a moment to Sir John Strachey's remarks on the increase of salt dues in Madras, it should be noted that though, for the present, it is burdensome, the burden bears with it the promise of future benefit. Duties on articles of prime necessity in India are doomed, and, in the effort to secure equalisation, we have the earnest of ultimate abolition. This, in itself, is a matter of no small moment, and, in all fairness to the Government which has to face unpopularity in imposing taxation, should be borne in mind. In fact, in Bengal and the Upper Provinces, actual reduction has taken place. The length of our extract from Sir John Strachey's speech precludes our dealing with the question in more detail on the occasion. Indeed, it was to enable our readers to judge the matter for themselves that we obtained, by telegraph, the ipsissima verba of this portion of the Finance Minister's speech. For our own part, we think, under the strait in which the Government of India was placed, it has acted with great wisdom, and in a manner which should inspire confidence. We trust the sanguine expectation of Sir John Strachey as to the elasticity of the revenue will be borne out by the result; but we cannot help fearing that the loss of revenue has not been sufficiently allowed for.

The Bombay Gazette points out that in various ways Sir John Strachey really increases the taxation of India by two millions sterling a year, though he maintains that a portion of this amount is not new revenue, but savings by improved administration. Out of the two millions he takes one-fourth for his margin, and the balance forms the Famine Insurance Fund. Now, according to his own principles, this Fund should be applied to the extinction of debt. But the debt incurred since 1874 on account of famines is £16,000,000, the interest on which sum at 4½ per cent. is £720,000. This interest at least should be paid out of the proceeds of the new taxes; and the balance left will consequently be only £780,000. If this balance be spent from year to year on General Strachey's and Mr. Fairlie's cheap light railways—which would be a very dear bargain to the country—what is India to do when the next famine comes? A few more millions will then be wanted to be spent on the relief of distress, and, no money being available, the Finance Minister of the day will make a fresh appeal to the patriotism of the people and impose a few more taxes. It follows that, if the revenue yielded by the taxes now imposed is to be applied to the special purpose of insuring India against such famines as we have had experience of during the last five years, the balance available from year to year after payment of the interest on Famine debt already created should be resolutely kept in hand for use on an emergency. The project of spending it on narrow gauge local railways, most of which would be unproductive concerns, would simply lead to a waste of revenue, entailing a further annual loss to the State, and would leave the Imperial Government penniless to meet the next great famine. We think it will be a national misfortune if General Strachey be allowed to cover the country with his network of so-called subsidiary railways. Our rulers have been misled by the example of America, not seeing that there is no analogy between the condition of that country and that of India. In America, companies get immense concessions of land for constructing railroads through a quiet unopened country, and laying out towns to attract new settlers, so that virtually the railway companies in the United States are often the pioneers of civilisation. But in this old country no such speculative enterprises are possible. The Government, in constructing cheap light railways, warranted to carry goods and passengers at the lowest possible rates of speed, would simply compete with the bullock-carts and pack-bullocks on their own roads, which suffice for local needs; and the financial consequences of such competition would be in every way disastrous. Let the Government confine its attention for the present to the completion of the main lines of railway required in India, and it will find it has quite enough to do. There is one aspect of the new taxation which most of our contemporaries have overlooked. It will greatly relieve the Imperial Treasury, and probably enable Sir John Strachey to declare a surplus next April, for we assume that in calculating the cost of the Famine he has not deducted the profits on railway traffic, so that he will have fully half a million to put to his credit on this account. If he have a good surplus what will he do with it? There can, we think, be very little doubt that he will employ it to abolish or at least greatly reduce the Cotton Import Duties. We mentioned some little time ago that the proposal made by the Lancashire manufacturers for the imposition of an excise duty on yarn made in Indian mills had been seriously discussed at the India-office, and that the Government of India would have no option left them but to levy an excise unless they decided to admit English cotton goods duty free.

THE INDIAN MEDICAL SERVICE.

The Madras Mail remarks that an ominous rumour is current amongst the medical officers of Madras, that instructions have been received at the Surgeon-General's Office to stop all promotion in the Department, and to make no more civil appointments, except provisionally, pending the settlement of a scheme sent home for the reorganisation of the service. To stop promotion, we should think, is beyond even the powers of the Viceroy, inasmuch as the present arrangements as to rank, &c., of the Department are assured by a Royal Warrant. There can be no doubt there is room for some re-arrangement of the present double administrative staff, which is unnecessarily expensive; but any meddling with the pay and promotion of the executive officers, if to their disadvantage, will, we warn the Government, be fatal. What with the diminished rupee, and the past five years' worry under Surgeon-General Balfour, the Madras Medical Service, always the least sought after of the three Presidencies, is not over popular just now in the British medical schools. If faith be broken with the officers now out here, it will take years to undo the evil resulting. Under the changes which have taken place since the memorable 1858 year, the officers of the then local services have largely benefited in increased pensions and bonuses to retire upon. Why should not the medical officers of the old Company's service, if any changes be deemed necessary, be treated in the same liberal spirit? They seem to us as clearly entitled to a generous view of their position being taken as their more fortunate combatant brethren. The Madras Medical Fund, a monument of the thrift and business-like habits of the old Company's officers, was, when handed over to her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, upwards of three-quarters of a million pounds sterling to the good—a fund from which the then Company's officers might, we should imagine, receive liberal inducements to retire.

SIR J. STRACHEY ON PUBLIC WORKS.

The Pioneer observes that Public Works expenditure has been under a cloud for some time past. Now, all of a sudden, its horizon has brightened, and its whole sky blazes with sunshine. Every Government in India is to be encouraged to send in plans; piles of new projects are under consideration; it has been decided at this, the darkest hour of our fortunes, as far as money goes, that we can, after all, afford to go ahead with public works on a scale that has never yet been dreamt of. We are not finding fault with the policy laid down in the Viceroy's speech as to the way in which the famine surplus is to be laid out, but merely analysing the programme, and taking note of its general bearings on Indian Government. It is one more illustration of the wonderful way theories of Government in this country oscillate from side to side. The summer of 1876 was spent by Government in cutting down public works expenditure to a minimum, in accordance with the theory just above referred to. The country was hard up, and it was not to be allowed to squander money on improvements till it had saved the money. No Public Works officer would have dared to breathe the word "profits." His power of divining profits was scouted. It was all the Public Works Department could do to save itself from reductions that would have crippled its efficiency for many years. Now we are rather worse off for money than we were before. The Madras famine has cost more even than it was expected to cost, but the pendulum has swung over to the other side; the country is declared to want public works so badly, that though it is only paying its way with loans, the public works must be had. It is true that Government may intend to devote a considerable portion of the £1,500,000 to the reduction of debt, as well as to spend the rest on works, which, even if they will not mitigate the cost of the future famines to the State, will at all events reduce their destructive effect. There is nothing said by the Finance Minister nor by the Viceroy to the contrary, though, as we began by pointing out, there is surprisingly little said which tends to show that the reduction of debt is an object which the Government intends to pursue with ardour. On the other hand, we know, at all events, that a great deal of the famine surplus is to be spent on works, the object of which is to guard against peculiar emergencies, and the whole of which will not be immediately advantageous or continuously profitable in ordinary years. Some will be so; but it would be vain to imagine that new irrigation works, for instance, will yield an immediate and direct profit. So, therefore, there is but a fraction, large or small as it may be, of the million and-a-half to be devoted to wiping out the loans raised to pay for the Behar and Southern India famines. But Sir John Strachey seems to assume that the sixteen millions spent on those two famines—though actually spent within five years—may be considered as the normal charge on a period of ten years. It is clear, therefore, that the fraction of the million and-a-half to be devoted to the reduction of debt will not amount to sixteen millions in the course of ten years—if indeed the engineers leave anything for accumulation at all.

Bengal, Upper India, &c.

MILITARY.—A general order notifies, for the information of officers of the British Army, that 'foreign' service is reckoned from the date of embarkation at home to the date of disembarkation at home, and all leave of absence in England from India is reckoned as 'home' service.

ASIATIC SOCIETY.—At the meeting of the Bengal Asiatic Society, on Thursday last, Dr. Rajendralala Mitra read a paper on the early life of the Emperor Asoka, and Captain Waterhouse some papers of the French Geographical Society about recent researches in Turkestan and Thibet.

PROPOSED RAILWAYS.—Our Lahor contemporary tells us that a "project for connecting Ludiana with Bahawalpur by a State Railway running along the left bank of the Sutlej is said to be under consideration, and the ground may possibly be surveyed as soon as the Government has more funds at its disposal than at present."

AN INSURANCE CASE.—We hear it rumoured that several of the life assurance companies have suffered severely, owing to the death of Mr. Newton, Barrister-at-law, Meerut, who was largely insured in India. On inquiry we are glad to find that our local company, the "Oriental Government Security Life," has escaped, having, it appears, refused the risk only a few months ago.

THE FRONTIER.—Major-General Sir Sam. Browne has arrived at Peshawar on remount duty; the other members of the committee, being Veterinary-Surgeon F. F. Collins and Captain Luck, 15th Hussars. Peshawar has been honoured during the Christmas holidays with the presence of four Punjab Commissioners, namely, Messrs. James and Donald Macnabb, Arthur Brandreth, and Sir Richard Pollock. Mr. Evans, member for Derbyshire, has paid a flying visit to the frontier city during the past week.

SCINDIA.—After paying a farewell private visit to the Viceroy, Maharaja Scindia has left Calcutta. His Highness was accompanied to the railway station by the Foreign Under-Secretary, Mr. Plowden, and Lieutenant Rose, A.D.C. to the Viceroy, and left by the mail train at 9 P.M. The Maharaja will break his journey at Mirzapore for a couple of days' shooting, and then proceed direct to Gwalior.

THE MURDER OF MR. ROONAN.—The Englishman says:—"The King of Portugal, we see, telegraphed to the Queen asking for a commutation of the sentence of death on Joaquim Britto, the murderer of Mr. Roonan at Bombay. Her Majesty replied that the message would be communicated to Bombay, where the case was tried." We may add to this statement the fact that the commutation was asked for on the express ground that Britto was suffering to a greater or less extent from the insanity which was hereditary in his family.

SMALL POX IN LUCKNOW.—We give the statement as it reaches us, says the Lucknow paper, that from the commencement of the small-pox epidemic in Lucknow, to the 10th December, the mortality among infants and children generally had attained such fearful proportions as are represented by the figures 14,300; and this within a period of less than two months! The disease is still frightfully prevalent on all sides in both station and city; although the cantonments enjoy a comparative immunity, and the cases there have not only been few, but of a less virulent type than those occurring in the civil station and native town.

THE MOHAMMEDANS IN LUCKNOW.—It is reported from Lucknow that a notice is being circulated among the well-to-do Mohammedans throughout India, proposing that a public meeting should be held at some place near Bombay to discuss the best means of giving assistance to the Turks. One suggestion is that a regiment of Pathans, or other fighting men, should be raised and sent to Constantinople by steamer, all expenses being defrayed by subscriptions. But as India is British territory, this would be a breach of neutrality law.

A HEALTHY REGIMENT.—The 11th Hussars, during the eleven years of their Indian service, now drawn to a close, lost but sixty men from death. Probably no regiment in this country ever maintained a stricter, more uniform, and more perfect discipline than this highly efficient corps. It is the fashion for the home authorities to think that a regiment arriving from India is certainly in need of brushing up, and wheeling into line at some of the big camps, before it is fit to perform ordinary English garrison duty. Such an opinion, always wrong, will be thoroughly out of place if applied to Prince Albert's Hussars. We imagine a few lessons might be learned from them by many corps on the home establishment.—Pioneer.

A NEW OBSERVATORY.—In order to improve the means of gaining early information regarding meteorological changes in the Bay of Bengal, an observing station has been sanctioned for Diamond Island. It is believed that the Andaman Islands are the nearest land to the gathering place of the cyclones. Hitherto the Observatory least distant from the Andamans was Akyab, 480 miles off. The new Observatory, outside the Bassin harbour, will be 240 miles nearer the Andamans, and the observations taken on Diamond Island will be telegraphed to Calcutta daily at ten A.M. The observatories round the Bay of Bengal will now be Madras, False Point, Sagar Island, Akyab, Diamond Island, Rangoon and Moulmain.

FOREST DEPARTMENT.—According to a memorandum written a few months ago by the Inspector General of Forests on the cost of timber operations in the various Forest Divisions of the North-West Provinces, it is the opinion of Dr. Brandis that the present state of the forests of these provinces is not such as to justify extensive timber operations "except either to meet some urgent public demand and the regular timber requirements of the open country outside the hills, as far as they cannot be satisfied from other sources or the production of a considerable surplus revenue, which shall furnish the means for the protection and improvement of the forests." So far at least as the deodar forests were concerned this condition has, it would seem, been brought about mainly by the necessity of meeting the requirements of another department of the State for sleepers for the Rajpootana railways.

AN AMERICAN EURASIAN ON THE EURASIAN SITUATION IN INDIA.—"Carbondale, Illinois, September 22nd, 1877. I should most earnestly dissuade the Eurasians from any intentions to emigrate as agricultural colonists to this country—this emigration implying the accompaniment and presence of women and children. A sufficient knowledge of farming cannot be acquired, save by years of actual labour, observation, and even study. The Eurasian has not been drilled to the habits of discipline required by community societies; and until a few years of manual labour develop his physique, he will be distanced by his competitors in the labour market—the brawny German, Irishman, and Negro. But there is room and living in this country for every Eurasian man now in India. Let him come unencumbered by wife or child. Let him leave his dirty rags of prejudice behind him, and rise to a conception of the grandeur and dignity of honest labour,—and I feel sure that in five or six years, he will have built him a home to which he may then welcome his absent wife and child."—Indian Daily News.

ASSAM.—The latest news from the Naga expedition, telegraphed to a contemporary from Jorhat on the 26th Dec., is as follows:—The Angami Nagas of Mozeima, whose village was burnt, have been split up into separate parties. They have blocked the road, destroyed the bridge, and interrupted our communication between the force and Samaguting. One constable, who was escorting the dak, has been cut up, and another wounded. Another party has appeared between Samaguting and the plains. They speared another constable and wounded the dak-runner. They have also threatened Borpathar, an Assamese village in the plains, seventeen miles from Golaghat, and are said to have menaced Samaguting. The last dak from Samaguting came in escorted by twenty constables. A reinforcement of the police has arrived at Golaghat, and a detachment of the 43rd is expected from Debrughurh. The tactics of the Mozeima men appear to have been to allow us to burn their village without much opposition, having first removed their families, and then to threaten our communications in the rear. All quiet at Wokha. The police detachment from that place have returned, and are stationed, till further orders, at Golaghat. The Chief Commissioner arrived at Jorhat on the 23rd and is expected to leave for Golaghat shortly.

THE BALLOON AND THE CROCODILE.—The report of a balloon ascent at Calcutta by Mr. Lynn becomes interesting on account of an exciting incident which attended the descent. The report says: The ascent was almost vertical to what was probably its highest altitude, variously estimated from 1,500 to 2,000 feet. Mr. Lynn tells the following story of how he reached earth again:—"At 5.15 I was within 1,000 feet of terra firma, a rather inappropriate name for the locality, 24-Pergunnahs. A huge crocodile was moving towards me with an impressive steadiness, and when I came down slap into the mud and rushes, which for miles around me were over ten feet in height, I saw the monster's head level with the bulrushes. Had there been a slight breeze I think I could have anchored to this brute. Fortunately I had enough of ballast left to throw overboard just as this monster was within fifty yards of me. This enabled me to rise above the thick jungle to the length of my grappling rope, say about thirty feet. I have heard, and I thought I once proved, that a crocodile cannot turn rapidly, but I now found that I was mistaken. This one ran around my grappling rope. I hoped that he would impale himself on my grappling line; but I was doomed to disappointment; for as I had been calling very lustily for help, I found natives making their way towards me, wading through the thick mud and rushes. As the rushing sound was heard on all sides the crocodile made off; otherwise I think he would have waited for me. About half-a-dozen natives were induced by me, after much persuasion, to hold my rope. They led me to believe that they would have been alongside of me before, but they had seen the crocodile's head near the balloon car. The balloon was warped over the jungle and across creeks for nearly three miles. I should have said that this could never have been accomplished, for many times the natives were getting through mud three feet deep. At last we arrived at a small dry space. Here I emptied the balloon and packed it into the car. We had to cross two wide channels. The dead weight was got on to the heads of twelve natives, who had the pluck to get across the streams and mud up to their armpits. We at last arrived with the balloon at the Asiatic Jute Mills at Surra, and had it not been for the kindness of Mr. J. Preston and Mr. J. S. Miller I am convinced I should never have reached a place of safety."

FINAL GLIMPSES OF THE FAMINE.

Late on Christmas eve I reached Madura, that ancient city which of all others in Southern India makes the traveller most feign to exclaim, "There were giants in those days." It is a city of palaces and temples, planned on a scale of vastness that appeals to the imagination. Here the Brahmans of Southern India have their stronghold, and here the famine raged with its fiercest virulence. As the travellers' bungalow was occupied by a famine officer and his family, I had to be content with a bare cot for my night's rest, and inasmuch as there was a keen land wind blowing, I cannot conscientiously say that my Christmas eve was cheerfully spent. Next morning, Christmas Day, I was up betimes and went into the city. Beggars to right of me, beggars to left of me, whining and pleading. I entered the Pagoda, which is surely one of the strangest and biggest temples ever erected to a deity. A vast paved roof covers numerous long and sombre colonnades, from the pillars of which start out boldly strange figures of rampant horses and elephants, and wild warrior deities with an inconvenient number of legs and arms. There is quaint carving everywhere, and the eye becomes oppressed when it attempts to discriminate details. At five corners of the area of the Pagoda there springs up boldly, far into the air, towers brilliantly painted red, yellow, and green, and constructed in a style of architecture that defies description. Each tower looks like a pyramid that had been left to the mercies of a thousand demented sculptors, who had tried to imitate in general outline some of the great Buddhist temples of Rangoon, and each is terminated with a gigantic dragon with eyes a foot in diameter. By ascending dark staircases, and squeezing through trap doors, I managed to reach the immediate vicinity of one of these dragons. And what a glorious view had the monster had before his unwinking, staring eyes for centuries! Close to him were great towers, carved from basement to pinnacle; beneath, an enormous collection of houses and myriads of people moving along the broad thoroughfares; in the middle distance, a vast masonry tank gleamed from among the trees that threw their shadows upon its waters, while the grand proportions of Trimul Naik's Palace loomed to the right in solitary grandeur, dwarfing all the architecture near it; and in the distance, there were fields with a river running through them and hills that shut in the scene. It seemed discordant to suppose that this fair scene had frequently been the arena of bitter misery, and that even while I was gazing at its splendid and wealthy temples, its murmuring crowds beneath, and its surrounding well-watered verdure, Madura still enclosed a sorrowful amount of wretchedness, the work of famine. Quitting the side of my ugly friend the dragon, I once more reached the outer vestibule of the Pagoda. The guardians of the building resemble the Jewish priests who turned their synagogues into market places, for the vestibule, wonderful as its architecture is, is nothing but a bazaar, where natives squat on bamboo mats and tempt temple-goers with glass bangles, piece-goods, red paint, and pan-soparee. Here the beggars were a terrible pest. Old men and women, dragging emaciated children after them, whined for pice, and followed you with remarkable persistence. In the street, the beggars were there before me. One poor little wretch threw itself at my feet, and had scarcely strength to get up again, and another little skeleton sat by the wall staring into vacancy in a way that was simply pitiful to behold; he looked as if hunger had first taken away his flesh and then left him an idiot. I went into a shop, the keeper of which spoke English, and asked him how it was that there were so many wretched people moving about clamouring for relief when there was a relief camp near, and he smiled and said many of the people preferred begging and their liberty to food and some degree of supervision, and that a number of them had been in relief camps but were sent away to get work in their own villages when the reductions took place, and instead of going had stayed in Madura to beg. I learned in another shop that there was another reason for the great amount of distress that I saw everywhere in Madura. The relief camp is on the opposite side of the river Vegay from Madura. Many people had come into the city from the relief camp before the floods had commenced, and when they wanted to go back they could not get across the overswollen ford. I walked down to this ford in the evening. There was a long string of people passing and repassing; here and there a man was dragging a reluctant goat across, and another was guiding a team of oxen. The water flowing over the ford was about a foot and a-half deep, and presented no difficulties to any person with ordinary strength; but a very weak person would be washed away. Now, there were many weak persons who did not dare to attempt the ford, and there they sat on the bank, huddling their one thin rag round them, and gazing stolidly at the water and the picturesque crowd who were wading through it. One of the most horrible phases of the famine is the listlessness it fills its victims with. They move about as if in a dream, and life had lost all interest for them. They look as if their faculties were already numbed beneath the chill shadow of death. I watched one gaunt little boy coming down to the water's edge. He looked at the ford and then pulled his dirty thin cotton rag closer round him and moved slowly away, looking neither to the right nor the left of him. He crawled back again to the water's edge, and bent laboriously down and lapped up like a dog what was no better than liquid mud. He had a struggle to get to his feet again, but when he managed it at last he went slowly away with an air of utter apathetic desolation, and crouched down upon a step close to the road, staring vacantly in front of him.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

FAMINE RELIEF OPERATIONS IN THE PROVINCE OF MYSOR.

During the week ending the 22nd December there was no rain, but colder weather and a clearer sky than before, with heavy dews, which are good for the crops. The showers of the preceding week also did some good, but there is a general agreement now that the crop which is partly cut and partly on the ground is a much poorer one than was at first anticipated. Its sudden and surprising revival in September, when it had been so nearly lost in the drought of July and August, led people to think of it as very good, whereas it was in reality only just saved; it has suffered since then from a plague of caterpillars; and in the Eastern Districts, where the loss of cattle and of population has been greatest, and hardly more than half the usual area has been cultivated, there is reason to doubt whether there is food enough on the ground to feed the population till the next crop comes in. The Chief Commissioner has been led by this consideration to review the question of the collection of Land Revenue, to put off the first instalment from the 20th December to the 20th January, and to decide that, although no remissions of revenue can be granted, the demand shall be postponed till next year in the case of all ryots who have only dry lands, and have not cultivated half of their usual area. The effect of the shortness of the crops is to be seen in the prices which still rule high and have if anything risen a little since last week, especially in Mysor; and in the imports by rail, which amount to 1,279 tons, against 888 the week before. The exports from Bangalore also to the outlying districts continue to be brisk, and stand at almost the same figure as last week, 895 tons. The Civil Relief Officers have been mainly engaged during the week in carrying out the Preliminary Census, in preparation for the 19th January, and in distributing the funds allotted to them from the Mansion House Subscription. But several of them have suffered from the severe and unusual type of fever now prevalent; three officers have had to leave their posts, while others have been partially disabled. The number of persons employed on Civil Relief Works appears as 5,357, against 13,303 in the previous week. This decrease is mainly due to the steps taken in the Bangalore and Tumkur districts to transfer the labourers from roads supervised by the Civil Agency to works under professional superintendence only; a small proportion, however, have accepted the change, the distance test being a great stumbling-block to those who have any crops on the ground or any property in their houses, and the severer task-work exacted being a bug-bear to the idle and weak. On works conducted by Professional Agency there has been a slight increase, the numbers being 45,236, against 45,163; the increase has been almost entirely in the Tumkur district, where the operations of the department have been considerably extended; on the railway and other works near Bangalore there is a falling off. The numbers on Gratuitous Relief amounted to 13,223, a decrease to rehearsal. When she got out of the carriage two coolies were carrying a long bamboo pole which had formed part of the scaffolding of the theatre. By some means or other the further end of the pole hit against one of the pillars outside the theatre, causing the other end to swerve round and strike Miss May in the eye. The end of the pole was jagged, and one point struck Miss May in the corner of the eye, just missing the eyeball. Miss May was much prostrated by the shock to her system, and as all hope of her performing in the evening was abandoned, it was determined to postpone the performance.—Times of India.

OBITUARY.—It is with deep regret that we announce the death of Mr. George Miles, Head Uncovenanted Assistant-Secretary to Government, Bombay Secretariat. There are many in Poona who will hear of his death as a personal bereavement, and all will hear of it with surprise. A few weeks ago Mr. Miles slightly cut his hand with some paper which is prepared with arsenic. He put sticking plaster on it, and thus kept in the poison; from this cause came a severe inflammation and abscess on the hand, which ended in gangrene. He died early on the morning of Jan. 1. Death has been very busy in Bombay during the past fortnight, but none of death's victims will be so much mourned in Poona as George Rosslyn Miles.—Deccan Herald.

THE SHERWOOD FORESTERS.—Many of our readers remember H.M.'s 45th Regiment being stationed at Ghorpoorie in 1867-68, when a large portion of the regiment went to Abyssinia. The regiment has since been serving at stations in the Madras Presidency, and last of all at Bangalore. The regiment has been stationed at Bangalore for the past five years, and left it on Jan. 4, for Bombay. The regiment goes home by the first troopship for England. H.M.'s 45th was a popular regiment during its stay in Poona, and we are glad to find that it has maintained its popularity at all the stations it has been at since that time. Bangalore is very sorry to part with both the officers and men, who have always conducted themselves in a soldier-like and becoming manner towards all classes with whom they came in contact. H.M.'s 67th Regiment from Madras will relieve the 45th Regiment at Bangalore.—Poona Observer.

A BIG HAUL.—We extract the following from a private letter, the truth of the statements contained in which are vouched for:—"Here is a pretty story for you. The earth-work from Ahmedabad to Palunpore was let, without advertising, at 11 annas per 100 cubic feet. It was sub-let at 6 annas and then again at 4½ annas. As the total amount is 12 lacs, the first contractor gets about 5½ lacs clear profit; the second will get about 1½ lac. The whole 12 lacs' worth of work will therefore be done for actually 5 lacs, and the Government will lose 7 lacs! This appears monstrous, but I can vouch for the facts as told me by one who knows, and it was told without hesitation or making any secret of what is really no secret at all on the spot. The cause of this excess of expenditure lay in not advertising the contract.—Bombay Gazette.

THE ARMENIAN WILL CASE.—The great Armenian claimant case has been again before the Court at Bombay, and a commission has been ordered to issue to examine witnesses at Constantinople. The petitioners are certain Armenians called Skinderoglou, and the property in question is the estate of one Coja Cazar de Gregorio, who died in 1774, when on a voyage from Calcutta to Basra. Litigation has been going on for years about the estate, but there are four or five lakhs still left, and the petitioners asked that the estate might be divided amongst them in the proportions of one-half among the children of Jacob Skinderoglou and one-half among the children of Joseph Skinderoglou, that they might be paid the costs of the petition and other proceedings thereunder out of the moneys in the hands of the Accountant-General, and that the sum of Rs. 1,33,392, with interest from 1st August, 1863, might be ordered to be repaid by the Secretary of State for India, and that the funds, in the hands of the Accountant-General, might be paid to the petitioners.

GENERAL KENNEDY.—Major-General Kennedy, who was temporarily lent to the Government of Madras as Personal Assistant to the Duke of Buckingham, returned to Bombay during last week, and has subsequently left for Calcutta, where he will receive the honour of Knighthood on the 1st of January next. We rejoice that the Government has, for once at least, made a popular choice for its honours. It is to the personal exertions of General Kennedy that Bombay is indebted for its successful management of the famine. It is a remarkable fact, and one very creditable to General Kennedy, that while the Duke of Buckingham and Sir Richard Temple could not agree on important details in connection with famine relief, and were constantly quarrelling with each other, the Government of Bombay not only preserved its temper, but did excellent service to the famine-stricken, quietly and unostentatiously. No doubt the one pound ration was adopted here as well as at Madras; but Sir Richard Temple did not dare to meddle with our affairs as he did at Madras. The credit is almost entirely due to General Kennedy, and if any official deserves the warmest gratitude of the native public, both of Bombay and Madras, it is he.—Indian Spectator.

THE INDIAN MARINE.—The transformation of the Indian Marine, which involves its subjection to the Admiralty, and the consequent growth of home charges and home patronage, is being carried out with unusual moderation, and with as little outward evidence as could be expected, of that hunger for control and irresponsible spending which for years past has characterised the Westminster department in this direction. Most, if not all, the staff officers of the Bombay and Bengal Marine, who desired to remain under the new conditions, have not only been permitted to do so, but have been promoted or otherwise conciliated, and many of the new men taken on have been from the acclimatised, and familiar services of the P. and O. and British Indian Companies. Your readers may remember that this course was prefigured in your columns some time before Colonel Burne's constitution of the new Indian Naval Service was promulgated. One of the easiest, but to us in Bombay, most significant of the cautious transition steps taken in the new path, is the definite occupation, by his Excellency Admiral Corbett, Commander-in-Chief of H.M. East India Squadron, of the Commodore's bungalow, long devoted to the Superintendent of the Bombay Marine, as before him to the Commander-in-Chief of the Indian Navy. In this way, for the Admiral to have the official residence, seems quite in the natural order of things; but it must be noted that this arrangement causes the necessity of another residence being provided for the Superintendent of the Bombay Marine; and this is one of the numerous additions of expense that must follow the re-organisation.—Bombay Correspondent of the Englishman.

THE GOVERNOR.—The Governor and family are spending the holidays in Kandy. In a few days, should the weather permit, his Excellency proposes to start on a tour through the northern and eastern districts of the island. The Colonial Secretary will accompany the Governor, and soon after his return will proceed to Europe on six months' leave.

CIVIL.—No appointment has yet been made to fill the vacancy created in the North-Western Province by the retirement of Mr. Morris. The departure of Mr. Parsons on furlough has been postponed until March next, when he will have completed six years' service since his last leave.—Ceylon Times.

CIVIL SALARIES.—We are glad to be able to announce that the increase to the salaries of civil servants will be extended to all those of the Third Class drawing at present Rs. 6,000 per annum. Assistant Agents and others will henceforward draw at the rate of Rs. 7,500, a concession which we cannot believe will be denied those officers of the public service not coming under the regulations attaching to the Civil Service proper.

COLOMBO.—Sir John Code, the Consulting Engineer for our Harbour Works, is now in Colombo, on his way to the Australian Colonies, accompanied by his son. His presence here at this time will materially help the solution of the question of an enlarged harbour scheme. Sir John has paid a visit to the Governor at Kandy, after an inspection of the breakwater, and will, no doubt, determine the matter finally before leaving on the 10th instant for Australia.—Ceylon Times, Jan. 4.

SOLDIERS' INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION.—The report on the Lucknow Soldiers' Industrial Exhibition has been published. Thirty-nine regiments exhibited, with a total of 654 exhibitors, to whom ninety-three prizes of a total value of Rs. 2,267-8 were awarded. About two-thirds of the articles exhibited were sold. Attention is drawn to the absurdity of soldiers wasting their time over patchwork quilts and wool-work, which, if they were made by their wives and children, would be quite in keeping. Men should turn their attention to articles of more utility than these highly-prized and generally unbought articles. The three prizes for the best general collections were awarded by the central committee to the 1-5th Foot, the 63rd Foot, and the 1-25th Regiment.

ACCIDENTS.—We (Civil and Military Gazette) regret to have to record at this holiday season two unfortunate accidents, both resulting fatally. Mr. Cheers, an employé of the S. P. and D. Railway, and son of Lieut. Cheers, of Mooltan, went out to Raiwind shooting on the last day of the year, and in passing through the wire fencing of the railway dragged his gun after him by the muzzle, when the hammer caught, and the gun went off, the whole charge passing through his heart. He received a Volunteer funeral on the evening of the 31st at Lahor. The other case was that of Mr. Patrick McDermott, of the Stores' Office, of the P. N. S. Railway. While driving home on New Year's day, his horse, being somewhat skittish, ran the dog-cart on to the gate post of the compound. The wheel came off, and Mr. McDermott was thrown out, the cart turning over upon him and injuring his skull. He did not recover consciousness, and died within eighteen hours. His wife and sister, who were with him, were also thrown out and severely bruised.

MR. A. GRANT, Director of State Railways, Colonel Macleod Innes, R.E., and Major Trail, R.E., went to Multan on Saturday, Dec. 29, to start on a tour of inspection of the Indus Valley State Railway.

THE latest district report from Sialkot tells us that the prospects were looking a little gloomy, as the late heavy rain had caused floods in the Deg and Aik nullahs, which had washed up the late sowings.

It is reported that the young Raja of Lambagraon, in the Panjab, who is at present under charge of the Court of Wards, is to be sent to the Mayo College at Ajmir to complete his education.

RETIREMENT OF GENERAL INDIAN OFFICERS OVER SEVENTY YEARS OF AGE.

The London Gazette of Jan. 22 contains the following order:—
“Victoria, by the grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Queen, Defender of the Faith, Empress of India. Whereas it has been represented to us that it is expedient to provide for the retirement of general officers of our Indian forces, who shall have attained or shall attain the age of seventy years, our will and pleasure is that every general officer who shall have attained or shall attain the age of seventy years, by or after the 1st day of October, 1877, shall be permanently removed from the establishment of effective general officers to the Retired List, unless in any special case it shall be represented to us by our Secretary of State for India in Council that a relaxation of this rule would be for the good of our service. In case such general officer shall have been holding a staff appointment on the 1st day of October, 1877, he may continue to hold it until the expiration of the term for which he was appointed, unless it appear to our Secretary of State for India in Council to be expedient that he should sooner be removed to the Retired List. Given at our Court at Osborne, this 31st day of December, in the year of our Lord, 1877, and in the forty-first year of our reign. By her Majesty's command.—SALISBURY.”

With reference to the above, the general officers resident in this country, who have reached the prescribed age, have already been written to by the Military Secretary, and informed that “this measure in no way prejudices the claims of the widows of general officers on the Fund formerly called Lord Clive's.”

Home.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders for £265,000 bills on India were received at the Bank of England on Jan. 30. £160,800 were allotted drawn on Calcutta, £100,000 on Bombay, and £4,200 on Madras. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras at 1s. 8d. per rupee will receive about 16 per cent. of the amount tendered for, and on Bombay at that rate about 11 per cent., and above that rate in full.

THE "SERAPIS."—A telegram has been received at Portsmouth stating that the Serapis, Indian troopship, which was expected to arrive from Bombay on the 5th inst., will not reach Portsmouth until the 13th or 14th, having fallen in with gales to the eastward of Malta. She has on board the 56th Regiment for Parkhurst, the F and G Batteries C Brigade R.H.A., and a number of invalids and time expired men.

TROOPS FROM INDIA.—The Junna, Captain Parsons, which left Bombay on December 20, arrived at Portsmouth on the 25th ult., having on board the 2nd Battalion 12th Regiment, for Gosport, and a number of invalids and time-expired men. She reached Malta on Jan. 12, and would have arrived at Portsmouth on the 22nd, had she not been detained at Malta by Admiralty order until the 15th. Colonel Crowe, Royal Horse Artillery, and Major Rees and Lieutenant M'Mahon, Royal Artillery, did not proceed further than Malta. The wife of Colonel M'Kay, 12th Regiment, died during the passage. There were no births. The Junna encountered a heavy gale in the Channel.

In 1860 he was appointed Chief Justice of Ceylon, and he held that post until about two years ago, when he resigned, owing to ill-health, and received a full retiring pension. In literature he made his mark by such works as "The Fifteen Decisive Battles of the World," "The British Constitution," "A History of the Ottoman Turks," &c.

THE BRITISH INDIA TEA COMPANY (LIMITED).—The half-yearly general meeting of the British India Tea Company (Limited) was held on Jan. 31, at the offices, Great Winchester-street Buildings. Mr. A. R. Capel, a director, presided, and in moving the adoption of the report said the directors, of course, were very much disappointed at the collapse of the tea market, which had prevented them from putting before the shareholders as good an account as they otherwise would. The increase in the production of tea had been almost up to the estimate given in January. The final weighments were now 432,733lb., or nearly 10,000lb. more than stated in their report as the out-turn from their gardens in 1877; and this showed an increase over the previous season of 68,564lb. Had the prices of tea kept up to anything like those of the previous year they would have had a very satisfactory report; but owing to various circumstances, such as the large stocks held by the dealers, the greatly increased production of tea this year, and the inferior quality of the great bulk owing, not to the managers making bad tea, but to the weather, there had been a falling off of from 4d. to 8d. per lb. They had looked for a fall of 4d. per lb. all round, and with that they would have shown a very favourable result; but the reduction had been so great that their calculations had been all upset. Before the close of the season, however, there might be some "rally," and the latter part of the tea might fetch better prices than the first. All their gardens were kept up in an efficient state, and from the reports of their various managers the prospects of the next season look favourable, and if they could only get weather suitable for tea, he had no doubt the quality would be far superior to this season's. Mr. J. Stuart, a director, seconded the motion, which was carried unanimously, and the meeting then separated.

THE INDIAN IRRIGATION SOCIETY.—Replying to a letter from Mr. E. Jenkins, M.P., which was recently published, Mr. U. R. Burke, secretary of the Indian Irrigation Society, writes as follows:—"As the object of the society that you, in common with some five or six thousand other persons, were invited to join appears from the prospectus sent you to be 'advocate the appointment of a Royal Commission of Inquiry into the result of existing irrigation works in India, and as to the works necessary to be undertaken with the view of preventing the recurrence of famines in that country,' I think that we can scarcely be said to have put forth ideas which are either 'impolitic' or 'extravagant.' The society, in fact, is committed to no 'ideas' whatever beyond the necessity for inquiry, which we are happy to see is recognised in her Majesty's Speech on opening Parliament. Most of our committee, indeed, are of opinion that a judicious extension of irrigation canals is one of the most urgent wants of India, and, as regards Sir Arthur Cotton, although all the other members of our committee do not necessarily go as far as he does, he can scarcely be called a mere 'theorist' even by those who do not agree with him, inasmuch as he himself constructed the two most practically successful irrigation works in India—the Godavery and the Tanjore Canals—which are paying, according to the Government returns, no less than 86 and 21 per cent. per annum respectively on the original outlay. With regard to 'the encouragement of Indian modes of irrigation planned and carried out by Indians,' our committee cannot agree with you that they would be likely 'to be far more effective than the expensive projects of English engineers.' But the question would possibly form one of the subjects for inquiry by the proposed Royal Commission. As to the form in which subscriptions are asked for, and to which you take exception, I am directed to say that, although the primary object of our society is to obtain a Royal Commission of Inquiry, its further action will depend upon the results of that inquiry."

OUR RELATIONS WITH THE PEOPLE OF INDIA.—On Saturday afternoon the theatre of the Society of Arts was crowded by an assemblage of ladies and gentlemen gathered to hear a lecture by Sir George Campbell, M.P., on "Our Relations to the People of India," which was delivered under the auspices of the Working Men's Club and Institute Union. Mr. Hodgson Pratt briefly introduced the lecturer. Sir George Campbell commenced by observing that the people of India were divided into two classes—the real natives as we found them, and a second class of natives whose ideas were very much changed by ourselves. In the early part of our rule there was very little change in the native institutions, laws, and modes of government; but there was a great change in the personnel of the administration. Instead of corrupt plundering, tyrannical native hordes, the government was placed in the hands of European administrators. So far our rule was a great improvement. With regard to the later state of our administration we fell into another extreme, and instead of yielding too much to the natives we began to introduce too much our own ideas, and supersede the natives' indigenous system of local government by our Indian courts of justice. The lecturer proceeded to enlarge upon the discontent which prevailed in many of the provinces in consequence. The second class of natives—"Young India," as he called them, were a small but very influential section of the people—that influence arising from their having been educated by us. Sir George at some length strongly urged the necessity of educating the lower classes, and also of giving a more practical turn to the education of the upper classes, which he said was of too metaphysical a character. They ought to be taught the arts and sciences, whereas now they were too intellectually educated, and all they cared for were the high offices in the Government service and the law. He then spoke of the very great freedom of the press, which he contended was used to the advantage of the rich. After a short discussion a cordial vote of thanks to Sir George Campbell was passed.

THE NEW G.C.M.G.—Lieut.-General Sir Arthur Purves Phayre, K.C.S.I., C.B., of the Bengal Staff Corps, Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Mauritius, has been gazetted a Knight Grand Cross of the Order of St. Michael and St. George. Sir Arthur Phayre is a son of Richard Phayre, Esq., of Shrewsbury, where he was born in 1812. At the age of sixteen he entered the military service of the East India Company on their Bengal establishment, and his various commissions are dated as follows:—Ensign 7th N.I., Aug. 13, 1828; lieutenant, July 9, 1838; brevet captain, Aug. 13, 1843; captain, May 16, 1849; brevet major, June 20, 1854; major, Jan. 10, 1855; lieutenant colonel 4th European Regiment, Jan. 22, 1859; brevet colonel, Feb. 18, 1866; major-general, Aug. 9, 1870; and lieutenant general, Oct. 1, 1877. He originally belonged to the 7th Bengal Native Infantry, but was transferred to civil employ at an early period in his career, being appointed assistant to the Commissioner of the Tenasserim Provinces on Dec. 17, 1846, and Commissioner of Arracan on April 20, 1849. He was transferred to the Bengal Staff Corps in 1866, having been appointed Chief Commissioner of British Burmah on Jan. 31, 1862, and was created a Companion of the Civil Division of the Order of the Bath on March 30, 1863. During his tenure of office in British Burmah he concluded several important treaties with the Burmese monarch at Mandalay, and on his retirement from the office, in 1867, he was nominated a Knight Commander of the Order of the Star of India in recognition of his long and efficient services. Sir Arthur Phayre, after remaining in England for seven years, was appointed Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Mauritius in October, 1874, and has now received the Grand Cross of the Order of St. Michael and St. George for his colonial services. The only members of the Indian Services who have received the distinction of G.C.M.G. are General Sir Patrick Grant, G.C.B., formerly of the Bengal Army, awarded the decoration for his services as Governor of Malta; and Sir John Peter Grant, K.C.B., late of the Bengal Civil Service, who received it at the close of his Governorship of Jamaica.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, Jan. 28.—MR. OLIPHANT AND SIR SALAR JUNG.—Lord G. HAMILTON, replying to Mr. CHAPLIN, said that under the treaty negotiated between the Government of the Nizam and the Indian Government, no European was allowed to be in the service of the Nizam, or to live in the State of Hyderabad, except with the sanction of the Indian Government. Subject to that permission, Mr. Oliphant accepted the post of Sir Salar Jung's Secretary. The Indian Government had reason to believe that the presence of Mr. Oliphant at Hyderabad was not conducive to a good understanding between the two Governments, and therefore they felt themselves compelled to withdraw the sanction they had given. The Secretary of State was of opinion that it would not be for the public interest that the papers should be laid upon the table.

THE PERAK EXPEDITION.—Mr. HARDY, replying to Mr. Serjeant SIMON, expressed his regret that the special allowances to the officers and men of the Perak Expedition had not yet been paid. The fact was that there had been a correspondence between four departments, which had necessarily led to some delay. The recommendations of the War Office had long ago left his department, and he had reason to believe that they would be very speedily agreed to.—Mr. Serjeant SIMON: In whose hands does the matter now rest?—Mr. HARDY: With the Treasury, I believe.—(Laughter.)

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, Jan. 31.—QUETTAH.—Replying to Mr. GRANT DUFF, Lord GEORGE HAMILTON said the reply of the Indian Secretary to the Viceroy, in reply to the latter's despatch of March 23, 1877, came under the head of secret despatches; but, as the occupation of Quetta had given rise to some misapprehensions, the Indian Secretary would waive his right to refuse production of the despatch, and, if the hon. gentleman would move for it, it would be produced.

BILLIARDS IN CALCUTTA.—It was expected that the second match between Mr. Courjon and the Champion would result in a close and interesting game, and give the amateur an opportunity of retrieving his loss of prestige in former defeats. To this circumstance probably was attributable in some measure a good attendance at the Dalhousie Institute last night; but the Fates were not propitious, and at the last minute it was notified that Mr. Courjon was unable to keep his appointment owing to indisposition. At first it appeared as if nobody was inclined to face the Champion, though we noticed among the gentlemen present some of our best amateur players. Eventually, however, a Mr. Green consented to fill the vacancy; and play was begun a little after nine o'clock. The amateur was conceded 650 points out of a thousand, and notwithstanding that Roberts was in fairly good form, Mr. Green played very pluckily, though towards the finish, when the Champion's breaks came rapidly, he lost heart, missing easy shots, and attempting impossible hazards and cannons. Roberts broke with the usual miss in baulk, while Mr. Green played off the red, but without scoring. The Champion then put together a small break of 11, and immediately after another of 12. Here Mr. Green made his largest break of the evening, 18, but for some time after this contributed nothing beyond twos and threes towards his score; while Roberts, with breaks of 43, 32, 54, 83 (including eleven spot strokes), 56, 75, &c., rapidly indemnified himself for the points he had allowed, till he ultimately caught up Mr. Green at 838. The latter at this stage put together one or two little breaks in good style, but his affairs were in too desperate a condition, and with some minor scoring and one large break of 77 Roberts passed him at 863 with an unfinished break. The Champion did not avail himself greatly of the spot stroke; for with the one exception mentioned, though he frequently got his ball in position for it after holing the red, he did not seem to be anxious to pursue his advantage. After the game specimens of the Champion's hand-play concluded the evening's exhibition.—Indian Daily News.

A RIDE TO KHIVA

Royal Horse Guards.

Says page 13:—"Two pairs of boots lined with fur were also taken; and for physio—with which it is as well to be supplied when travelling in out-of-the-way places—some quinine and Cocker's Pills, the latter a most invaluable medicine, and one which I have used on the natives of Central Africa with the greatest possible success. In fact, the marvellous effects produced upon the mind and body of an Arab Sheikh, who was impervious to all native medicines, when I administered to him five

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS COMPANY (Limited).

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer.

Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d. postage, free. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, free. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, free.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly, NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS, &c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, free.

PYRETIC SALINE.

Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.

Her Majesty's Representative, the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor,

H. LAMPLOUGH, Consulting Chemist, 113, HOLBORN, E.C.,

Second door from Hutton-garden, London, and of all respectable Chemists. In Bottles, 2s. 6d., 4s. 6d., 11s., and 21s.

GRATEFUL-COMFORTING.
BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—See Article in the Civil Service Gazette.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are from Bombay, January 21; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, January 19; Calcutta, January 18.

THE Indian papers give full reports of Sir Andrew Clarke's speech, as delivered at the meeting of the Legislative Council on January 16. Its main substance was telegraphed home more than three weeks ago. We may give however a passage or two from the full report, as worthy of special notice. With regard, for instance, to the great question of remedies for famine Sir Andrew desires

Most emphatically to record the fact that, though not an Irrigation Engineer myself (for my experience in this field of my profession has been very limited), I have approached the consideration of the subject as applicable to all India, prejudiced in favour not only of Irrigation, but also of Inland Navigation, and that one of my dreams has been the hope that during the time I was to sit at this Council Board I would unite the waters of the Arabian Sea with those of the Bay of Bengal by an inland channel. The stern realities that confronted me have dispelled this illusion, but at any rate this bare statement should clear me from the charge that because I have had "larger experience in Railways, I am therefore biased in favour of Railway enterprises.

AFTER pointing out that a complete scheme of irrigation for India would cost 700 millions, Sir Andrew holds that, even admitting the dictum that "there is not a district in India that could not be more or less irrigated," and assuming that only 100 millions of acres, or 156,000 square miles, of its whole surface could be irrigated at the rate of £2 per acre, a capital outlay of 200 millions would be needed, and an annual burden imposed on the people of eight millions sterling to cover the interest charge at 4 per cent. But the fatal objection thus suggested is strengthened, in his opinion, by the precarious nature of the revenue derivable from such works. An instance to the point is quoted from the Bengal Revenue Report for the past official year:—

In Midnapur the rainfall was 75 inches more in the opinion of the ryots than is good even for rice. Hence canal water was at a discount. Those cultivators who have executed leases at the commencement of the season regretted that they had done so, and the result seemed to justify their view of the case, as numerous careful experiments made by both Revenue and Engineer Departments showed that the out-turn of the irrigated crops was in no degree superior to that of the unirrigated. This following upon a previous year of good rainfall has brought the Midnapur Canal into the greatest disfavour. There was a large falling off in the leased area, which has again been followed by a very much larger decrease in 1877-78.

And here is another passage from the speech itself, which may give food for thought on both sides of the question:—

Even if we had the water at command, and it were otherwise practicable to protect all the agricultural land of India, it would demand on this basis an outlay of at least some three hundred millions sterling. This would build some 40,000 miles of railway, the fourth of which would give us an insurance not against famines, but certainly against extreme scarcity, distress, and death from want. I said just now if practicable, because, in order to irrigate, we must have water, either annual from heaven or perennial from the snows of the Himalayas. The first we must regard, I fear, as precarious and uncertain, and as for the last, great as is the extent of the region over which the snow waters have their influence, and though possibly more may yet be garnered of their generous and perpetually recurring flow, we have already in the Punjab and in the North-Western Provinces, especially in the latter, appropriated so great a quantity of it, that we fear we are approaching the limits of the supply. This last year we are told that the Ganges Canal was strained to its utmost, and at the tail of its distributaries the cultivators got but a scant supply; thus rendering more doubtful than before the wisdom of drawing off any further supply for the proposed Eastern Ganges Canal. It is in years like the past one that the great advantages of irrigation are so apparent. We have evidence that the undeveloped Sone has already saved harvests, which must otherwise have perished, of more than a million sterling in value, whilst in the recent visitation in Madras the irrigated districts of the Godavery, Tanjore and Trichinopoly have practically paid their land revenue in full. The Kistna District, where the Irrigation project is not complete, has had remitted some 15 per cent.; but in the unirrigated districts, remissions ranging from 30 to 70 per cent. have prevailed, whilst they have drawn from the irrigated districts food to the value of some £150,000 exported by sea alone.

Of railways on the other hand Sir Andrew can speak with confidence as "now paying investments in the matter of direct returns:—"

They have taught the people the advantages of rapid locomotion, and the merchant and trader know well without such teaching the value of the telegraph and that of the railway in the matter of quick returns. The railway system must continue to expand, and will expand till every inhabitant of India is within fifty to one hundred miles of a line. But there is an argument for railways which has especial force in a time of famine. A grass famine may be said to be as bad as a grain famine. For if the cattle on which the tilling of the ground is dependent cannot get fodder or even grass, the people are indeed in a bad way. Their only resource is to take time by the forelock, as thousands have done in Upper and Central India in the course of the last few months when scarcity threatened, and, as in the case of a water famine, emigrate to distant tracts in order to save their cattle.

SIR ANDREW believed that by insuring the closest scrutiny into the soundness of every scheme and the accuracy of every estimate he was a truer friend to irrigation than those who saw in water a cure for every ill. The only practical course was to recognise mutual inter-dependence of different parts of so vast a country, and to provide means of distributing the surplus of one part to meet the deficiency of other parts. In the course of his remarks on railways, he commented on assertions that the alignment of railway lines was dictated by military considerations. If they have not yet helped the empire in war time they have in famine, besides causing a reduction in the strength of the British garrison of India. By this had been already saved more than thirty millions sterling. He concluded by glancing at preliminary arrangements which should be made by public works officers to meet future famines, deprecating delay in giving the unemployed work until disease and emaciation forced on the people the demoralisation inseparable from the pauper's dole: and urged that a review of the facts of the past rather than profuse promises of the future would carry conviction to men's minds, that what had been done by Government was sufficiently earnest to show that the path of duty on which it had entered would not be abandoned.

SOME complaints appear to have been made about the famine allowance given in Madras to engineers and subordinates of the Public Works Department coming from other Presidencies. The Government of India thought that in Madras, as in Bombay, famine officers of the Public Works Department might be granted an increased allowance equal to one fourth of their salary, subordinates getting one-third. This arrangement was favoured by Colonel Foord, Chief Engineer of the Madras Public Works Department. The Governor of Madras in Council, however, "did not see reason to sanction the grant;" and so the pay of the next higher grade was given.

WE observe that the Gazette of India contains a notification that ninety field officers, of whom forty may be from Bengal, thirty from Madras, and twenty from Bombay, will be allowed to retire on the same terms as heretofore during 1878.

WE dare say that many of the stories told against the Indian Public Works Department are absurdly exaggerated, if not wholly untrue. Nevertheless their frequent recurrence is sufficient excuse for our insertion of the following extract from a letter addressed to a Bombay contemporary by one who vouches for the facts:—

Here is a pretty story for you. The earth-work from Ahmadabad to Palampur was let without advertising at 11 annas per 100 cubic feet. It was sub-let at 6 annas, and then again at 4½ annas. As the total amount is 12 lacs, the first contractor gets about 5½ lacs clear profit; the second will get about 1½ lacs. The whole 12 lacs worth of work will therefore be done for actually 5 lacs and the Government will lose 7 lacs! This appears monstrous, but I can vouch for the facts as told me by one who knows, as it was told without hesitation or making any secrets of what is really no secret at all on the spot. The cause of this excess of expenditure lay in not advertising the contract.

THE Pioneer mentions a hard case, which certainly tells against Mr. Bright's theory that India is governed in the interests of the services. It seems that Mr. Hogan, a Government apothecary, having earned a Government pension, got some other employment. Thereupon his pension was retrenched by an order in the Financial Department. In his ignorance of the rules he submitted for a long time, but eventually it was discovered that the retrenchment order was illegal. After many representations and an interval of seven years the order was cancelled, but Government, we are told, has been guilty of the manifest unfairness of refusing to pay the man his arrears of pension. The last appeal to the Viceroy has evoked the following reply:—"No. 3,459, Government of India, Financial Department, Simla, Oct. 3, 1877. Memorandum. In reply to his memorial, dated July 12, 1877, praying for the arrears of his pension from June 29, 1868, Mr. John Hogan, pensioned Apothecary and Assistant to the Civil Surgeon at Nagpur, is informed that the orders of the Government of India in the Financial Department, No. 3,107, of Dec. 22, 1876, declining to grant him arrears of pension, are final. The Governor-General in Council must decline to reopen the case." The rejection of the claim is declared to be a breach of the express orders of the Secretary of State, as passed in 1858, and never since repealed. No reason is assigned for rejecting the claim; and Mr. Hogan is expected to be content with the loss of Rs. 7,000, because "an inefficient audit clerk, and an inefficient auditing officer, stupidly recorded and passed a retrenchment order that should not have been recorded."

THE Times of India makes a praiseworthy attempt to justify the invention of the new Order of the Crown of India. As we have not the faintest idea of the object for which the Order was established, we will leave our readers to gather what instruction they can from the following remarks:—

There is a great deal of human nature in womankind, and the Orders which fire the souls of men with high resolve cannot be without its influence upon the gentler sex. At all events that was the opinion of many sovereigns and statesmen who lived before the year 1878, for, as we have said, ladies were honoured by decorations long prior to the establishment of the Order of the Crown of India. It is of course a thing to be considered whether the institution of an Order of the kind in this country well-advised, seeing the position which woman occupies in the estimation of her oriental lord and master. We do not venture to pronounce ex-cathedra on this most delicate question. We reserve to ourselves the right to modify, or even to change, our opinions according to the teachings of time. But it seems to us that it would be open to people of sanguine mind to maintain that the creation by the Queen-Empress of an illustrious Order specially intended to exalt and glorify woman is an event calculated to have a beneficial influence on the future of the sex in India. Whom the Sovereign delights to honour will always be honoured in every land, but more especially in the East. And it is worth observing that her Majesty can create an Order of the kind with much more grace and effect than could a Sovereign who was not of the sex which it is desired to honour. The fact that the Monarch is the Sovereign of the Order, that the Royal Princesses, and some foreign Princesses, are members of it, should make the decoration of the Crown of India an object of ambition in every Court in India. The Begum who obtains it will be the envy of all who hope to obtain it, and its possession will give dignity and influence to the wearer. Woman in India will learn for the first time that the State recognises her position. And what is of more importance, perhaps, even her lord and master may learn the same fact and be influenced by it in his thoughts and his behaviour. At present there is not a woman in India who dare sit down in her husband's presence without his express permission.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Pioneer complains that the new Order for Ladies is contrary to the Scriptures. It was written that a virtuous woman is a crown to her husband; whereas now, by the pleasure of her Majesty, a virtuous husband is a Crown to his wife.

In the Assam Forest Report for 1877-78, Mr. Mann, the Deputy Conservator, dwells on the policy of marking out and conserving the forests of Assam without delay, at a time when the State right over large areas has not yet clashed with any local interest, and before the forest land is despoiled by intruding villagers. The Chief Commissioner, agreeing with that view, praises Mr. Mann for the zeal he is showing. During the year, six tracts, with an area altogether of 236 square miles, and one large tract of 509 square miles, were added to the Government reserve; the work of demarcation went on steadily; forest rules for protection and improvement were published; a circular was sent round the province denouncing jungle fires; and some little progress was made in teaching the people the first principles of forestry. The Garos hold one forest range sacred to their Sylvan deities; "and this idea well-worked on, will suffice," Mr. Mann hopes, "to preserve the forests to a sufficient extent." It might even, we think, be carried still further if the forest officers cared to delude the people for their good. Natives, however, are not the only people who trouble the Department. A planter in the Mangaldai sub-division, wishing to get koir wood cheaply, almost persuaded the civil officers that the tree was useless. Luckily the civil officers consulted the Deputy Conservator, who urged that the koir tree was far too valuable for firewood. The same remark would apply to a good many Assam trees,—were it not for the "exorbitant cost of transport and the high price of labour." The two steam companies on the Brahmaputra ask rather high rates; but the correspondence on this matter was, when Mr. Mann sent in the report, still incomplete. Amongst the inquiries made by the Assam foresters was one into the box-woods of Assam and their fitness for the work of engravers and furniture makers. Three kinds were cut, seasoned and sent home. One, the Ahoy, Vitex peduncularis, will perhaps do, it is said, for engraver's blocks; the Bola and Amari, Morus laevigata and Anoora spectabilis, for chairs and tables. Another inquiry, as to whether the Hevia Braziliensis, or Pera Caoutchouc-tree, would grow in Assam, yielded a negative answer, which, in the opinion of the Chief Commissioner, is much to be regretted. This failure is balanced, however, by some successful experiments with the Ficus elastica. On the whole, forest conservancy in Assam seems to have begun well under an enthusiastic Deputy-Conservator and a sympathising Chief Commissioner.

THE medical wants of our soldiers in India seem to be supplied in the most unthrifty fashion. At Dinapore, for instance, according to the Pioneer, although one building is used as a hospital for the Infantry and Artillery, yet both hospitals are perfectly separate, with separate dispensaries, separate instruments, and separate subordinate staffs. It would be easy, and it would save money, to amalgamate them. At Benares and Meerut the same lack of union and economy prevails. At Bareilly the Royal Artillery and Infantry hospitals are close together, and yet each is in all things independent of the other.

At Lucknow the hospitals of two Infantry regiments are near to each other, and yet have separate drug stores, separate dispensaries, separate clothing stores and store-keepers. The heavy expense of medicines in India is due in no small degree to the needless multiplication of dispensaries. At Bareilly there are five separate military stores of drugs, viz., one for European Infantry, one for Artillery, one for the Garrison Staff, one for Native Infantry, and one for Native Cavalry. At this moment each station draws a separate drug supply for the Station Staff, often consisting of only a few persons. The consequence is, that each dispensary is small, inefficient, and absurdly expensive. Nothing would be easier than to amalgamate the medicine supplies of European regiments with those of the Staff. The Pioneer knows of one garrison where there is a hospital for a Native Cavalry detachment, with an average of four men sick; yet it has a separate dispensary; and within easy distance is a good Native Infantry hospital.

It is obvious that a great deal of money and money's worth must be wasted in the needless multiplication of hospitals and their equipments. In the words of the Pioneer, "It would be perfectly possible, in a few weeks, to abolish at a blow three-fourths of the Artillery hospitals and dispensaries in India, by combining them with the European Infantry hospitals; it would be perfectly possible to abolish all the Station Staff dispensaries, by amalgamating them with the European military hospital dispensaries. Efficiency would be developed, surveillance would be easy, and economy would be achieved." For regiments on the march properly fitted medicine chests or panniers might be used as they are at home, while no more than two dispensaries and drug-stores, one for the English, the other for the native troops, should be allowed in each of the larger cantonments or garrisons.

A CALCUTTA telegram of February 6 states that the deputation of fifty Jawakis which recently came to the British camp to make overtures for peace, has left the headquarters, considering the English terms of peace unacceptable.

ACCORDING to the Times telegram of yesterday's date the new Taxation Bills for Northern India were passed on Saturday through the Legislative Council without a dissentient voice. The changes made in the Bills since their introduction are slight. Sir John Strachey showed that the trading classes, on whom the new taxation will chiefly fall, have hitherto paid almost nothing towards defraying the State expenses, and that people who demand the taxation of the professional and official incomes are really demanding a universal income-tax. The maximum licence fee will be 500 rupees instead of 200; the lowest one rupee. In reply to Sir George Campbell he proved that no portion of the new taxes would fall upon the poor. They will affect no one whose annual earnings are less than 100 rupees; and in India persons having such an income are far above poverty. The licence fees also press proportionately more lightly on the smaller than the larger incomes. With regard to the new rates on land, Sir John Strachey maintained their justice, and said they would be but an insignificant burden. They will be paid by landlords, not by ryats, and will not be levied on the North-Western Provinces until the country has completely recovered from the late drought. The new measures, he said, were cordially approved by all the Local Governments, who anticipate no difficulty whatever in applying them in the respective Provinces. The proceeds of the new taxes, he further explained, were to be used for providing permanent insurance against famine throughout India. The debt will be reduced by a million and a-half each year, making a reduction at the close of each decade of fifteen millions. That sum could, if necessary, then be borrowed for the relief of the famine, without making the financial position worse than it was ten years previously. It would, however, be absurd actually to pay off debt at the same time that we are borrowing larger sums for protective works. The Government will, therefore, persevere in the construction of railways and canals, applying to this purpose the proceeds of the new taxes. If the capital invested in these works be prudently limited, the growing income will more than keep pace with the charge for interest. The actual results obtained from such works during the last six years are highly satisfactory. The net interest paid on guaranteed railway capital was one million and three quarters in 1871, and for the present year it will be no thing. The total annual charge for interest on all sorts of debt and railway capital is now less by two millions than it was six years ago, while the net increase on income from public works is half a million, although during this period the average annual expenditure on railways and canals was four millions, and during the same time sixteen millions have been spent in the relief of famine. The Local Governments will be made agents for levying the new taxes, and for executing the works by which the country is to be protected against famine. They are held responsible for securing the due development of income. Available funds, will, as far as possible, be distributed among the Provinces. With regard to the amount of contributions, the Local Governments have received largely increased powers, and the Government of India adds to its own powers of intelligent control by leaving to the Local Governments the details of administration.

THE Viceroy, in putting the questions to the Council, after noticing the generally favourable reception accorded to the financial proposals by the Local Governments, by the Indian Press, by native public opinion, and by the members of the Viceroyal Council, proceeded to discuss, at some length, the objections raised mainly by persons unacquainted with the details of the measures. He then went on to say the Government had been many months in negotiation with the Native States of Rajputana and Central India for the abolition of the Customs line. This negotiation is now nearly completed on a satisfactory basis; but the equalisation of British rates is an absolutely essential preliminary. The present reduction in Northern India testifies to the Government's wish to effect a fiscal reform rather than to increase the revenue by recent alterations. The Viceroy concluded by declaring his aim to be the reduction of the Salt Duties everywhere to the present level of Southern India, and by the extension of communications to cheapen the salt as much as was consistent with financial necessities.

FROM the same source we learn that the latest news of the Jawaki Expedition is to the effect that the deputation of Jawakis have proposed, as a condition preliminary to the consideration of peace conditions, that an adjustment account be first made in which the damages caused by the British Expeditions should be set off against the damage paid by the party who had done the most damage. This humorously insolent proposal was refused. The deputation also exhibited an audacious defiance in stealing five rifles belonging to the pickets of the Rifle Brigade at Shergasha.

WE regret to learn from the Madras Mail that the results of a rough experimental famine census in Mysor show a much larger mortality from the famine than was expected. The figures have not yet been finally verified; but so far they are said to be very disheartening.

FROM Assam we learn the deplorable death of Mr. W. O. A. Beckett, Settlement Officer in Silhet. It seems that he was about his work as usual one day on an elephant, when she somehow fell. Mr. Beckett was jerked off on to the ground, and the beast, half-mad with fright, ran her tusks into his thigh, and beat him about the head and body with her trunk. Mr. Beckett was carried to the Nutwampur tea-factory, where fortunately there happened to be a European doctor, and all that could be done was done for him. He lingered for ten days, and died on the 31st December last. Mr. Beckett, we are told, was a great favourite in the Assam Commission.

A DEFENCE COMMITTEE has been appointed to sit in Calcutta, with Admiral Bythsea as President, to consider the state of the defences of Indian ports. Certain improvements of the fortifications of Aden are to be undertaken at once.

CAPTAIN COLLINGS, R.E., who came out to report on a torpedo defence for the Indian coasts, has been obliged, by ill-health, to return to England.—Mr. John Jardine, of the Bombay Civil Service, has been appointed Judicial Commissioner of British Burmah, in the place of Mr. J. D. Sandford, who succeeds Mr. J. D. Gordon, C.S.I., as Judicial Commissioner of Mysor.

WE can hardly wonder at the small progress which Zenana Missions appear to be making in India if the story told in a Lucknow paper concerning a young Hindoo widow and an English lady be true. It appears that a Hindu widow of tender years desired to embrace the Christian religion, and escaped from her uncle's house to that of a lady named Mulvaney, a member of the Zenana Mission. The widow's relatives demanded her surrender, but Miss Mulvaney refused to give her up, and a suit for her restoration was brought into the local civil courts. These was decided in favour of the Zenana Mission, but the Judicial Commissioner reversed the decision on appeal, and Sundari has been restored to her disconsolate friends. During her examination she said:—"I left for religion, wished to adopt that of Jesus Christ; got the knowledge from the holy book, which is the Christian Bible inspired by the Holy Ghost." But as the Commissioner justly observed, "this cannot be accepted by a court of law as a sufficient reason for a minor to repudiate the protection of her lawful guardians."

THE deaths of two distinguished officers of the old Indian Army have been reported during the past week. One of these is Lieutenant-General Sir Alfred Thomas Wilde, K.C.B., C.S.I., member of her Majesty's Indian Council. Sir Alfred, who was brother of Lord Penzance, entered the Madras Army in 1838, served with distinction on the Malabar coast in 1843, and commanded the 4th Punjaub Infantry in their successful defence of the Bahadur Khel outpost in 1853. He was actively engaged against the Baidar Baluchis in 1857, and throughout the Mutiny of that and the following year, including the storming of Delhi, and the siege of Lucknow, where he was severely wounded. He commanded the same Regiment in the expedition against the Masud Waziris in 1860; and in 1868, with the rank of major-general, he commanded the Hazara Field Force in the expedition against the tribes of the Black Mountain. During the years 1869 and 1870 he acted as military secretary to the Governor of Madras, and he became a member of the Indian Council last year. He died last Thursday, at the age of 58. Colonel Thomas George Montgomerie, who died on the 3rd, at Bath, in his 48th year, had retired a year or two ago on the laurels he had, won as a Bengal Engineer. He entered that service in 1849, and soon made his mark as a scientific officer in the Survey Department. In 1854 he became First Assistant on the Grand Trigonometrical Survey, then conducted by Colonel Waugh. A few years later he rose to be Deputy Superintendent under Colonel Walker. Besides other services in the same important field, he trained up a choice band of native surveyors for the task of exploring regions untrodden by English feet; and "Montgomerie's Pandits" have lately made no small additions to our knowledge of Tibet and the adjacent countries. After his return home in 1874 Colonel Montgomerie was employed by the India Office on more than one scientific mission, which no one was better qualified to discharge.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL E. A. C. LAMBERT, who has lately returned from furlough, goes as Cantonment Magistrate to Peshawar.

MR. W. M. YOUNG, on giving up his appointment as Settlement Secretary to the Financial Commissioner, becomes Deputy Commissioner of Amritsar; Mr. J. W. Gardner, who has been officiating, going as Judicial Assistant to Amritsar.

IN consequence of the retirement of Lieut. col. F. B. Foote, Major W. G. Cubitt, v.c., is appointed Second in Command of the 16th Native Infantry; but Lieut. col. C. P. Hunter officiates during the absence of Major Cubitt on furlough.

A GENERAL COURT-MARTIAL has been ordered to assemble at Lucknow, with Colonel Appleyard, c.b., of the 85th Regiment, as President, for the trial of Lieut. Smith, Adjutant of the 4th Native Infantry, on charges connected with losses of the regimental funds.

THE REV. W. W. NICHOLLS, Chaplain of Bankipur, is appointed Chaplain of Dinapur, but remains at Bankipur for the present.

A PUBLIC Native Meeting is soon to be held at Madras to join the general protest against the new limit of age for admission to the Covenanted Civil Service.

THE total rainfall registered in Calcutta during the year 1877 was 63.47 inches, the average for the past twenty-four years having been 65.60 inches.

MR. F. GRAVES, District Superintendent of Police in Katak, has obtained the Government reward of Rs. 1,000 for passing the Examination in the Khond Language of Orissa.

MAJOR J. S. IRVINE goes as Brigade Major from Multan to Agra in the place of Lieut. col. H. Maxwell, who has gone on furlough.

PANDIT MANPHUL, C.S.I., a well-known Government official in the Panjab, died on Thursday, January 3.

SENIOR WALTER EUGENE DE SOUZA has been appointed Consul-General for Portugal in Calcutta.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL D. MACINTYRE, V.C., Commandant of the 2nd Gurkhas, is going on furlough for two years.

COLONEL DE KANTZOW has been appointed a Settlement Officer in Rajputana, and is engaged on boundary duty in Udaipur.

BREVET-COLONEL L. J. FARQUHARSON, of the Bengal Cavalry, and Brevet-Colonel A. W. Graham have retired under the Field Officers' Retirement Scheme.

MR. J. SIME, late Principal of the Delhi College, goes on leave for a year in April next.

DR. JOHN SHORTT, the well-known authority on snakes in Madras, was to retire from the service at the end of January.

LIEUTENANT-GENERAL ELMHIRST, c.b., is to be permitted to retain his command in the Madras Presidency until the 1st of April, 1879.

MR. P. H. MARTYR, an Assistant Revenue Settlement Officer in Burma, has obtained the Government reward of Rs. 1,000 for passing in the Karen language.

SIR RICHARD TEMPLE and his Staff will arrive in Calcutta on the 14th January, and will be the guests of H.E. the Viceroy.

DR. ABBOTT, Sanitary Commissioner of the Berars, shortly retires from the Service; and Dr. Little, Civil Surgeon of Akola, is regarded as his most probable successor.

THE whole regiment of the 32nd Pioneers has, it is stated, just received orders to proceed via Bugti Dera to the Bolan Pass, and should arrive at Quetta on the 26th January.

THE BENGAL POLICE.

THE Calcutta Gazette for Dec. 26, 1877, contains a long Resolution by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal on the Report of the Police Department for 1876. It is not a very satisfactory document, so far as the efforts of the Bengal Police to discover and punish criminals are concerned. It appears that the proportion of policemen to population varies from one out of nearly 5,000 souls in Bahar to one out of only 2,365 in Orissa; and yet, as Mr. Eden naturally remarks, "the people of Orissa are probably the most law-abiding in these provinces, and organised crime is practically unknown among them." Either, therefore, the police in that province are too many, or else they are too few in Bengal Proper and Bahar. In Howrah 75 per cent., and in the 24-Parganas 46 per cent. of the municipal police resigned, deserted, or got dismissed during the year; and the Inspector-General rightly observes that "no force can possibly be efficient if it be renewed every two or three years, and that there must be something radically wrong in the organisation of a body of which the members desert or resign in this wholesale manner." It appears that incompetent members of the district police are sometimes transferred to the municipal force, a practice which, says Mr. Eden, "should not be allowed." He has not much to say in favour of the village chaukidars, of whom only 182 were rewarded during the year, while the number punished was "very much greater," amounting to 950 in Bardwan alone. The Railway, Cantonment, and Salt Preventive Police, on the other hand, seem to have done their duty fairly well, and the highways were "generally free from robbery."

All the inspectors and sub-inspectors, with most of the head constables, are able to read and write, and the proportion of constables who can speak English is said to be increasing in the metropolitan districts. The conduct of the Bengal police showed no improvement on the previous year. Among the thousands punished judicially or departmentally, one sub-inspector, one head-constable, and four constables were punished for torture or maltreatment of prisoners, and one head-constable and eleven constables were convicted of extortion. Besides these, one inspector, two sub-inspectors, four head-constables, and four constables were put on trial for torture or extortion, but were acquitted, and the inspector was honourably acquitted. The number of false cases reported was 21,812, against 26,055 in the former year, or about 20 per cent. of the whole number reported. Mr. Eden points out that the proportion of false cases for each district does not tally with "what is known of the general litigiousness of the people of different parts of the province." There is too much reason, he thinks, to "fear that in many districts the habit exists of returning hopeless or troublesome cases as false. This is a mode of proceeding on the part of the police which a really active, efficient magistrate would at once check. The Lieutenant-Governor is quite unable to believe that of 2,186 cases reported in Bhagalpur, 809, or 37 per cent., were absolutely false, while in the neighbouring district of Monghyr the larger number of 2,761 only produced 343, or 13 per cent. of such cases." The Commissioner accounts for the great number of false cases in Bhagalpur by the theory that "the people are greater liars than in other parts of the division," a theory which does not quite satisfy the Lieutenant-Governor. He complains that little care is taken to prosecute and punish those who make false charges. In more than 10,000 such cases no inquiry at all was made. It appears that in some districts the police never trouble themselves to inquire into cases of alleged theft below the value of Rs. 5.

Such a practice is most irregular, and Mr. Eden finds it difficult to believe that any magistrate could sanction it. The police are provided for the protection of the poor as well as of the rich, but such an order as this practically involves the exclusion of the most helpless class from some of the benefits of good government. The punishment of offenders and the prevention of further crime is even more important than the restoration of stolen property to its rightful owners. The petty thief may cause in the aggregate a greater amount of suffering than even the professional dacoit, and nothing more surely leads to an increase in the numbers and confidence of this class than the systematic neglect by the police of petty depredations.

Of the 87,015 cases fairly tried in the year only 39·2 per cent. resulted in convictions. To the "dishonesty and ignorance of witnesses" this failure of justice may be largely owing, but something must also be ascribed to the ignorance and dishonesty of the police, and, according to Mr. Eden, to the lax supervision exercised by those in authority. The proportion of stolen property recovered was generally fair, but in Bankura it was only 3·9 per cent., a worse percentage than in any former year. Cases of "rioting and unlawful assembly" were fewer on the whole, but in some districts they had sensibly increased, especially in Dacca, which contributed 736 to the total of 1,933 cases. In Faridpur and Bakarganj no less than nineteen cases were attended with loss of life, and in the former one Zamindar was brutally murdered by his tenants, all which is "most discreditable to the local authorities." Most of these riots might be prevented by timely action on the part of the police and the magistrates, and the Lieutenant-Governor "will hold the local authorities responsible if every effort is not made to remove what Mr. Munro justly calls a blot on our administration."

Of the 4,108 charged with "serious offences against the person" only 39·6 per cent. were convicted. The number of murders rose from 302 to 342, very few of which were done by dacoits. Only 36·3 per cent. of the murderers were discovered, and only 273 out of 994 arrested were found guilty. Juries in Bengal as in England are often unwilling to condemn a prisoner to death, and the feeling is sometimes shared by the judge. In respect of murder, manslaughter, and deeds of violence, the Dacca Division heads the black list; and yet that is the division in which kidnapping has specially decreased. The number of dacoities, which had risen in 1874 to 421, and fallen next year to 230, fell in 1876 still further, to 137, Rajshahi and Chota Nagpur showing the largest decline. The Midnapur police were the most successful in hunting out and punishing the dacoits, while in the Dacca division only two out of sixteen cases resulted in convictions. The robberies reported were fewer than in the previous year, but only 37 per cent. were tried to conviction. In dealing with burglary cases the police appear to have failed lamentably, and the only remedy suggested by Mr. Monro is to lock up all persons "whom the police believe to be likely to steal." This, however, is a conclusion which Mr. Eden "cannot at all accept," nor is it borne out by Mr. Monro's arguments, which seem to show that although 3,618 bad characters were locked up that year in order to exterminate dacoity, a very large number of dacoits were still at large, of whom some committed the 137 dacoities which occurred during the year, while the others, prevented by the vigilance of the police from committing crime in gangs of five and upwards, have taken to solitary burglaries and thefts. The Inspector-General's arguments and proposals are thus summed up by Mr. Eden:—

In other words, having, by locking up for various terms or requiring security from 7,765 persons in three years, succeeded in reducing the number of offences against property from 64,808 in 1873 to 61,112 in 1876, we are to go on until we have locked up the offenders in the great majority of the latter. This is a sufficiently appalling prospect, and, apart altogether from the question of accommodation for the vast multitude of suspects whom it proposes to imprison, the Lieutenant-Governor is quite unable to understand how any one with the results of the last year's police action before him could support such a scheme. It is not clear how it happens that, while the police by mere force of supervision have been able to deter large numbers of criminals from associating in gangs of five, and thus committing dacoity, their success stops abruptly at this point, and they are powerless either to prevent criminals from committing burglaries alone, or in twos or threes, or to lay their hands on those over whom they are said to keep so strict a watch. The evil is probably greater, and the result more demoralising to the lower classes, than the continuance of dacoity.

How much of injustice and oppression lurks in the system of prosecutions for bad livelihood may be gathered from the returns themselves. Out of 4,861 persons thus prosecuted during the year, 1,243, or more than 25 per cent., were acquitted. In some districts "a positive increase in burglaries has followed on the imprisonment of a large number of suspects." In the Lieut.-Governor's opinion the system of locking up suspicious characters is bad in every way. Not only have innocent persons been treated as guilty, but "the really guilty are thrown together, and have ample time for maturing future schemes, while those who have been wrongly convicted, knowing the stigma which will always attach to them, and surrounded by evil influence in jail, will, in the majority of cases, return to society hardened criminals. Any man once in jail is, without much analysis of the nature of the crime for which he was confined, entered in the police records and known in his village as a 'dagi' or marked man. He is for the rest of his life subject to the persecution of unscrupulous police subordinates and to denunciation by any of his neighbours with whom he happens to quarrel." It appears from Mr. Monro's own showing, that any one denounced by a chaukidar and two or three rayats may be tried and shut-up as a bad character; but Mr. Eden "is determined that this fearful engine of oppression shall not be left uncontrolled in the hands of the police," and he insists that no one shall be imprisoned as a bad character until it has been fully proved after searching inquiry that he is "really a criminal who supports himself by preying upon society."

Mr. Eden reserves a few of his arrows for other culprits than the ordinary police. He objects to bringing petty cases into Court whenever they could be settled by district officers on the spot. He finds grave fault with a magistrate who sentenced to three months of jail an offender who had been convicted five times before. He has a quiet sneer at another magistrate who "so far misapprehends the relative importance of the general efficiency of the police and his own convenience that he has given prominence to a complaint that they do not make sufficiently satisfactory arrangements for his comfort 'when travelling.'" District Superintendents are enjoined to make "frequent and full inspection" of their police stations and outposts, however far removed from headquarters and good roads. If they do their duty in these and other respects, their subordinates will be more careful to do theirs:—

Efficiency and honesty cannot be expected if ignorant officers are left to their own clumsy devices, and the dishonest are encouraged to believe that the record of their tamperings with facts will remain buried and unknown in a vernacular report. For a District Superintendent to admit that his police are "wanting in detective ability," while those of a neighbouring district have distinguished themselves, is to confess his own incapacity. The police of adjoining districts in the same province are composed of practically the same material. The difference in the results attained by different officers is simply due to the difference in their ability, their industry, and their knowledge of men.

THE INCREASING SALT-TAX.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—I am glad to see that in your editorial of yesterday's date you have called the attention of the English public to Lord Hobart's strong Minute "against any increase of a tax which pressed heavily on the poorer millions in Madras, slaying their cattle by tens of thousands, and making the people an easy prey to every passing epidemic."

I am also glad to see that in page 103 you have quoted from two Indian newspapers, the Pioneer and the Bombay Gazette, evidence that there is no necessity for increasing the salt-tax; that probably Sir John Strachey will be able to declare a surplus next April, and that the profits on railway traffic will put half a million sterling to the credit of Government. There cannot be any excuse for increasing the salt-tax when we see the Indian Government determined to carry out Richard Strachey's plans for a new net-work of cheap railways; however cheap these may be, they will cost a good deal of money. For instance, in page 107 of your paper under the title of "A Big Haul" you have shown that for only the earthwork of a cheap railway from Ahmedabad to Pahlunpoor a contract for £120,000 has been given without advertising or inviting competition; the contractor has underlet it for £65,000, and the underlessee has underlet it for £50,000. Now here is a single instance of wasting public money to the extent of £70,000, which would have provided excellent salt medicine for eight millions of souls.

I know of no form of taxation in the civilised world so objectionable as the present Indian salt-tax; there is no tax in Turkey so bad; the grinding-tax in Italy is a very cruel one, but not so unjustifiable as a tax, which not only destroys the health of millions of British subjects, but also demoralises their minds. The salt-tax in India not only causes widespread disease among the poor, but it has taught our subjects there that the illicit manufacture of salt and the smuggling of salt are justifiable actions. To defy and evade the law has become a virtue as well as a very profitable and healthy employment. The salt-tax in Russia, though shown by Mr. Michell to be very heavy, is mild in comparison with the exactions in India.

What hypocrisy it is to fill pages of the Blue-books with dissertations upon dispensaries, and the benefits to be derived from the use of English medicines, while we are causing the poisoning of our poor subjects, and try to induce the independent States in India to do likewise? The commonest mode of adulterating salt for consumption by the poor is by mixing sulphate of soda or Glauber's salts with edible salt. I have known as much as 40 per cent. of sulphate of soda, which is duty free, in a specimen of cheap salt sold in the market as edible salt.

Now what does Pereira write regarding the characteristics, physiological effects, and uses of sulphate of soda?—

Its characteristics are those for sulphuric acid and soda already mentioned.

Physiological Effects.—It is a mild but efficient cooling laxative or purgative salt.

Uses.—It is employed as a common purgative, either alone or added to other purgatives.—Page 530, volume I., of Pereira's "Materia Medica."

Now to subject 150 millions of souls to the constant use of purgative salt from infancy to death, is a measure unworthy of the character of the English nation.

But it may be said that the poor need not eat sulphate of soda; they have the alternative either of paying a higher market price, and of getting unadulterated salt, and of eating less, or they may deprive their wives and children and aged parents of food in order to indulge their own appetites with a sufficient quantity of salt.

To diminish the consumption of salt in the burning plains of India is to invite the attacks of cholera, leprosy, and other disorders produced by impurity of blood, or, in Lord Hobart's words, to make "the people an easy prey to every passing epidemic."

And what hypocrisy it is to fill pages of the Blue-books with descriptions of the wonderful efforts made by Government in the cause of education, and of the enormous sums spent on Inspectors of Schools, &c., while the nations of India are taught to disobey the laws. I have never yet met with a native of India who deemed that the evasion of the Salt Laws was a wicked action; poor souls, they will say, why should we prevent diseased old women from picking up a little saline earth, which is the best medicine they could take?

I have known heart-rending cases of old women, suffering fearfully from leprosy, which was eating up their bodies, crying out day and night to their sons as a filial duty to bury them alive, or to cast them into the sacred water in order to put them out of their tortures.

Will the House of Commons call for the records of some of these trials, pathetic enough to make men with the hardest hearts weep? Are our magistrates in India to have their feelings blunted by the recurrence of such cases?

How long will the well-intentioned but ignorant people of England sanction an excessive salt-tax? Cowardly, because their Indian subjects must either pay it or die; they cannot resist the excisemen who march them off to British jails when found in possession of saline earth; I allude to the poor who pick up salt earth for themselves and their families. The manufacturers of illicit salt on a large scale flourish almost under the eyes of the Viceroy. What says the latest Government Report on the district North of Calcutta, a notice of which was published in the Times on the 5th ult. :—

"In Burdwan serious frauds on the salt revenue were discovered and punished. Refuse salt obtained in the process of making saltpetre was smuggled up from Calcutta under the name of hide salt free of duty, and then mixed with duty paid salt, or purified and sold as duty-paid salt."

The wholesale manufacture of chloride of sodium under pretence of making saltpetre has, to my own knowledge, been going on very extensively for thirty-five years; the extent of the illicit manufacture has at times nearly frightened the Government into discouraging the manufacture of saltpetre.—
Your obedient servant,
T.

IRRIGATION IN MADRAS.

The Pioneer remarks that Mr. Bright at Manchester referred to a map of Madras, in which the area under tank-irrigation is coloured blue; and he commented severely on the perversity of the Indian Government in not avoiding a famine with such a supply of water at hand. The mystery is very easy to explain. The greater number of these tanks are rain-fed, and if there is no rain they are utterly useless. From one of the hills in Mysor, Sir Richard Temple and party saw over 400 tanks, every one of which was completely dry. It must be admitted that no reservoir of water which derives its supply directly from rainfall can be depended on in a year of great drought, however valuable it may be in ordinary years to the cultivator. But there is a second class of tanks in Madras which are less open to this objection. These tanks are supplied from rivers, with which they are connected by channels. Not unfrequently a number of such storage-places for water are linked together, and are dependent on one river-system. By means of a weir it is practicable to secure enough water in the channel of the river to fill the tanks even in an exceptionally bad season. It is incumbent on the Madras Government to extend this system of irrigation to its fullest extent; and it is to be hoped that the lessons of the last year will not be disregarded. Financial difficulties no doubt there are. In spite of Sir Arthur Cotton's assertion, tank-making on an extensive and scientific scale is often not profitable to Government. In the Kistna district a large tank, called Peddakuncheria, has lately been restored; but, according to the official report, "the result as regards extension of irrigation has not been satisfactory. The ryots have hitherto failed to avail themselves of the ample supply of water provided for them, notwithstanding their previous engagements to take up land for wet cultivation." The lands near the tank are very fertile, and it is feared that if they are irrigated they will become saline. That this often happens we have unfortunate proof in any of the canal districts of the Ganges doab. But after all allowance is made for the financial difficulty, it is impossible to acquit the Madras Government of considerable inertness. The first thing to be done, as the P.W.D. Report of the Presidency for 1875-76 says, is to have all the tanks grouped into systems hydrographically connected, and thus refer them to natural drainage lines, and ultimately to river basins. According to the report, "measures are being taken towards this end." But considering that the presidency has enjoyed an irrigation department for ten years, it is strange that so little has as yet been done to ascertain the capabilities of works that are intimately connected with the agricultural prosperity of the country. It may be noticed that it is impossible to estimate the revenue which the Madras Government derives from these irrigation works, in the same way that the revenue derived from the canals of Upper India is known. Under the revenue system of the presidency the water-rate is not distinguished from the land rent strictly so-called, and the only way to calculate the value to the State of tank-irrigation is to find out the difference between the rents paid for dry land and for wet land of the same quality. The only exceptions to the general rule of the presidency are the deltas of the Godavery and the Kistna. A new settlement has been made of the irrigated areas of these deltas, in which water-rent has been distinguished from the land assessment, and credited to the canals. The Madras Government appears to be alive to the necessity of exhibiting the financial results of irrigation in an indisputable form; and special investigations are in progress which, when completed, will show the charges incurred, and the receipts derived from each of the larger works.

THE SLAVE TRADE.

The Times of India points out that a Merchant-Consul has a very difficult role to perform, owing to his acting in two distinct capacities, which often place him in false positions—one day he is engaged in commercial pursuits, and keen must he be to beat his Arab competitors at barter and exchange, or in pilgrim brokerage for the carriage of hajeas by sea; on the morrow he is surrounded with all the dignity that attends the British Consul when in his Court, and it not unfrequently happens that in the performance of the Consular duty, his commercial peers of yesterday are summoned to his presence. Another, and perhaps the greatest, objection to the employment of trading Consuls, is, that they are open to the attacks of malicious persons, who frequently accuse them of using their Consular power and influence in furthering their own business speculations. Accusations and insinuations of this nature, whether true or false, do not add to the dignity and prestige of our representatives abroad, who should be above the possibility of being affected by the breath of scandal. We are strongly of opinion that the appointment of trading Consuls, in Turkey at all events, is a mistake, and we hope soon to see a reform introduced in this matter. Mr. Beyts has repeatedly reported to our Foreign Office that the Turkish Governors of towns and provinces pay little or no attention to the complaints made to them concerning the import of slaves, which is openly carried on, immediately under the very eyes of our Consul. Such being the state of affairs, it is impossible to hope to suppress the slave trade as long as Turkish officials are allowed to ignore the repeated remonstrances of our Consuls on the subject. An officer from Downing-street, invested with full prestige, would compel the Ottoman authorities to render them every assistance in their power or at least to listen respectfully to his demands. Under the present regime the Turkish officials are more or less labouring under the impression that the reports of our trading Consuls are totally unheeded by the British Foreign-office, and indeed such an opinion is not altogether incorrect, as our Government, up to the present, have not pressed this matter at Constantinople. If, once for all, the governors in Turkish Arabia could be made to learn that opposition to our Consuls' requests would be followed by their dismissal, the slave-trade would be abolished in a few years. Till this is attained, no real or permanent abolition of slavery can ever be effected in the Ottoman dominions.

THE STATUE OF THE EMPRESS.

Calcutta is, according to Lord Lytton, the first city in the British Empire for the multitude of its statues. No other of our cities is "so richly dowered with memorial images of those whose lives have helped to make this Empire what it is." Some, indeed, have been inclined to think that Calcutta is becoming overstocked with images, and no act of the late Viceroy's was more heartily approved, than his refusal to allow a bronze statue of himself to be set up in Calcutta. Statues, like decorations, fulfil a useful purpose, when not made commonplace, and we owe something to Lord Northbrook for saving us from the pernicious notion that bronze statues belong of right to certain high offices. Had we erected a statue to Lord Northbrook it would have been difficult to break the series of statues at all. From Viceroys, we should easily have come down to Lieutenant-Governors and Members of Council, and perhaps even to Under-Secretaries of the local Government. Fortunately, statues are not, like decorative orders, decreed at Simla pic-nics, but by public gifts, and so we are not likely to see them bestowed as a matter of favour on protégés of Lieutenant-Governors and old college companions of our Councillors and Secretaries. Probably it was to guard against this probability that Lord Lytton refused to entertain the proposal that Government should present the statue of the Empress to the country, paying for it out of the public funds. The erection of a statue to her Majesty was acknowledged to be a very suitable way of commemorating her assumption of the title, and here on the spot was an artist of good reputation with the required statue for sale. This is not the place to give any history of the misunderstandings that at length sent the artist out of India, in anger and indignation against the Government, and especially against his Excellency the Viceroy, who would not so much as look at the work of art which he was expected to purchase. It was generally believed that Mr. Marshall Wood, the sculptor, was treated with scant courtesy by Lord Lytton; but as want of courtesy is certainly not a fault attributable to his Excellency, Mr. Wood must have been the victim of misunderstanding, and not of intentional rudeness. Lord Lytton's Government declined to purchase the statue, and thus refrained from setting a precedent which it would not have been desirable to follow. Thanks to the Maharajah of Burdwan, the Statue has been presented to the metropolis of India, which now contains in "majestic marble" a memorial to future generations of the best of English Sovereigns, the Lady who has "united under one just and gentle sceptre the children of the East and of the West".—Statesman.

STATION TALK.

RAWAL PINDI, Jan. 4.—On the 31st ult. Generals Keyes and Ross advanced on a Jowaki stronghold named Pastaoni, which place, as well as a village called Wallee, they destroyed on the 1st. inst. The enemy offered no resistance; indeed, it appears there was scarcely a living thing to be seen in the valley or on the surrounding heights. Beyond being able to say that they have penetrated further into the Afridi hills than was ever reached before, the troops cannot be said to have achieved any success on this occasion; indeed, on their retiring the Afridis are reported to have pursued our troops with surprising alacrity, keeping up a continuous fire, which, however, did no harm, although there is no doubt that the Afridis have suffered heavily both in life and property. It seems clear that they are far from beaten, and there is reason to suspect that the neutral tribes are affording the Jowakis secret help. This our friends in the Camp seem to have no doubt about. Here is what one writes under date Shergasha, 30th December:—"Our Camp is fired at almost every night, our picquets replying, so that we are pretty well on the qui vive always. A great mistake, in my opinion, is that people from the surrounding villages are allowed to come into our camp during the day, selling wood, &c. These are the scoundrels I am certain who fire at our picquets at nights. A murder was committed the night before last on the person of a syce who was bringing in an officer's pony from Peshawur. This must have been done by some men from villages in our own territory." If this can be brought home to them, of course it will increase the magnitude of the operations to be undertaken against the Afridis, for we are bound to give all the offending tribes a sound thrashing, since we cannot afford to let these semi-barbarians think that we can be either trifled with or outwitted. This campaign has already cost us over fourteen European soldiers (invalided) and three officers, viz.: Swiney, killed—Lance invalided, and Lieutenant Seaton, adjutant of the 9th, who, I believe, also goes home invalided, having contracted a serious pulmonary complaint through exposure, from which cause most of the European soldiers are also being invalided. The manner in which the troops of the Peshawur column were exposed to the rain without tents, bedding, or proper food when they first went out to Bori, will remain for ever a standing reproach to the Commissariat Department and military authorities generally at Peshawur. On this I will quote once more from my correspondent's letter:—"Towards the end of the last day's operations (the 8th) it commenced to rain, and then began our hardships, as we were without tents. It rained steadily all that night and next day. I saw some of our men that night, after being thoroughly soaked, get on a large stone and 'mark time' the whole night. Next day in the heavy rain we marched back to Fort Mackeson, a distance of nine miles. . . . There is a detachment still on the ridge, and two native regiments guarding the three guns. They, as well as we, have bell tents now. Why these tents could not have been taken up at the onset I can't imagine. There was a muddle somewhere, but, I suppose, we can never get on without that! For the present military operations on both the Jowaki and Peshawur sides appear to be indefinitely suspended; in fact, the Peshawur troops expect shortly to receive the welcome order to return to cantonments. The Lieut.-Governor left Kohat on the 3rd for Bannu, and his Honour travels down the frontier, reaching Lahor some time in February. We had a choral service at midnight on the 31st Dec., 1877, and the New Year was ushered in in a most auspicious manner. The music—vocal and instrumental—was very good, but it will be very much better by the 31st of next December, by which time our new organ, to raise funds pay for which a concert was given on the 3rd, will, I hope, be here. On the 1st we had a grand parade, it being the anniversary of the Imperial proclamation, which terminated with a salute of thirty-one guns and a feu de joie. We are having fine frosty weather; if anything, it is a little too cold, maximum range of thermometer today in my verandah was 49 degrees."—Times of India Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

REWARD FOR PROFICIENCY IN LANGUAGES.—Surgeon J. O'Brien, of the 43rd Assam Light Infantry, has obtained the Government reward of Rs. 500, for passing in the Khasi language.

IRRIGATION.—The Secretary of State has, we are informed, sanctioned the indent of the Government of India for a Bruce dredger for the Sone Canals, and certain hydraulic tubes and leather washers for the Orissa Canals, at an estimated cost of £3,500.

THE TELEPHONE.—The East Indian Railway Company have decided to adopt the telephone, and one will shortly be in use at the Company's goods warehouse. Many of the other companies will doubtless follow suit, and before long we may expect to find the telephone in general use.

GUNNERY.—It is contemplated by Government to substitute a mountain battery for the frontier station at Thayetmyo instead of the present field battery. Judging from the good services the mountain batteries have been rendering in the Jowaki expedition, the proposed change will no doubt prove advantageous.

AJMERE.—Provision has been made for the expenditure in England of Rs. 70,000 on account of additional roofing for the Ajmere Workshops. In connection with this subject it may be stated that the estimate of State Railway expenditure in England, during the current official year, has been raised to a total of £1,290,000, which does not include the item above referred to.

GOVERNMENT PRINTING.—A few days ago the Viceroy forwarded through Colonel Burne to Mr. E. Dean, Superintendent of Government Printing, Calcutta, a handsomely framed photographic likeness of his Excellency, in recognition of Mr. Dean's readiness and courtesy in complying with extraordinary demands upon his own time and that of his establishment.

NEW JUDGE.—Her Majesty the Queen has accorded her sanction to the appointment of Mr. H. S. Cunningham, Barrister-at-Law and Advocate General at Madras, as a Judge of the High Court at Calcutta, vice Mr. A. G. Macpherson, resigned. Mr. and Mrs. Cunningham have arrived in Calcutta, and are the guests of H. H. the Lieutenant-Governor at Belvidere.

MILITARY.—Our military contemporary tells us that "in each division of the army schemes of defence for every station within the command are being elaborated. These schemes are intended as simple military precautions, their object being to give every commanding officer of a station a previously prepared plan of action, under any emergency which might arise from a sudden withdrawal of the ordinary garrison."

THE LUCKNOW COURT-MARTIAL.—We hear that the General Court Martial, of which Colonel Appleyard, C.B., was appointed President, ordered to assemble at Lucknow to try Lieutenant B. Smith, Adjutant of the 4th N.I., is likely to be adjourned indefinitely, the accused officer having disappeared altogether from the scene. As it is said that he had three or four days' start before his departure became known, it seems probable that his disappearance is final.

THE ANDAMAN AND NICOBAR ISLANDS.—A perusal of the report of the administration of the Andaman and Nicobar Islands for the official year 1875-76 shows inter alia that 111 prisoners escaped during the year—106 by land and five by sea. Those who escaped by sea were re-captured within a few days, while of the escapes by land all were accounted for, except seven, who are supposed to have perished in the jungle. The health of the prisoners does not appear to have been quite satisfactory, owing, apparently, to defective sanitation and insufficient clothing. The revenue of the settlement increased during the year from Rs. 44,055 to Rs. 49,361, and the exports from Rs. 3,095 to Rs. 8,226. Education was advancing, and the prospects of the Forest Department, coffee cultivation and of sheep breeding were regarded as very favourable.

A FRACAS.—Two gentlemen of Calcutta, a solicitor and a tea-planter, have been figuring in a ridiculous action for abusive language brought by the man of the law against the tea-planter. It seems Mr. Saunders, the attorney, had entered into an agreement to proceed with Mr. H. Mahoney, the defendant, to Assam, but he seems to have been disinclined to fulfil his engagement, and when Mr. Mahoney called upon him, he said, "If you think I'll go to Cachar for Rs. 500 you can go to the devil." That, Mr. Saunders said, was his way (and a very explicit one too) of telling the tea-planter that he was not going to work for him. He also said that he considered "going to Hong Kong was going to the devil." The magistrate dismissed the case with the remark that it ought not to have come into Court at all.—Times of India.

COLONEL CORY AND THE PUNJAB BANK.—Judgment was given, on the 2nd inst., by the Judicial Assistant, Lahor, in the matter of Colonel Cory's petition under the Indian Company's Act to have his name removed from the list of contributories to the Punjab Bank in respect of fifty shares. The grounds on which the petition was based were, it will be remembered, that Colonel Cory had been induced to buy the shares in question by fraudulent concealment and misrepresentation of the Bank's actual condition, on the part of the officiating Head Manager, Mr. Horace Herbert, and further that the transaction was ultra vires of the Bank, and consequently void. Both these points have been fully discussed in the very able judgment of the Judicial Assistant, and the conclusion he arrives at is that the charges of fraud and misrepresentation completely fail of proof, and that Colonel Cory is not entitled to the relief sought for. The petition was therefore dismissed with costs.—Pioneer.

MR. VAL PRINSEP.—A brother artist thus writes to the Pioneer from Lahor:—"May I be allowed to shed a tear in your columns over the departure of Mr. Val Prinsep, who left Bombay for England last week? Never before has an artist had such an opportunity of seeing all that is best worth seeing in India. And there can be no doubt that besides the big picture, his year in this country will be fruitful in pictorial results. When I last saw Mr. Prinsep he was busy rehearsing his comedy at Simla. Since then he has been to Indor, Dhar, Sutna (where Rewah—surely a very difficult subject as to colour—was painted), Mysor, Madras, Hyderabad, and Baroda. The distances are great, and the weather was hot; and only those who have tried it know how hard it is to paint with heavy dews gathering on your brow and trickling down your nose. Among the subjects of this last tour are Sir Salar Jung, Sir Richard Meade, and Jamna bae. The completion of the large picture will be looked for with interest, partly from the tremendous difficulties which the subject presents, and also because Mr. Prinsep's rendering of the oriental head is at once true and full of pictorial power. The public interest in the Delhi Assemblage is revived by the anniversary just passed. I hear from home that Garter King of Arms is much scandalised by the obstinacy of the illustrious chieftains of the Star of India, who, in spite of repeated instructions, will not put on the G.C.S.I. mantle properly. They persist in treating it like a bathing gown, instead of gathering it loosely on the right shoulder, and there securing it by a lace decorated by a bunch of ribbon, not by the rosettes, which indeed are meant to secure the collar. This is the way a sculptor would treat the mantle if he had to make one, and obviously it is the right way. Perhaps Mr. Prinsep will set this little matter right in his picture."

STATION TALK.

MADRAS, Jan. 5.—It would be well for the sake of friends at home were good and bad always plainly set down, and the drawbacks of Anglo-Indian life carefully balanced against its "pleasures." On which side shall I put the "darbar" held in Madras on the 1st January, 1878? The officers of her Majesty's services, who had "unreserved seats," or rather no seats at all, who saw the subordinates in their offices carefully installed in the best chairs, who were hustled into the banqueting hall soon after three, and detained there till long past five, who peeped behind columns and basked behind pillars out of sight of the dais, and stood bare-headed at some distance from punkahs, may possibly have taken a jaundiced view of the procession, and perhaps laughed in their sleeves at the "chobs" and chowries, the pages and halberds, and other imposing parts of the ceremonial. The stout Chetties in the centre, the well-fed clerks, the prosperous deputy collectors on the other hand, would delight in such a display; and no doubt the learned B.A.s of Madras will find much to say about the "occasion of the delivery of the Insignia of the Most Exalted Star of India to certain members of the Order, &c." and the different salutes from the seventeen guns fired on the Governor leaving Government House to the Imperial salute fired by salvos of five guns, a signal that the ceremonial was concluded. The number of ladies present at the darbar was comparatively small; they were in morning dress, and I cannot say the costumes were particularly fresh or brilliant. The Imperial assemblage commemorative medal was worn by many, and looked rather out of place than otherwise, from its enormous size. The military arrangements were creditable, on the whole. Old Kalhastri Rajah, Mr. Thornhill, whose honours have been so hardly won, stout Seshia Shastri, late Dewan of Travancore, who entered the Government service in September 1843, and has served it faithfully in many capacities, stand prominently forth on the platform; the figure of the Prince of Arcot fades into insignificance beside the others; there is something decided about them which makes the prince's grandeur pale. In the hall itself there is much show (in the back ground) of scarlet and gold, of uniforms of all descriptions. But these are the accessories of this play, whose incidents closely touch on the burlesque, the actors in the side scenes waiting for their turn, or rather the supernumeraries who have but to come on and stand hat in hand whilst the kings and princes in gold and silver crowns pass on their way. Looking at it, say from a child's points of view, say with the keen, bright eyes of little Alice on her travels in Wonderland, or through the looking-glass, the scene is like a travesty of a fairy tale. Up in the gallery (from whence strong scents are wafted down), behind a scarlet screen, or veil dotted with stars, are the princesses of the story, the inviolable beauties who might just as well be asleep as far as the world is concerned. There are pages who are as much out of place as the painted cardboard figures which fell flat on their faces at the Queen's bidding; little soldiers, like gilt toys or like Dutch dolls, whose walks have not been well attended to, and men in strange and splendid hats to whom little Alice herself could hardly do justice. Altogether an odd mixture of Eastern fable and English story, with "stage-effects" which transform the whole scene into a species of mock drama or dismal burlesque. From a sheriff to a merchant of Venice, from a barrister in his wig, to a judge in his gown, nothing is wanting to make the ceremony imposing; but the oddness and incongruities are too marked, and one turns from the scene with a smile rather than with an exclamation of admiration or pleasure. As the procession passes out, the jewels sparkling on the breasts of those who have just been honoured, it seems almost to fade into thin air, or better still, to vanish into the side scenes where the actors cast off their finery and trudge off home in their rough garments. There is a little stir about the "Prince of Arcot's carriage," a little sham enthusiasm, a feu de joie, and with the whole pageant dissolves, and the company disappear in a cloud of red dust. Perhaps no one is better pleased in the throng than our hard-worked astronomer, Mr. Pogson, who has just heard by telegram that he is made a Companion of the Order of the Indian Empire. A grand dinner and nautch took place after the durbar at the Amir Mahal, the Prince of Arcot's new palace in Royapettah. I do not think European and Eastern costumes look well together, and the scene was rather curious than picturesque. The arrangements were good, but some of the intended guests were absent, which caused a little confusion.—Englishman Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

RANGOON.—A suit has been brought by Mr. Catchick, lately employed in the Rangoon Post-office, against Mr. J. W. Barwise, Chief Inspector of Post-offices, for Rs. 3,100 damages, for defamation.

GOLD IN WYNAD.—The last telegraphic news from the Madras gold fields, on the 4th January, is as follows:—"Fifty tons of quartz from Wright's level in the Alpha mines has produced over forty-one ounces of gold. Still better results are expected this month. Specimens are being bought by visitors for cabinets."

BANGALOR BANK.—The Inspector appointed by the Maisur Government to inquire into and report upon the condition of the Bangalor Bank, reported at a public meeting of the shareholders held last Saturday that the probable loss to the shareholders by the late defalcations will amount to about nine per cent. The magisterial inquiry into the losses incurred by the bank by reason of the conduct of the cash-keeper was to be resumed on Jan. 7.

LOSS OF A FRENCH SHIP.—We learn that the French ship Marc Antoine, from Pondicherry to Mauritius via Tranquebar, went ashore two miles south of Kasilal the other day. The captain, Monsieur Vannier, died at Pondicherry of cholera, and the vessel was despatched in charge of the chief officer on her voyage. Just about the time the Marc Antoine was leaving Pondicherry she was in collision with a steamer, but, notwithstanding, she proceeded on her voyage, and in a few hours was run ashore, as the ship was found to be quite disabled after the accident that befel her.—Madras Standard.

THE FAMINE CENSUS.—Arrangements are being made for taking the famine census in Madras. The census will be made not only in one taluk of each of the famine districts, but in one entire district. Salem has been selected for this distinction. It is a central district, where the famine has been very bad throughout. The question arises, however, whether the census is not being taken too soon. Food grains are still about 50 per cent. above normal rates, and the people who have been suffering from insufficient food are still dying at a heavy rate.

BURMAH TRADE AND NAVIGATION.—The King of Burmah, after his usual custom, makes his mark on the Burmah Trade and Navigation Report for 1876-77. This time he paralysed the trans-frontier markets for a while, by leasing out the collection of customs to one Moolah Ibrahim, a merchant from Surat, with whom his Majesty had large dealings. Later on the King, or his ministers, began monopolising; the royal trader, as Mr. Rivers Thompson calls him, tried to make the bazaar-dealers sell only to his agents. In many cases he succeeded, and his agents retailed the goods in the Mandalay bazaars. Moreover, he sent his agents to Rangoon to buy goods there, and forbade his subjects to buy from independent traders, who were thereby left with large stocks, and had at the end to sell to the King. Moolah Ibrahim was taken in by his Majesty, who having leased out the custom collection for some six or seven lakhs, bought up most of the merchandize himself, and passed it free of royalty.

A PARSİ PANTOMIME.

The house was well lighted and well filled, music and scenery to English understanding only being somewhat weak. The performance, however, was the miracle. Was there not the conventional clown? rather thin of leg and reedy of voice, and sadly subdued from the roystering knave of our youth; was there not our old friend Harlequin of days gone by, somewhat apathetic and spiritless, and who walked through his part, it is true, dressed also, it is true, in a wondrous parti-coloured sleeping suit that would make Messrs. Asquith and Co.'s fortune if they were to introduce it—but there he was! and there also was Columbine represented—oh, tender memories of Drury Lane!—by a boy enveloped in a saree, and looking like one of the "mill hands" one meets in one's early morning walks. How we longed that that saree might be struck off by a touch of the Harlequin's wand, exposing in place thereof one of those 1s. 6d. a night, spangly, pink-leggy fairies, who used to appear in our young eyes as being too bright and glorious for this earth, and who were supposed to live on twelfth cake and dwell in an everlasting bower of bliss all the year round, but who in reality lived in a tobaccoist's attic in Islington, and who drank beer and gin when it was "stood" for them in the "flies." There, too, there was the veritable old property goose, wandering wildly about the stage, owing to the small boy inside having forgotten his sailing directions and being in the dark as to his position at sea; and, finally, as showing, whether the audience be black or white, what affinity there is in the human breast in obtaining pleasure and satisfaction out of the misfortune of others! Were there not for the delectation of our native friends those two martyrs to blows and ill-usage, pantaloons and the "gerit"—the latter in this case represented by a fat Banian, who took all his bad treatment with most unexceptionable forbearance—and in order that nothing should be wanting to enable the audience to thoroughly enjoy themselves, a police sepoy took the place of the “peeler” of the British stage in order that a correct representation of the treatment of the poor by the police might be rendered. The clown was a very respectable fool, and evidently not steeped so low in iniquity and vice as his London brother, and he was so flat, in fact, at times that it required the united efforts of the native bag-pipes and tom-toms in full blast to rouse the enthusiasm of the audience to a due appreciation of his follies; the orchestra devoted to Europe instruments, on such occasions being knocked out of time, and having to lie by on their trombones until the pipers had blown themselves out. The management, too, were obliged to insert some native songs with the usual drum, sackbut, dulcimer, and clish clash accompaniments, and a selection of acrobats, demons, and supers of sorts generally were called into requisition as it was found that the British pantomime, administered pure and simple; was too insufferably dull and insipid for even a native audience to listen to after two o'clock in the morning without other stimulants than pan and betel. The brutality and greed of the British were also exemplified to the entire satisfaction of the audience in a scene in which the clown appears in a native house disguised as a “loafer,” and who, after demanding “somethin’ to heat” from the scared inmates, proceeded to sing a song in English describing the death by his own hand of his mother, sister, and apparently of all his near relatives, winding up with a “fol de rol,” and performing what the Parsee clown of the present day has grasped as being the correct thing in “cellar-flap break-downs.” Then we had the well-known scene in which the clown and pantaloons are horrified to find that whilst they have been dividing their plunder a Nemesis in the shape of a member of the police force has been sitting unobserved by their side. The said representative of the majesty of the law having sufficiently terrified the culprits, proceeds to illustrate the rapacity of the police by appropriating the spoil to his own use and benefit. At this stage of the proceedings your reporter retired for refreshments; but it appears evident that the Parsees having already encroached upon some of our most treasured and cherished institutions, will, unless we keep a bright look-out, be able in a short time to act the fool as well or better than we do ourselves.—Bombay Gazette.

Miscellaneous.

SALUTE.—Her Majesty the Queen has approved the grant of a salute of seventeen guns to Nawab Vikar-ool-Oomra Amir-i-Kabir, so long as he continues to act as one of the Regents of the Hyderabad State.

DR. MAULE'S DEPARTURE.—We hear that the Rev. Dr. Maule will proceed to England on two years' leave of absence early next month. It is probable that Dr. Maule will not return to India.

A NEW RAILWAY.—The Times of India hears that the Bombay Government has sanctioned the construction of a line of railway from Broach to Dehej, at the mouth of the Narbadda. The line will be about thirty miles in length. The survey of the proposed line is being proceeded with as rapidly as possible.

ADEN.—Small-pox has appeared in Aden, and homeward-bound and outward-bound passengers may be caused some trouble by the fact if they land there. A telegram to the Bombay Government from the Resident at Aden, dated 9th January, is as follows:—“My telegram 31st ultimo. Steamers Whitburn, Guy Mannering, City of Poona, arrived from Jeddah, 4th, 5th instants, placed in quarantine. Passengers for Aden removed into lighters. Several small-pox cases segregated. Steamers left for Bombay, Kurrachee, 7th instant.”

DEPARTURE OF COLONEL O. T. BURNE, C.S.I.—On Monday, Jan. 14, Colonel O. T. Burne, c.s.i., Private Secretary to his Excellency the Viceroy, left Bombay by the mail steamer for England. Colonel Burne drove down to the Apollo Bunder with Mr. Morarjee Goculdass, and left the bunder in a Government steam-boat, accompanied by Captain Searle, Master Attendant, and Mr. J. Jardine, Acting Political Secretary to Government. The Judges of the High Court and several high Government officials arrived a few minutes too late to see Colonel Burne before he embarked, but many went on board the steamer to bid him good-bye.

WIDOW MARRIAGES.—Mr. Sandasiv Pandoorung Kalkar, the manager of the Morarjee Goculdass Mills, has nothing in common with Mr. Samuel Weller, senior, for he has been bold enough to marry a widow. Few changes in India are so needful to social progress as the abolition of the social laws that make widowhood perpetual, and an almost direct road to vice. Suttee was cruel enough in its way, but the degradation to which widows, who are often mere infants, are subjected in the family and by native society is a life-long torture. In Calcutta the feeling in favour of widow marriages is steadily gaining ground. In Bombay the feeling may exist, but the practice is wanting, and Mr. Sandasiv Pandoorung Kalkar, by his example, has done more towards Indian reform than a whole platform of ambitious orators.

ARRIVAL OF A TRAGEDIAN IN BOMBAY.—Mr. Bootreyd Fair-

clough, who has recently been instilling into the Calcutta public a taste they never felt before for Shakespearian productions, has arrived, or is about to arrive here, and we believe arrangements will be made for his appearing on a Bombay stage. If so, judging from Mr. Fairclough's reputation elsewhere, there is a treat in store for us. The Calcutta papers, the Englishman, the Indian Daily News, and the Statesman, were unanimous in according the warmest praise to Mr. Fairclough for his acting in “Richard III.,” “Richelieu,” “Hamlet,” &c., during his recent visit to the City of Palaces.—Bombay Gazette.

THE CORPORATION.—At the meeting of the Bombay Corporation on the 20th ult. Colonel Hancock was elected chairman for the ensuing year. A well-deserved tribute was paid to his impartiality and tact in the conduct of the business of the Corporation during the year just closed. A letter from Mr. Pedder, the late Municipal Commissioner, thanking the Corporation for the valedictory vote passed at a previous meeting on the termination of his connection with the Municipality, was read. Mr. Pedder gracefully attributed whatever success his administration had achieved to the cordial assistance he had on all occasions received from the Corporation, the Town Council, and the able officers of the Municipality. The rest of the business transacted was of a routine character.—Times of India.

BOMBAY SMALL CAUSE COURT.—On Saturday, Jan. 21, Mr. W. E. Hart was gazetted First Judge of the Small Cause Court, in succession to the late Mr. O'Leary. Everyone who knows Mr. Hart—and his friends are many—will be glad of his appointment. His knowledge of law, his untiring application, and his great conscientiousness, will make him—says the Times of India—a very efficient judge when he has become habituated to the peculiar class of cases which will come before him in the Small Cause Court. But while admitting cheerfully the qualifications of Mr. Hart, we cannot close our eyes to the fact that in passing over Mr. Spencer, who had acquitted himself for years with entire satisfaction to suitors and the profession of the onerous duties of Second Judge, the Government has not given due weight to the claims of long service and acquired experience.

ACCIDENT TO MR. SUPERINTENDENT BAILEY.—An unfortunate accident happened to Mr. Superintendent Bailey on Sunday, 21st ult. After the fire at New Nagpada had been got under, most of the European police present took their departure. Mr. Bailey, however, remained behind to give some further instructions, and while doing so one of the native police sepoys called out to him that the wall was falling. Mr. Bailey started to run away, but could not get out of the way in time, and part of the wall falling on him fractured his right thigh, besides bruising him in two or three other places. He was at once removed to the Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy Hospital, where his injuries were promptly attended to by Dr. Anderson. On inquiring at the hospital on Monday we were glad to find that Mr. Bailey was much better than on the previous day. Although the fracture is only a simple one, it will in all probability be two or three months before Mr. Bailey will be able to return to duty.

QUETTAH.—The sufferings of the camp followers and native establishments of the troops quartered at Quetta have been so marked during the biting cold of a Beloochistan cold weather that the authorities have had to make provision for the due hutting and tenting of these half-frozen people. Up to the present day the military authorities have let these unfortunate men shift for themselves in all our campaigns, but the deaths during the Hasan Abdul Camp of Exercise, and the recent sufferings of the doolie-bearers in the Jowaki field force, show that in any future movement provision must be made for the clothing and supply of tent covering for regular army followers. It seems inconceivable that even now in the Punjab the whole of the native servants of the hospitals, while on the march, are altogether unprovided with clothing, or shelter of any kind. The days for such a condition of affairs should have long since passed away. The true principle should be to reduce the followers to a minimum, but to treat that minimum well.—Pioneer.

THE DARBAR AT RAJKOT.—At the Darbar held at Rajkot on the 1st January to invest H.H. the Jam of Nawanuggur, H.H. the Raj Sahab of Drangdra, and Divan Gowrishanker Oodeyshanker of Bhownuggur, the first two with the insignia of the Knight Commander of the Star of India, and the third with that of the Companionship of the Order, Mr. Gowrishanker Oodeyshanker in reply to Mr. Peile spoke as follows:—“Mr. Peile and Gentlemen, I feel grateful for the honour conferred upon me by her Majesty the Queen of England and Empress of India, through your hands. Fifty years before the advent of the British in Kattywar the tie of friendship between them and the Bhownuggur State has ever remained unbroken. My connection with the Bhownuggur State dates from the year 1822, and I have been since then enjoying the confidence of its rulers. In serving the State I have done nothing more than the performance of duties assigned to me. You (Mr. Peile) are fully familiar with the affairs of the Bhownuggur State, and I doubt not that being acquainted with my services to that State you have recommended me to the honour now conferred upon me. I thank you heartily for the honour now done to me, and request that you will be good enough to convey my feelings of respect to her Majesty the Queen of England and Empress of India.”

Ceylon.

MR. SHARPE.—The vacancy in the North-Western Province has been filled by the appointment of Mr. Sharpe, Assistant Agent, Badula, whose successor has not yet been named.

THE GOVERNOR.—In consequence of the long continued wet weather, the Governor has changed his plans for the inspection of the northern districts of the island, and instead of proceeding thither by the north road, his Excellency will embark from Colombo and proceed by the steamer Serendib to Jaffna and Trincomalee, on the 12th inst., returning by land. Should the weather allow, Anuradhapura and Pollannaruwa will both be visited in the return journey.—Ceylon Times, Jan. 5.

THE LATE MR. PARSONS.—The Civil Service has lost one of its members in the senior branch, in the late Mr. Parsons, who died at Kandy on the night of the 5th inst. This event leaves vacant the Agency of the Central Province, which it is understood will be filled by Mr. Templer, Agent of the Southern Province, who will, in all probability, be succeeded by Mr. Wright at present absent in England. As a temporary arrangement, the agency duties at the Kandy Kachcheri are being performed by Mr. Adams.—Ceylon Times.

THE WEATHER AND THE CROPS.—The weather, which had remained so long wet and stormy, at length shows signs of a favourable change, and we are now enjoying clear skies and bright sunshine. The rainfall has been very heavy throughout the interior, doing damage to roads and bridges, and causing another land-slip on the Nawalapitiya Branch railway, which has led to a suspension of traffic. Accounts from the planting districts represent the weather, thus far, as most unfavourable for crop prospects of the ensuing season. It is hoped that the present change for the better will remove all apprehension on the score of the expected blossom, and as estates are acknowledged to be in excellent bearing condition, the result may be all that we could hope. Leaf disease is but little heard of, and labour is most abundant. The current crop is now finding its way to Colombo in quantity, and so far as we have yet gone, the exports of our staple show an excess over those at the same period of last year; but a month hence, it is expected, the position will be reversed.—Ceylon Times.

CIVIL SERVICE OF INDIA EXAMINATIONS.

The following revised clause of the Regulations for the Examination of Candidates for the Civil Service of India, to be held in June and July 1878, is published in the Calcutta Gazette, of Dec. 26, 1877, in supersession of clause 9 of the Regulations published with Home Department Notification No. 125, dated November 16, 1877:—

9. Selected candidates, before proceeding to India, will be on probation for two years, during which time they will be examined periodically, with a view of testing their progress in the following subjects:—

	Marks.
1. Law	1,250
2. Classical Languages of India
Sanskrit	500
Arabic	400
Persian	400
3. Vernacular Languages of India (each)	400
4. The History and Geography of India	350
5. Political Economy	350

In these Examinations, as in the open competition, the merit of the candidates examined will be estimated by marks, and the number set opposite to each subject denotes the greatest number of marks that can be obtained in respect of it at any one Examination. The Examination will be conducted by means of printed questions and written answers, and by viva voce Examination, as may be deemed necessary. The last of these Examinations will be held at the close of the second year of probation, and will be called the "Final Examination," at which it will be decided whether a selected candidate is qualified for the Civil Service of India. At this Examination candidates will be permitted to take up any one of the following branches of Natural Science, viz.,—Botany, Geology, and Zoology, for which 350 marks will be allowed.

[Full instructions as to the course of study to be pursued will be issued to the successful candidates as soon as possible after the result of the open competition is declared.]

THE receipts from ten sales of Bengal opium and nine months' duty on Malwa opium have exceeded the estimated receipts by Rs. 48,82,940. Bengal opium has realised Rs. 50,78,505 more than the estimate, but Malwa opium Rs. 1,95,565 below it.

OWING to the failure of rain in the Panjab at the sowing season, there was an increase in the quantity of land irrigated by the Bari Doab Canal for the Fazi rabi harvest of 70,888 acres, and in that irrigated by the Western Jumna Canal of 31,435 acres.

TEA cultivation is rapidly extending in Java; the export, which in 1869 was only 940,039 kilogrammes, having this year, up to September only, reached 4,114,673 kilogrammes.

THE Bengal Government estimates the stock of rice in and around Calcutta for the first week in January at 19,28,045 maunds, of which eight lakhs and a-half are available for export.

EXPORT OF SPECIE.—The Peninsular and Oriental steamer Pekin, which sailed on Thursday last, took £446,777—£151,900 being in bar silver for Bombay and £73,000 in the same metal for Calcutta. The whole of the balance was in dollars, of which £65,250 was consigned to Penang, £35,000 to Singapore, £56,127 to Hong Kong, and £65,500 to Shanghai.

BOOKS PRINTED IN INDIA.—It was formerly the rule that a copy of every book printed in India was transmitted to the Secretary of State for the India-office library; but as this resulted in the collection of an enormous mass of books, few of which were of value, it has been decided that a catalogue of all books printed in India shall be sent to the librarian at the India-office, who will select such books as may be valuable to be sent to London.

INDIAN APPEAL.—SERIMATI UMA DEVI V. GOKOOLANUND DAS MAHAPATRA.—This was an appeal from a decision of a Divisional Bench of the High Court of Calcutta on March 8, 1875, reversing a decree of the Subordinate Judge of Cuttack, in the Presidency of Bengal. The suit was instituted by the appellant, a childless Hindoo widow, against the respondent and her (the appellant's) sister, to obtain possession of large zemindaries in succession to her late father by having it declared that the respondent, who was in sole occupation of the property, and had obtained the certificate of heirship by adoption, was not her father's adopted son, and upon other grounds. The Court of First Instance held that there was no good evidence in proof of the adoption of the respondent; but the High Court reversed that finding. Their lordships now affirmed the judgment of the High Court, and dismissed the appeal, with costs.

WILD ANIMALS AND SNAKES IN INDIA.—Sir J. Fayer, K.C.S.I., M.D., on Feb. 1, read a Paper at the Society of Arts, Adelphi, upon the subject of "The Destruction of Life by Wild Animals in India." The yearly loss of human life and cattle, he said, was startling, and suggested the question whether some more effective measures than any now in operation might not lessen the evils. The subject had long been under consideration by the Indian Government, and the object of legislative interference; but with no very satisfactory results, as, notwithstanding the measures taken, the destruction of life still went on at what had been described as really an "appalling rate." The animals causing the destruction of 20,805 human beings and 46,805 head of cattle in 1875, were elephants, tigers, leopards, bears, wolves, hyenas, jackals, alligators, buffaloes and bears, snakes sharing in the destruction of human life to the extent of 17,070 persons. He spoke of the rewards given for the destruction of the animals; but it was obvious, he urged, that more effectual measures than those already taken were necessary to mitigate if not to prevent this evil. What is wanted is a system to be laid down on general principles for the entire country, and worked out in detail according to the needs or peculiarities of each district. There should, in short, be a department, or a branch of a department, with a responsible chief and subordinate agents, for whom certain rules should be laid down, to be carried out steadily and without hindrance throughout the country, leaving much as to detail to the discretion of local authorities. The money rewards already offered for wild animals would probably suffice, but those for venomous snakes should be increased; and if the people were encouraged to work for them and were aided by persons acting under properly selected superiors, the result would soon be a diminution of the wild animals and snakes. Until some organised establishment is formed, to be worked steadily throughout the whole country—not dependent on the will nor subject to the caprice of individuals, but under local officers subject to one head—no real or continuously progressive amelioration of the evil can be anticipated. In the course of the discussions which followed the reading of the paper, the Rajah Rumpel Sing drew attention to the absence of rewards for the destruction of jackals, and advocated the giving of rewards for killing these animals. With regard to the indisposition of Hindoos to kill snakes, he said that not only was there the religious prejudice against this, but they had the belief that the snake-bite could be charmed away.

ANOTHER INDUSTRY FOR INDIA.—Not very many years ago the idea of any large proportion of our tea supplies ever coming from India was ridiculed as chimerical. As for the chinchona plantations, they were generally regarded by Anglo-Indians as experiments foredoomed to failure. In spite of these pessimist predictions, England is now receiving about 25,000,000 pounds of tea annually from her great dependency, while chinchona cultivation is recognised as a perfect success. Looking at these antecedents, it would be rash to say that the Examiner may not prove right when prophesying equally good results from the growth of tobacco in India. As regards soil and climate, little seems needed to make the industry succeed in carefully-selected districts. Already, some finely flavoured sorts are grown in Madras and Burmah from Virginia seed. The "Lunka" is a very fair cheroot, so far as the mere material goes, and the same may be asserted of some special brands from Trichinopoly. Of course, a great deal depends upon the care bestowed upon the growth and manufacture. As a general rule, the object of the cultivators seems to be to produce a large quantity at a low price, irrespective of quality. But here and there a wiser system prevails, and cheroots are turned out which would sell readily in England at a fair price but for the roughness of their manufacture. The chances generally are that at least half of every bundle of "Lunkas" or "Trichies," will have to be thrown away, owing to the impossibility of making them "draw." Instead of rolling the leaf tenderly and carefully after the manner of the Manila manipulator, the Burmese and Hindostan workpeople squeeze the material into some sort of shape by main force. The consequence is, of course, the formation of lumps inside, which prevent the free passage of smoke. Our contemporary acknowledges the existence of this evil, but believes it might be surmounted by the importation of skilled hands from America and the Manilas, to act as teachers and superintendents. Perhaps this might effect a partial cure in time, but we doubt whether much will be done towards inducing the world to consume Indian tobacco until the industry be taken in hand by British enterprise. As it seems to present a very promising opening for the employment of some of our superfluous capital, we expect to witness a considerable improvement in the methods of cultivation and of manufacture before many years elapse.—Globe.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, Feb. 5.—BENGAL POLICE.—Lord GEORGE HAMILTON, replying to Mr. O'DONNELL, said his attention had been called to a resolution moved by the present Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, the Hon. Ashley Eden, relating to the Bengal Police Report of 1877, in which he strongly condemned that force. The resolution did not refer to Sir Richard Temple, or to anything done by him, but to the misconduct of a large section of the native police of Bengal. This was not the first occasion upon which their conduct had been unfavourably noticed, for last year Sir Richard Temple adverted in strong terms to the number of arrests made upon insufficient evidence. Mr. Eden, on the occasion now referred to, said, "There was abundant proof of the lamentable amount of suffering and wrong which had been caused by this body, and looking to the vast number of false cases instituted all over Bengal, he was determined that the police should not be left uncontrolled, but only used under adequate safeguards." The police were under the Government of Bengal, and they might safely trust Mr. Eden, knowing his character as an able administrator and his knowledge of Bengal, to take such measures as would prevent a repetition of this grievance.

MR. ROBERTS'S BILLIARD ENTERTAINMENT.—Last evening Mr. Roberts and Mr. Courjon played for the second time, the latter gentleman receiving 650 out of 1,000 points and winning the game by 368 points. The scores were as follows:—Mr. Roberts led off with a miss in baulk, Mr. Courjon following with a miss. Mr. Roberts then made a score of 36, followed by others of 22, 82, 20, 22, 28, 27, 23, of which 4 were spot strokes, 50, 55, of which were 12 spots, and 65 of which were 18 spots, with other smaller breaks. Mr. Courjon scored 20, (33 equal 10 spot shots) (53 equal 13 spot) 20, 18, 65 (21 spot shots), 10, 20 and smaller breaks, running out with an unfinished break, and winning by 368 points. Mr. Courjon will play Mr. Roberts again this evening, receiving 650 points.—Englishman, Jan. 11.

LIGHT RAILWAYS.—It was proposed during the scarcity which recently prevailed in the North-West Provinces to construct a number of light railways. A contemporary gives the following details of the plan:—"The policy adopted by Government in reference to public works of an anti-famine character has been provided for in advance in the North-West Provinces. During the alarm of famine here, it will be remembered Colonel Fraser went round the principal stations holding conferences with the local authorities and determining plans of relief works. The tour was happily destined to be fruitless as regards any immediate realisation of the project sketched out. The famine menace passed away, and Colonel Fraser's ideas merely blossomed on paper. However, preliminary arrangements were made so thoroughly and comprehensively, that the documents in which they are recorded now stand ready as a complete programme of railway development. They include more than this, of course, as the works desirable for their own sake would not have given sufficient relief labour to the population which Government would have had on its hands if the threatened North-West famine had really come to a head; but at any rate, as far as the light railways are concerned, a design providing for a complete network of such lines is already prepared and is now merely awaiting sanction. The scheme is a complete scheme, which hangs together, and has been so contrived with great ingenuity that though coming within the scope of famine relief works to a large extent, it is none the less a great provincial project in its entirety. On the map a series of lines have been delineated which, when complete, will not only increase to an enormous extent the circulation of railway traffic through the country, but will constitute a narrow-gauge system, all linked up, so that the rolling-stock of the whole system would be available in time of need for concentration on any section where a special emergency arose. Further than this, the system would also be linked with the light railways of Rajpootana, and in this way traffic facilities would be extended over an area of country which could not have been manipulated by means of mere feeder lines."

The Panjab Anjuman at its last meeting resolved that the Comparative Dictionary of the Languages of the so-called Neutral Zone, composed by Dr. Leitner, should be printed as soon as possible.

NOTES ON MUHAMMADANISM.

REV. T. P. HUGHES, M.R.A.S.,

C. M. S., Missionary to the Afghans, Peshawar.

Opinions of the Press on the First Edition.

"Altogether an admirable little book. It combines two excellent qualities, abundance of facts and lack of the riles. . . . On every one of the numerous heads (over fifty) into which the book is divided Mr. Hughes furnishes a large amount of very valuable information, which it would be exceedingly difficult to collect from even a large library of works on the subject. The book might well be called a 'Dictionary of Muhammadan Theology,' for we know of no English work which combines a methodical arrangement (and consequently facility of reference), with fulness of information in so high a degree as the little volume before us."—The Academy.

"It contains multum in parvo, and is about the best outlines of the tenets of the Muslim faith which we have seen. It has, moreover, the rare merit of being accurate; and although it contains a few passages which we would gladly see expunged, it cannot fail to be useful to all Government employes who have to deal with Muhammadans, whilst to Missionaries it will be invaluable."—The Times of India.

"This small book is the most luminous, most convenient, and, we think, the most accurate, outline of the tenets and practices of Islamism that we have met with. It seems exactly the sort of comprehensive and trustworthy book in small compass, on this subject, that we and many more have often looked for in vain. . . . The author has evidently studied his subject in a faithful, laborious, and scholarly manner, and has not only studied but mastered it. The work is of great value for general students, and for men whose work lies among the Mussulman population, such as Civil Servants and Missionaries, it seems to be the very work that is wanted."—The Friend of India.

"It is manifest throughout the work that we have before us the opinions of one thoroughly conversant with the subject, and who is uttering no random notions. . . . We strongly recommend 'Notes on Muhammadanism.' Our Clergy especially, even though they are not Missionaries, and have no intention of labouring amongst Muhammadans or consorting with them, ought to have at least as much knowledge of the system as can be most readily acquired, with a very little careful study, from this useful treatise."—The Record.

"Its value as a means of correcting the common impressions about Islam will reveal itself to the most cursory reader, while the author's evident scholarship and intimate knowledge of his subject bespeak for him a patient hearing on points the most open to controversy."—Allen's Indian Mail.

"In brief compass it contains a large amount of reliable information. Instead of theories and fancies, facts are placed before us. Muhammadanism is represented as it really is, not as it is supposed that it might possibly be. Instead of retailing the speculations current in literary society at home, Mr. Hughes furnishes us with brief but incisive statements, which, so far as they go, leave nothing to be desired."—The Church Missionary Intelligencer.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are from Bombay, January 28; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, January 26; Calcutta, January 25.

THE papers announce the fact already telegraphed home, that the Indian Government is considering a scheme for the constitution of a Native Civil Service, "very much on the lines laid down by the Viceroy last year in his speeches at the Imperial Assemblage and the Convocation of the Calcutta University." The Government proposes that a certain percentage of the posts now held by the Covenanted Civil Service, as well as a certain number of the best uncovenanted posts shall be reserved for the new service, the status of which would be assimilated to that of the present Covenanted Civil Service. The success of such a scheme will depend of course upon the manner of working out its details. Lord Lytton at Delhi declared his opinion that the natives of India had a right to share largely with their English fellow-subjects, according to their fitness for the task, in the administration of their own country. The difficulty will be to reconcile this belief in practice with the Viceroy's subsequent confession—that "the permanent interests of the Empire demand the supreme supervision and direction of their administration by English officers trained in the principles of that policy whose assertion is necessary to preserve the continuity of Imperial rule."

WE learn from the Pioneer that the Indian Government has long been considering "the question of working the State, if not the guaranteed, lines of railways by organised companies of soldiers, who have completed their first term of service." Competent judges have often pleaded the advantages that would accrue, both to the State and the soldier himself, from a measure which could enable the former to select its railway servants from the ranks of the army, and retain them under discipline, and a certain degree of military training, so that they might form the nucleus of a system of railway defence and general reserve. It is hard to see how such a scheme can be applied under the new rules of short service which provide for the transfer of time-expired soldiers from the colours to the reserves. It appears, however, that the Government have already sanctioned the assembling of a committee at Fort William, composed of Major-General J. Ross, C.B., as President, and Mr. E. L. Molesworth, C.E., Lieutenant-Colonel Hichens, R.E., Captain Firebrace, R.E., and Captain J. A. Miley, as members, to discuss the details, and draw up a fully-matured scheme.

ON Jan. 24 a Jawaki deputation was received in Darbar by Sir Richard Pollock and General Keyes who laid the following terms before their visitors:—First, surrender of Khistu and Hassam, the leaders in the Shahkot raid, and surrender of Rambazari and Shinu, leaders of the party who last August murdered three sepoys on the Khushialgarh road; second, surrender of all Government rifles in their possession; third, restitution of all property stolen from British subjects in recent raids; fourth, a fine of ten thousand rupees; fifth, fifty hostages for future behaviour. The deputation retired to consider the terms.

MEANWHILE, according to the latest news from the North-West Frontier, Jammu was occupied on the 21st by a force under Colonel Buchanan. The enemy's country has been completely swept, but it was found impossible to surround him, as whenever pressed he retired into neutral territory; that, namely of other clans who, as the Pioneer says, are "friends to-day and foes to-morrow." The nature of their neutrality may perhaps be guessed from the fact that Colonel Watson riding through the Kohat Pass was fired at on the same day by four hundred Zukka Khels proceeding to join the Jawakis.

THE virtual ending of the Naga expedition is reported in the Indian papers, as well as the death of Mr. Carnegie on Jan. 21. Mozima has paid its fines, both in money and guns; and restored the rifles and accoutrements taken from our men, as also the mails that were plundered. Its submission is said to be complete. The troops would soon be returning to their respective quarters.

POOR Mr. Carnegie seems to have met the wound of which he ultimately died in the following way. According to his wont writes a correspondent, he had been knocking about the camp to see that all was going well, and had proceeded outside the chain of sentries to examine a Naga path leading into the village. A sentry on the east side picket, seeing a form moving about in the darkness, and concluding that it must be a Naga prowling up to the camp, fired at it, with what lamentable results my telegram has already told you. Mr. Carnegie's right arm was shattered below the elbow, and the bullet buried itself in his groin. All that can be done is being done for him by Dr. Dawson. This unfortunate occurrence will cause considerable and unfeigned sorrow all over Assam, as Mr. Carnegie is a universal favourite with both Europeans and natives.

Mr. Carnegie died at last on his way to Jorhat.

THE following telegram was despatched yesterday from Calcutta to the Times:—

The latest news from the frontier reports a dashing and successful attack upon a village situated near Abasai, by a British force consisting of about 200. Led by guides, they surprised and, after considerable resistance, captured the village, taking six prisoners. The enemy lost six killed, including their leader. Six of our own men were wounded. The possibility of a war between England and Russia naturally directs public attention to the army in India, and the very important question arises as to whether, in the event of such a war, India would be in a position to supply a military contingent. The most prevalent opinion seems to be that it would be highly dangerous and impolitic to withdraw from India even temporarily any part of the English troops, but this argument does not apply to native troops, seeing that one of the principal uses of English forces in India is to act as a military check upon the native army. The sending of a part of the latter from India would serve, therefore, as a safeguard rather than as a source of danger to British power. The native troops are well-equipped, well-drilled, and handle the rifle with considerable skill. There is at present, however, a most fatal defect in the organisation of native regiments, which would have to be remedied before they could be employed against European troops—namely, the serious deficiency of English regimental officers. The full complement of English officers in all ordinary regiments is seven, and of these on an average not more than four would be available at the commencement of any sudden campaign. A regiment might, accordingly, find itself, after a short period of active service, without a single English officer. It is a military canon that no regiment ought to go into action with less than two officers per company, and it will be readily understood that native regiments would require a larger rather than a smaller proportion of English officers if required to fight with European troops. Should this deficiency, however, be supplied, there is no reason why native soldiers should not prove a very valuable auxiliary to an English army engaged in a European war. India, as a recruiting ground for such forces, is almost inexhaustible, and for the purpose of a campaign against Russia the limit to Mussulman levies would be solely dependent upon financial considerations.

ACCORDING to the latest telegrams from Madras, the week's decrease in the number on famine relief was about 3,000, which left 350,000 on the rolls. Prices, on the other hand, were rising slightly, but the imports were increasing. In Kadapah, and probably other of the nine famine districts of Madras, they find it very difficult to get rid of the rice stored up long ago by the Madras Government. Mr. Price, the collector of Kadapah, has been driven to retail his stocks at a lower rate than prevails in the market, giving half a measure more for the rupee. By this contrivance he gets rid of a little, and may perhaps be able to sell it all before the winter crops come in.

In a final note on the Bombay famine Colonel Merriman reckons the total famine expenditure at 114 lakhs, or fifteen lakhs less than the last estimate of September, 1877. The remissions of land revenue amount to only Rs. 2,15,110 out of a total revenue of Rs. 1,40,78,500 for last year. For the current year no remissions will be necessary. The general good conduct of the people, says Colonel Merriman, continued to the end; and the sporadic resistance to Government measures which was made before April, 1876, has not been repeated.

We are glad to hear that action is at last to be taken on the Report of the Dakhan Rayats Commission. A Bill will be introduced into the Bombay Legislature very shortly, for the purpose of giving relief to the indebted peasantry throughout the four districts concerned.

A DESPATCH from the India Office has been received at Calcutta approving of the Government of India's recommendations with regard to increased and accelerated pensions for officers of the native army; and orders on the subject will be issued almost immediately.

COLONEL T. E. GORDON, C.S.I., Commandant of the Mewar Bhil Corps, will officiate as Assistant Adjutant-General, when Colonel Scott's term expires in March. He will later obtain the vacant Deputy Adjutant-Generalship, in which Lieutenant-Colonel Eteson is now officiating, that officer reverting to his substantive appointment of First Assistant.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL W. TWEEDIE, who has accepted the post of Resident at Mandalay, in succession to Colonel Duncan, was expected in India by the next mail.—It appears that Major-General Sir R. Pollock, K.C.S.I., Commissioner of Peshawar, is to be the First Commissioner of Sind, on its annexation to the Punjab Government.—Mr. Sanders, Chief Commissioner of Mysor, has resigned the service. He will probably be succeeded by Mr. C. A. Aitchison, C.S.I.—The death is announced of Mr. R. A. D. Perreau, Deputy Commissioner of Tavoy, from the effects of an accident whilst bathing.—Major-General Donald Stewart is likely to be compelled to come home on sick leave.

In the course of his long and exhaustive statement on the public works policy of the Indian Government, Sir Andrew Clarke quoted an interesting note by Mr. Bernard on the food supplies of the country. From this it seems that in the most thickly-peopled provinces of India there are about seventy-five to eighty acres of land under cultivation to every hundred persons, and that out of those acres, sixty-five to seventy are under food crops. Oudh, for instance, with its dense population of fourteen millions, has nine million acres of cultivated lands, of which 8,200,000 bear food crops; Madras has twenty-one millions of acres under food crops for its peasant population (excluding Zamindaris) of about twenty-seven millions. Mysor has four and a half millions of acres under food for its population of five millions. British Burmah has two and a half millions of acres under food with a population of two millions and three-quarters. The Central Provinces, "where the land is poor and cultivation is slovenly, and where there are grown much cotton and oil-seeds, have only thirteen millions of acres under food crops out of a total eighteen and a half millions of cultivated acres, but then its population is only nine and a quarter millions." Some provinces differ greatly from others; for instance British Burmah, which exports annually 800,000 tons of rice, produces from two to three times as much food as its people require. Assam, on the other hand, "has also a very rich soil, a heavy and never-failing rainfall, enormous areas of virgin land, yet she does not produce food enough for her people, and has to import food from thickly-peopled Bengal." But Assam probably stands alone in this respect, while all the other provinces produce enough food for their own support and for export as well. A great deal, adds Mr. Bernard—

Has been said of late years about the vast areas put down with opium, cotton, indigo, seeds, and other crops, to the exclusion of food crops, and to the exploitation of India for the benefit of rich traders and of distant populations. But much of this kind of talk is due to ignorance, for out of the cultivated area of British India, estimated at about 160,000,000 of acres, only about 580,000 acres are under opium, and little more than one million acres under indigo, 8,000,000 oil seeds, and 10,500,000 acres under cotton, most of it for home consumption in India, while at least 130,000,000 of acres are under food crops. And an acre of food crop land will in an ordinarily good season support two people if the produce of one province be taken with another. In Burmah and Bengal one acre supports three or four people; in the Central Provinces and Bombay it supports less than two. No doubt the area under such crops as oil seed, jute, and oil-bearing roots has increased greatly during the last ten or fifteen years. But, then, the total area under the plough has also increased vastly. In the Madras Presidency alone I find that Mr. Dalryell, no mean authority, wrote in 1867 that the cultivated land in certain districts of Madras had from 1856 to 1866 risen from ten millions to sixteen millions of acres, so that it is quite safe to say that the area of food crop land in India is now as high or higher, compared to the population, than it was in old times, notwithstanding the great extension of non-food staples like linseed and rapeseed.

We note that Colonel J. T. Walker, C.B., R.E., Superintendent of the Great Trigonometrical Survey of India, has at length been appointed Surveyor General of India, in the place of Major General H. L. Thuillier, C.S.I., R.A., whose term of office had been prolonged for six months. The Government of India has published the following complimentary farewell order to the latter officer:—"In notifying the retirement of Major-General Thuillier from the office which he has held for nearly seventeen years, and from the department in which he has served upwards of forty years, the Governor-General in Council deems it right to place on record the high sense which the Government of India entertain of Major-General Thuillier's services, and of the zeal and ability which he has brought to bear upon the discharge of his duties during an unusually long official career."

We learn that there are at present on view at Messrs. Orr and Sons, in the city of Madras, several specimens of gold quartz from Wainad, and forty small bars of virgin gold made from the quartz. The resources of the gold-fields are soon likely—we hear—to be further developed, for Messrs. Nicol and Co., of Bombay, have some experienced miners prospecting in the district. If it be true that gold can be worked at a profit when a ton of quartz yields no more than six pennyweights of the precious metal, there ought to be no further doubt as to the success of the new industry in Wainad, where forty-one ounces of gold have been extracted from fifty tons of rock.

AN interesting note on tobacco culture and curing has lately been penned by the Director of Agriculture and Commerce in the North-Western Provinces. The conclusions formed from the experimental cultivation on the Ghazipur farm are that an acre of ground will yield about 800 lbs. of leaf, and that when cured this may be expected to fetch from 6d. to 7d. per pound in the home market. Samples actually sent from Ghazipur last year fetched nearly 6d. per pound. The profit, under these circumstances, is estimated at Rs. 2,160, on an outlay of Rs. 6,170 on an area of fifty acres of cultivation. The Director adds that the Ghazipur experiment "confirms the idea, which has often been mooted, that indigo planters or other gentlemen who have land in Upper Bengal should attempt the cultivation and curing of tobacco. Operations required for tobacco-curing will apparently dovetail in well with those required for indigo manufacture. In the first place the indigo godown can without difficulty be converted into a curing-house; in the second place, it is clear of indigo at the season when it would be necessary to fill it with tobacco. The same argument applies to labour and supervision. The busy time with tobacco will be from November to February, when indigo has been already sent to market, and even if it is necessary to keep tobacco leaf in the curing-house till the rains, it ought to be packed before indigo is cut." The note contains very ample instructions regarding the cultivation and curing of the leaf.

THE irrigation results in the Punjab up to the end of November last show an increase of 102,323 acres irrigated, as compared with the corresponding period of the previous year, in short, owing to the demand for water on the failure of the autumn rains, more than double the area irrigated in 1876 has been irrigated in 1877. The chief increase has been on the Bari Doab Canal, where 111,000 acres nearly have been irrigated in place of 40,000. As might be expected, the increase on the inundation canals is far the smallest, because the very cause which brought about the demand for water stinted the supplies of the canals. Moreover, Multan and the adjacent parts had the heaviest rain of all the Punjab in September, and therefore the necessity of canal water for sowings of the spring crop was less there than elsewhere. Until the December rains lightened their labours, the canal officers of the Punjab had very hard times last autumn in order to meet the clamorous and incessant demands of the agriculturists who saw no hopes of rain. Their efforts have produced the very satisfactory results above given, and it is only fair that these should be known to the credit of the Department.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Times of India vouches for the truth of a curious story told by him regarding some shrapnel shells lately issued to a battery of artillery at Bombay for their annual practice. On firing them with the usual charge of powder (five ounces), it was found that many of them did not burst at all, as they ought to have done, to let the bullets in the shrapnel escape. The charges were then carefully weighed and inserted in the presence of the officers; the powder, too, was carefully tested, and found to be a little over proof strength. The fault, therefore, clearly lay in the shells. The charges were gradually increased. Five ounces and a-half were tried and failed; even six ounces did not always suffice to burst the shell. So the unusually large charge of six ounces and a quarter of powder, of over-proof strength, had to be used. It appears that these shells are some of an old consignment sent out by the War Office direct from England, and piles of the same are yet in store in almost every arsenal in India. Recently some of the same batch were sent to Quettah, and the correspondent thinks it would be well for the gunners there to learn the defect in the shells without delay. If this story be true, perhaps it would be as well.

PROFESSOR GARCIN DE TASSY's review of "Hindustani Language and Literature in 1877" carries on the series of yearly retrospects issued by that eminent scholar for many years past. It is not very creditable to this country that the kind of service thus rendered by a learned foreigner to the study of Indian civilisation has no counterpart among ourselves. Reports in plenty are laid before the Indian Government, and the cream of them is yearly dished up in Blue-books issued from Westminster; but we do not know of any one volume which summarises for our benefit the topics treated of by M. de Tassy. We have heard a good deal, for instance, about the Delhi Assemblage and the proclamation of the Kaisar-i-Hind, but M. de Tassy tells us why that title was chosen in preference to Shah-an-Shah, and gives from the Oudh Akhbar an amusing sample of the poetry inspired by the Delhi Darbar. From another native paper we learn that the English in Calcutta are black, lean, and weak-minded, but when they return home they recover all their freshness and their flesh. Then we have the Panjabi insisting that Delhi ought to be the capital of India, in the interests of the Indian Government. A reference to the union of the Delhi College with that of Lahor is followed by brief notices of the new works published during the year in Urdu and Hindustani, with occasional extracts or explanatory remarks. Of the aged poet, Nawab Nabi-Baksh Khan Bahadur Dilawar Jang, M. de Tassy speaks as a fast friend to the English in 1857, and as author of a recent work in which the justice of our rule, our humanity, and our great mechanical inventions, are lauded to the skies. "Had Plato and Aristotle lived in the days of Queen Victoria," says the old centenarian, "they would have been only too glad to become pupils of the meanest of her subjects." The old controversy between Hindi and Urdu crops up again in quotations from English and native newspapers, and M. de Tassy assures us that cette belle langue, Urdu is still full of life. Some of the leading native journals discussed in a friendly spirit the question of encouraging native youths to study in England the stores of Western thought and science for the good of their own country. In the same spirit M. de Tassy hails the opening of a great Mussulman College at Aligarh as "an important step towards European civilisation," and he notes with approval the foundation of a college at Haidarabad for youths of good family. Of the various societies, literary or political, now at work in India, he has something to say, nor does he pass over the melas or fairs which form so striking a feature of Indian life. The character of Islam and its relations to Christianity are discussed with reference to the recent works of Mr. E. Salisbury, Saiyad Amir Ali, and Dr. G. Badger; and Mussulman sympathy with the Turks in their late struggle is illustrated by a poetical extract from the Oudh Akbār. To the progress of Indian missionaries and the rival efforts of the Brahma Samaj several pages are duly devoted, and a new religious reformer, Dayan and Sarsati, is described as teaching doctrines somewhat different from those of Babu Keshab Chaudar Sen. The Professor winds up his interesting review with obituary notices of M. Bleek, Dr. Mather, Mr. Marshman, Miss Carpenter, Jung Bahadur, and of his friend, Mr. Alderman Allen, publisher of the journal which bears his name.

WE understand that the Government rate of exchange on the rupee for the financial year 1878-79 has been fixed at one and ninepence the rupee. This is lower by two per cent. than the rate of 1s. 9½d. sanctioned for the past year. Indian officers coming home on furlough will therefore find their pay reduced 12½ per cent. from its nominal value on account of the exchange alone, to say nothing of the further deductions which are in store for them, if it be true that the country is about to be burdened with an increased income-tax. The lot of those who will thus be mulcted of a large percentage of their furlough pay seems all the harder by contrast with the better terms conceded to others in the same service who had the good fortune to take their furlough prior to 1st July, 1871, under the rules of 1868. One recent case of particular hardship has been brought forward in the Home News. "An officer of more than nineteen years' service, on coming home for the first time on furlough, found his pay curtailed to the extent of ten per cent. at the current rate of exchange, while many of his brother officers, who have been on furlough three or four times in the same period, have been drawing their home-pay at the full value of two shillings the rupee." We see no good grounds for the distinction thus made in favour of those who have done proportionally less of Indian duty. It is hard to understand why those who have borne the full burden and heat of the day in a trying climate should be thus picked out as objects of a questionable economy, from which the Government can reap but a paltry profit, to set against the damage to its moral credit. We can only hope that the Marquis of Salisbury may yet see the justice of yielding to the prayer of the many memorialists who have petitioned for a return to the par rate of exchange.

INDIA'S VALUE TO ENGLAND.

In the current number of the Nineteenth Century Colonel Chesney takes up the challenge thrown out by Mr. Lowe in the Fortnightly Review for last November. Mr. Lowe, as our readers will remember, argued, among other things, that England loses more than she gains by the possession of India. There was the drain of men, for instance, involved in the maintenance of an English garrison, 70,000 strong. "The money which we spend can be repaid to us, but who shall give us back our men?" In point of fact Mr. Lowe has over-reckoned the garrison by at least 10,000 men; but the difference of numbers may be passed over as not affecting the real question at issue—namely, the alleged drain of men. To the question, "who shall give us back our men?" we can only reply with Colonel Chesney that India gives them back, or at least the greater part of them. A certain number would die yearly in England or in India, and the only waste that Colonel Chesney can allow consists in the larger number who die in India. If the death-rate in India averages twenty per thousand, or twice that of England, it would appear that "600 more able bodied Englishmen die yearly in consequence than would die otherwise." In addition, therefore, to the 60,000 permanently maintained in India, England loses only 600 men a year, or exactly as many as die in this country from railway accidents alone. Colonel Chesney should have added something for the number who yearly return home disabled prematurely by Indian diseases. But, after all additions, we may admit with him that the drain on England, slight enough in itself, is "perfectly inappreciable compared with the effect of emigration." If in the last ten years 6,000 Englishmen have died before their time, more than a million have emigrated from this country never to return, of whom about one-half were adult males.

But Colonel Chesney goes yet further, affirming that this small extra mortality and the permanent withdrawal of 60,000 men from England, so far from being a loss, are in truth "an absolute benefit to all those who stay behind." The English labour-market is thus relieved, however slightly, of so many men whose staying at home would tend to keep wages below their present level. But it may be pleaded that our Indian garrisons increase the strain of recruiting our home army by voluntary enlistment. In peace time, however, replies Colonel Chesney, there is no such strain, for "the strength of the home army is not regulated by the supply of recruits, but by the supposed needs of the country;" and "if the Indian garrison were withdrawn to-morrow, the result would be not to give us an increased army at home, but that 60,000 soldiers would be discharged." We do not quite see the force of this reasoning. If there were no troops in India, the recruiting for the home army would surely go on more easily, and England would have a somewhat better choice of men even if many who now enlist with an eye to Indian service were to seek employment in other fields. On the other hand, it is obvious that, under the new system of short service and army reserves, England "will get the benefit of the reserves supplied from these 60,000 men, the cost of whose training has been paid by India." Colonel Chesney forbears to add any hint of the gross unfairness of an arrangement which heavily taxes the people of India for the ultimate good of England alone. Talk of a drain, indeed, on England's resources, when the Colonel's mere statement of a simple fact can show which way the drain really goes!

With regard to the alleged drain in time of war, Colonel Chesney points his answer by an appeal to past experiences. To Mr. Lowe's contention that England could not furnish 60,000 soldiers for India, and carry on a European war at home, he opposes the fact that in our last war with France the Government "had usually more soldiers at its command than it knew what to do with," and argues that the troops detached on profitless expeditions to the Plate River and Walcheren "might as well have been serving in India" for any good they really did. If we have India, Russia has her Poland, and all the Continental Powers have to keep large forces in reserve for the guarding of their frontiers. If our army is comparatively small, it does not follow that in time of need a much larger one could not be raised, even on the voluntary system, from a nation containing four millions and a half of able-bodied men fit to bear arms. "The absence of a small fraction of our manhood in India" would not then be seriously felt; and it is something to remember that our greatest wars in India were waged "during the extremest crisis of England's struggle with Napoleon." In the event moreover of military operations in the East, India in her turn could help England with any number of native troops that might be required. "The Indian Government has only to give the signal to draw recruits to its colours to any extent necessary, from the perfectly inexhaustible supply available both within and without its borders, of manly races possessing the qualities for making a splendid soldiery," equal in every way to the Turks.

But if India could thus easily defend herself at need, is she for our purposes worth defending? Colonel Chesney holds that she is. Mr. Lowe himself admitted that England reaped some profit from her Indian trade, but he qualified the admission by suggesting that our manufacturers would some day be ruined by Indian rivalry. But this kind of reasoning, says Colonel Chesney, would tell as strongly against our export trade with America or Belgium, while it "leaves out of sight the much larger trade in the commodities which we import" from India. That country supplies us with many millions' worth of goods at a cheaper rate than we could get them elsewhere; and a vast number of our countrymen gain their livelihood by "an intercourse mutually profitable on both sides." The public service of India alone serves to draw off "a portion of that supply of English youth which seems to be always tending to exceed the demand for it," and those who thus relieve the home market come back in time to spend their savings in this country. Looking at all the interests involved in the retention of India, Colonel Chesney has some reason to hold that the loss of that country would amount to "a tremendous calamity affecting every class of Indian society." For the loss of India would mean the destruction of our Indian trade, because that country would in all likelihood become the prey of warlike and barbarous races beyond the frontier. If Russia were to step in and take our place, the anarchy that would else ensue might be averted. But, "of all wild political fancies, that of the occupation of India by Russia, always supposing she has not the command of the sea, but must approach it through the steppes of Central Asia, is surely among the wildest." On this point we are entirely at one with Colonel Chesney.

MEMOIR OF MR. HENRY THOBY PRINSEP.

It is with no little regret that we have to record the death of one to whose pen we have been indebted in past days for many valuable articles on subjects relating to India. His long career, and wide experience on all matters relating to the Administration of India in its various phases, as well as the prominent position he always held, fully justify a place in our columns.

Mr. Henry Thoby Prinsep died at Freshwater, in his eighty-sixth year, from an attack of bronchitis, retaining all his faculties to the last moment.

Mr. Thoby Prinsep (as he was generally known by all his friends) was the third son of Mr. John Prinsep, some time Alderman of the City of London, and member of Parliament for Queenborough in 1802. He was born in 1792 at Thoby Priory, in Essex, whence it is said he obtained his second name. In July, 1807, he entered the College at Haileybury, whence after keeping three terms and obtaining prizes for mathematics, political economy, history, and law, he passed out with credit in December, 1808, and arrived at Calcutta on July 20, 1809, where during his residence, in the College of Fort William, he obtained degrees of honour in Persian, Hindustani, and Bengali.

While in the junior ranks of the service Mr. Prinsep directed his attention to, and, after examination, obtained a degree of honour for knowledge of, Arabic and Arabic Law, to encourage the study of which a reward of Rs. 5,000 had been offered by the Government to those who should successfully undergo the prescribed test.

Mr. Prinsep held numerous and important posts during his long career in the East, and ever carried out the orders of his Government and the duties of his office with marked efficiency. It would be needless to enumerate these in this place: they are duly recorded in the various registers showing the services of past members of the Civil Services of India. In consequence of the distinction he brought upon himself when Registrar of the Sudder Dewany and Nizamut Adawlut he was in 1815 called upon by the Marquis of Hastings, then Governor-General of India, to accompany his lordship on his tour to the North-Western Provinces, where he succeeded in bringing the Allied Native States to a right sense of the duties they owed to the British Government in aiding it to check the progress of the Pindaries who were infesting the frontiers. Again in 1817, two years after, he was required by the Marquis to settle some important political matters in the North-Western Provinces, which he ultimately succeeded in completing with honour to himself and to his country. These important duties qualified him for the post of Secretary to the Government of India in the Political Department, to which he was called in 1820. In the exercise of these functions he gave so much satisfaction to the Governor-General that he was very soon appointed to officiate as member of Council of India in the place of Mr. Butterworth Bayley. In 1824 Mr. Prinsep obtained leave to proceed to Europe to recruit his health, returning to resume his duties in October, 1826. From this date Mr. Prinsep always held high and important situations of a secretariat character attached to the Government.

He was also appointed a Director of the Bank of Bengal in 1832, and on the 11th February, 1840, took his seat as a member of the Supreme Council of India, which he retained until 1843, when he finally retired from the service, arriving in England about the month of May. Previous to quitting India so greatly was Mr. Prinsep respected by the Hindus and Mohammedans that they spontaneously got up an address to present to him, with a request for a bust to be placed to his memory in the Town Hall of Calcutta. The members of the Asiatic Society had previously solicited to have his portrait to be hung in this Museum. Mr. Prinsep was no mean literary contributor to their journals, and to add to his other attainments, was the author of many books connected with Indian subjects, beside pamphlets on questions of finance policy, education, &c. Mr. Prinsep served under the following Governors-General of India:—Marquis of Hastings, Earl Amherst, Lord W. Bentinck, Sir Charles Metcalfe, Lord Auckland and Lord Ellenborough.

In July, 1850, Mr. Prinsep was elected a Director of the Honourable East India Company, and on the change of Government in 1858, when the Crown assumed charge of Indian affairs, he was one of those elected, under the Act for the Better Administration of Indian Affairs, to serve on the Council of the Secretary of State for India, whence he finally retired from public life in April, 1874 since which date he resided at Freshwater, where he died at a ripe old age.

Mr. Prinsep's great ambition on returning to England, after his multitudinous labours in the East, was to get into Parliament, for which purpose he contested severally, at various dates, Dover, Dartmouthshire, Barnstaple, and Harwich, for which place he took his seat in 1851, in the room of Sir J. Hobhouse, when promoted to the Peerage, but he was unseated on petition.

Mr. Prinsep married in 1835, Sara, one of the daughters of Mr. James Patten, also of the Bengal Civil Service, and leaves issue a daughter married, and three sons, one of whom is the artist at present engaged on the great picture of the Imperial Durbar of 1877 for her Majesty.

SIR ANDREW CLARKE'S BUDGET SPEECH.

The Bombay Gazette thinks it is all very well for Sir Andrew Clarke to say that the capital invested in railways now yields a fair revenue. That is true, speaking generally, but only because some of the lines are so productive as to cover the deficiency of others. None of the State lines at present pay a fair rate of interest, though the expenditure upon them has already reached the sum of £15,000,000; and, if the safeguard of demanding proof that new lines which may be projected are likely to be profitable undertakings be abandoned, and the mere notion that certain districts may at some unknown time be visited with a dearth be held to be a sufficient justification for running an expensive railway through an unproductive country, India will soon have reason to regret that her rulers had not the good sense to let famines take their course, instead of ruining the country by the measures taken to mitigate their effects. The Government makes a great fuss about saving life in seasons of famine, but it could not give a more apt illustration of the line, propter vitam vivendi perdere causas, than by levying new and most objectionable taxes to pay for public works which in their turn will create a necessity for a further increase of taxation, all in order to make the work of saving life at exceptional times less difficult. The country can do very well without either unproductive railways or canals. What is wanted is to make the people richer, so that, when a famine occurs, they may have money wherewith to buy food; but these works will only make them poorer. Instead of doing more, it would be well if the Government were to do less. Mr. Bright may make mistakes of detail which experts in Indian administration can easily correct; but the political instinct is sound which urges him to inveigh against the Indian Government for its exclusiveness, extravagance, and incapacity. Its insane jealousy of independent enterprise, which virtually debars English capitalists from acquiring land and developing new industries in India, is, politically as well as materially, one of the chief evils which afflict the country. The costliness of his administration is proverbial. Every new work it takes in hand is made an excuse for the creation of new appointments; and we are credibly assured that one reason why the water in the State tanks and canals is not more freely used for purposes of irrigation is the hedging round of all such works with a thick fence of officials, so that the wretched ryot has so many forms to sign and so many underlings to fee before he can get what he wants, that he goes away in despair and does without the water. As regards railways, we had admirable examples of State management last year in the mess made of the matter of providing engines for the G.I.P. Railway, and in the sequestration of that line for the conveyance of food to the famine districts only, with the result of causing less grain to be carried at greater cost than if, in accordance with the sound principles of Free Trade which the Government professes, but never practices, and apparently does not understand, the Railway Companies had been left at liberty to manage their own business. No one who knows what Indian administration is can think without a feeling of despair of the probable consequences of such an extension of State railways as that which is now contemplated, and for which Sir John Strachey intends to provide the funds by burdening the poorer inhabitants of this Presidency, already distressed by the high prices of all articles of food, with a heavier duty on salt, and levying on traders a partial and unjust licence-tax.

DR. WOODFORD AND THE SEALDAH HOSPITAL.

The Englishman holds that a man must possess no ordinary degree of moral courage, no ordinary amount of physical energy and abundant time, to enter upon a task of such magnitude as that of purging an institution like this hospital of all fraud and impurity, and that Dr. Woodford, whatever degree of courage and physical energy he may possess, had other important duties, the demands of which must have occupied a large portion of his stock of these qualities. But we may go further than this. We have no hesitation in saying that no man could hope to exercise an efficient check over a large daily expenditure of this kind, the details of which are in the hands of an inferior class of native subordinates, and the immediate supervision of which is also in the hands of natives, unless he was at liberty to devote his whole time to the task. There are, we fear, no grounds for supposing that this case of the Sealdah Pauper Hospital is an exceptional one. We strongly suspect that there are very few, if any, hospitals in India in which thorough inquiry would not disclose the existence of a similar system of peculation. There are very few, if any, hospitals in India in which the making up and administering of medicines, and the preparation and distribution of food, are not in the hands of natives, or in which there is a European medical man in charge who can devote more than a small portion of his time to the supervision of these details; and it is simply inevitable under such circumstances that fraud should creep in and persist. The disparity between the quantity of medicines and food charged for, and that actually prescribed may not, indeed, often be so great as in the case of the Sealdah Hospital; but we have strong reasons for believing that a much more insidious and a much more cruel system of fraud is very generally prevalent. To compare the expenditure with the prescriptions is a comparatively easy task. To compare either with the medicines actually administered to, or the food actually consumed by, the sick is, with existing establishments, a well-nigh impossible task. It is a widespread belief among the natives of this country that a man who goes in a Government hospital goes there to die. This is, of course, an exaggeration; but the belief is far from being without justification. We have from time to time heard much from persons who have been patients in hospitals in different parts of the country, not only in Calcutta, or Bengal, but in other parts of India also, which finds adequate explanation in the theory that the Sealdah case is in many of its features not an exceptional but a typical one; much which if true—and in a multitude of instances we have had it from people who had no motive for misrepresenting the truth,—can only be explained on the supposition that drugs prescribed, and doubtless charged for, were not administered, and that rations, certainly charged for, were not supplied to the poor patients. We have long, in short, had strong reasons for believing that systematic cruel plundering of the food of the helpless patients in Indian hospitals is as common as systematic cruel plundering of the food of the helpless horses in Indian stables; and we think it more than probable that there is commonly very little relation indeed between the medicines prescribed for, and those actually administered to, the sick in these establishments. So far, however, from seeing our way to blaming the European officers in charge of hospitals for this state of things, we must admit that we cannot see our way to any remedy. As long as compounders and hospital attendants are natives, and as long as responsible European officers cannot watch the preparation of the medicines and the distribution of the food from beginning to end, this form of robbery, resulting in many cases in murder, will go on without efficient check.

Bengal, Upper India, &c.

COMMERCIAL.—We see that a native merchant of Chittagong, Babu Lal Chand Chaudri, proposes to get up a company to purchase some steamers and flats to run between Chittagong and Narainganj, to carry the jute, rice and other produce of the Eastern Bengal districts to Chittagong for shipment to Europe, instead of sending it down to Calcutta.

ACTION AGAINST A NEWSPAPER.—An action for libel has been filed in the Court of the Judicial Assistant, Lahor, by Mr. Horace Herbert, late Provisional Official Liquidator of the Punjab Bank, Limited, against Colonel Arthur Cory, and Messrs. W. H. Rattigan, D. P. Masson, J. Walker and Mr. Towell, proprietors of the Civil and Military Gazette. The plaintiff complains of certain reflections made upon his conduct as manager of the Punjab Bank and Provisional Official Liquidator, in recent issues of the paper. The damages are laid at Rs. 5,000.

RYOT DISTURBANCE AT BILASPUR.—Colonel Bamfield, Deputy Inspector-General of Police, Punjab, has gone off to the "seat of war," at Bilaspur, where the ryots are in open revolt against the Raja, whose son they have seized. Police have been ordered up to prevent the rioters from entering British territory, but not otherwise to interfere. Parties of these from Kangra, Hoshiarpore and Jullunder are moving up to Sooket, while others from the Umballa circle take up ground on the other side of the State.

REWARD FOR SERVICES.—We understand that in consideration of the conduct of Moonshi Harpreshad (Extra Assistant Commissioner in Oudh) during the Mutiny, and of his subsequent valuable services to the Government, the Secretary of State has been pleased to sanction, as a special case, that he may be allowed to count his service under the Military Department towards civil pension, so as to entitle him to a pension equal to half his average salary. Moonshi Harpreshad, who retires on March 31 next, has a total service of upwards of thirty-two years.—Times of India.

MR. ROBERTS'S VISIT TO INDIA.—The Civil and Military Gazette is our authority for stating that the following lately appeared amongst the brigade orders issued at a station in the North-Western Provinces:—"Notice—If there is a sufficient number of subscribers to make up about 420 rupees, Mr. Roberts, the Billiard Champion, has expressed his willingness to play at — on the 29th January. Captain — of the — has kindly consented to play, taking 650 or 700 out of 1,000 from the Champion. It is proposed that subscriptions should be Rs. 4, time 9 p.m., place —. Gentlemen willing to subscribe are requested to send their names to Captain —. Mrs. C—'s Badminton is postponed till next Wednesday."

DISGRACEFUL CONDUCT OF A RAJAH.—That rather remarkable case in which the Rajah of Nattore was convicted of having enticed the widows of his three brothers into his apartment, and robbed them of their jewels, was heard in appeal before the High Court in Calcutta on Thursday last. The Judges held the charge of dacoity not proved, but convicted the prisoner of theft and criminal misappropriation, and reduced the sentence of imprisonment passed by the Judge of Rajshahye from two years to two months, and the fine from Rs. 50,000 to Rs. 15. The evidence seemed to show that the aim of the accused was rather to harass and intimidate his victims than to spoil them.

MISS TORU DUTT'S POEMS.—A new edition of the late Miss Toru Dutt's poems, translated from the French, was recently published in Calcutta, and a copy sent to Lord Lytton by her father, Baboo Govin Chunder Dutt. In acknowledging receipt of a copy Lord Lytton's secretary says:—"His Excellency the Viceroy desires me to tender you his best thanks for the new edition of 'A Sheaf Gleaned in French Fields.' His Excellency attaches much value to the book, I am to say, not merely on account of its own excellence, but as a remarkably bold and successful experiment in literature, and an evidence of great mental energy on the part of your accomplished daughter, for whose untimely loss his Excellency desires me to repeat to you his expression of sincerest sympathy."

TEA IN THE NAGA HILLS.—The Political Officer in charge of the Naga Hills lately reported the existence of large tea-trees there, which the Nagas are accustomed to cut down for firewood, or to save themselves the trouble of climbing to gather the seed. One tract of country, about nineteen miles long and six broad, on the slope of the Burrail mountains, seems meant by nature for tea gardens; but it lies in the land of independent Nagas, and for the present can only be coveted. The Chief Commissioner remarks that "the manner in which these very valuable plants—the tea trees—are destroyed, is but a sample of how the national wealth of the province has been, and is still, wasted." Is the Augami Naga expedition another sample?—Pioneer.

FRONTIER RAIDS.—In proof of the absolute efficiency of the means now in force for the preservation of peace on the frontier, we are told that a band of armed marauders paid Nowshera a visit on the evening of the 9th, cut down a couple of policemen, carried off their arms, and made good their retreat. We are told that in that station, a military cantonment with an European garrison, it is dangerous to be out after dark, and almost as dangerous to be at home, unless one is well-armed and on his guard. But frontier administration is perfect in its way.—Civil and Military Gazette.—The following special telegram from Shindah, dated the 14th January, appears in the columns of a contemporary:—"A daring raid occurred yesterday near Togul, six miles from Kohat. One grasscutter was killed and thirty cattle lifted. The raiders, numbering about sixty, were followed up by levies. The cattle were recaptured and one prisoner taken. Several deputations have come in from the neighbouring tribes, interceding for the Jawakis, but negotiations are yet open."

CENTRAL PROVINCES.—We hear that, owing to the great and daily increasing press of work, chiefly appellate, in the Courts of the Commissioners in the Central Provinces, it is in contemplation to appoint two additional Commissioners, on Rs. 2,000 a month, to relieve the Commissioners of a large portion of their judicial work. One of the Commissioners is to be appointed for the Nagpur country, the other for the Nerbada Valley districts. To assist in providing the money for this much needed reform, one Deputy Commissioner of the first-class is to be abolished, one of the fourth-class taking his place. In this way Rs. 833-5-4 pie per mensem will be economised. The remaining Rs. 3,266-10-4 pie per mensem will be in part provided for by a slight extension of the prevailing custom in the Central Provinces of appointing an officer to fill an acting vacancy in a grade three months after the vacancy occurs. Hitherto six weeks has, we believe, been the average time the pay for which is withheld from an officer succeeding another in a higher grade. The decentralisation system is indeed developing some real genius in finance.—Englishman.

RAILWAYS IN THE NORTH-WEST PROVINCES.—The Pioneer remarks:—"The new lines of light railway proposed for the North-West Provinces have, as we stated the other day, when generally describing the scheme, been unfavourably criticised by the agent of the Oudh and Rohilkhand line. But the reply of Colonel Fraser on this point seems irresistible. He points out that the broad interests of the country must not be sacrificed to the greed of home shareholders. The agent would extend the Oudh and Rohilkhand line northwards; but if the broad-gauge line were carried up to Saharunpore from Moradabad, the effect would practically be to deny railway communication for ever to the Dhoon. The traffic of such stations as Chakrata, Landour, and Mussoorie would certainly not pay for broad-gauge extensions, nor for wholly independent narrow gauge lines. But extensions to those places brought into the general scheme of a narrow gauge provincial system might be feasible. Moreover, the Oudh and Rohilkhand agent objects to the light lines on the ground that they would, if taken along the routes proposed, be competing and not feeder lines in their relationship to his own. He quite forgets that in proposing to carry on the Oudh and Rohilkhand line to Saharunpore he wants to enter into competition with the East Indian line. The truth appears to be that the Oudh and Rohilkhand line itself, as a broad-gauge line, is a costly mistake. It is not a part of the trunk system, and the traffic of the country through which it passes—densely populated as that region is—does not yield freight enough to make a broad gauge line profitable."

DEPARTURE OF COLONEL BURNE.—The following account of the departure of Colonel Owen Burne is reprinted from the Week:—"The Howrah Station last night, at the departure of the up train carrying the English mails, presented a busy scene that was both interesting and touching to those who understood its significance. Colonel Owen Burne, the right hand of the Viceroy and the most popular Private Secretary that India has known in our time, was leaving for home, probably for good; and a great bevy of his friends and admirers, Native as well as European, had assembled to bid him God-speed and 'see the last of him' in this country. The Viceroy brought Colonel Burne down to the station, accompanied by nearly the whole of the Staff; and the train moved off amidst a chorus of affectionate adieus, that showed how deeply the loss of the gallant Colonel is felt by every one, from his Excellency downward, with whom he had to be brought into contact. Colonel Burne was indeed an ideal Private Secretary; kind, courteous, and considerate to a degree. It has often been observed that a 'No from Burne was robbed of all its sting by the way in which it was said.' He was singularly unassuming, and even reticent about himself; and I have heard it said more than once, by those who are well acquainted with the facts, that no one but Lord Mayo formerly, and Lord Lytton more recently, ever knew of how much practical use his clear intellect and wide experience had really been to the successive Viceroys, or how greatly his counsels had been valued by both. The estimation in which Colonel Burne is held by the present Viceroy is well-known; and it must be a source of great consolation to his Excellency in his present loss to think that his faithful assistant and friend, though leaving India, is not leaving the service of India. The presence of Colonel Burne in the India Office as Political Secretary will doubtless do much to strengthen the hands of Lord Lytton out here; and it is matter of congratulation for the Empire just now that a man at once so capable and so thoroughly in accord with the Indian administration should be holding the reins at home. All Calcutta, and indeed all India, in wishing the late Private Secretary farewell, will heartily join with me in hoping that the domestic affliction which has called him away so suddenly will have passed away, or, if that may not be, will have assumed a less distressing and threatening aspect, before he arrives on the scene of his new labours."

THE PUNJAB TRADE REPORT.—Punjab trade reports become more accurate and less interesting every year. Even in the last, however, that for 1876-77, the Financial Commissioner cannot shake himself quite clear of former errors, which make a comparison of one year's trade with another somewhat difficult. During the year under review the value of the foreign trade of the Punjab has decreased by nearly twenty-one lakhs, the weight of goods carried increasing by nearly 30,000 maunds. The fact is that in former years the values were, as a rule, over-estimated. New and better methods of calculation have now been introduced; whilst the method of calculating weights, being tolerably correct, has been left unaltered. The foreign countries with which the Punjab trades are,—Kashmir, Ladakh, Chinese Tibet, Bajaur, Kabul, Tirah and Seistan—the trade with Eastern Turkistan being included in that of the first two countries. Only the import trade from Kabul and Tirah, and the unimportant trade with Chinese Tibet, shows a decrease; everything else has been increasing, so far as weights go, for values, as explained above, are untrustworthy. The chief facts shown by the figures for Kashmir are the decline of the Kashmir shawl trade, the largely increased import of raw silk from Kashmir, and lastly, the fact that native-made cotton fabrics are being supplanted in Kashmir by European goods. The chief import from Ladakh is the borax found there; but the demand for this article will be affected most likely by the discovery of large fields in America. A large quantity of raw silk, worth about Rs. 36,400, is also included in the imports; it must have come, however, from Yarkand over the Karakorum. Of the exports to Ladakh, tea shows an increase, and European cotton goods a considerable falling off. During the year also fifty-two double-barrelled guns, nine revolvers, 1,200 empty cartridges, and one million percussion caps were exported to Ladakh, and perhaps further. On the whole, the trade with Kabul continues to flourish, the progress made in 1875-76 being fully maintained. The item that shows the most remarkable increase is tea; indeed, there are some figures connected with it that are almost incredible, except on the supposition "that other goods are brought up by rail from the ports and sent on to Kabul under this feigned designation." The part of the report that treats of foreign trade ends with an observation on the balance of trade. Ignoring the operations of the Forest Department, which brings down timber from Kashmir, the value of imports from the foreign countries named exceeds the value of exports by about twenty-three and a-half lakhs. The traders, too, bring down large quantities of gold, not shown in the returns. One cannot say how the excess of imports is balanced. Perhaps jewellery and precious stones are for the most part taken back; but it may be, says Mr. Young, "that a drain of silver is going on in the direction of Central Asia, a result by no means to be deplored in the present state of the silver market."—Pioneer.

HOSPITAL ABUSES.—An inquiry recently held in Calcutta regarding the administration of a suburban hospital at Sealdah has brought to light a long course of maladministration and extravagance, which is most severely commented upon by the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal. Almost every department of the hospital had been overcharged for, and at the same time grossly neglected. The Lieutenant-Governor's minute on the case concludes as follows:—"The facts brought to light by this inquiry have left no possibility of doubt that a system of peculation and extravagance has been allowed to prevail for years in this hospital. Setting aside all arguments deducible from figures quoted, Dr. Woodford's recorded orders in 1875 and 1876 admit it, and the evidence of the extra diet sheets of last July show that it was up to the end of his administration still unchecked. The only single argument that can be urged in Dr. Woodford's defence is, that this entire absence of control and supervision of the hospital under his charge was not checked or controlled by his departmental superiors, and that so far from being condemned by them, he has received from them encouragement and support. But this is a matter which the Lieutenant-Governor cannot permit to influence him in the conclusion at which he is compelled to arrive on the plain issue as to whether or not there has been a gross and entirely unexplained waste of stores, medicine and drugs in the Sealdah Pauper Hospital, though it might have been considered had the Lieutenant-Governor had to consider finally the proper mode of indicating the dissatisfaction with Dr. Woodford's administration of the affairs of the hospital, if he had remained in the service. This, however, the Lieutenant-Governor is spared the necessity of doing. Dr. Woodford has received two extensions of service beyond the usual period, and the Accountant-General having reported that the last of these extensions proposed on the 1st January, Dr. Woodford ceased to belong to the Government service from that date. His inefficient superintendence of the hospital would have disqualified him for any further extension even if he had applied for it, which he has not."

STATION TALK.

MADRAS, Jan. 12.—On the "Progress Report" of the Madras Irrigation Department many remarks might be made. There are four millions of acres of well irrigated land in this Presidency, the systems of irrigation being excellent. Several new schemes are now under consideration, "such as the Sangum project in Vellore, the Peryaur project in Madura, and the Upper Tumbuddra project in Bellary." The statement of the report is clear enough:—Madras irrigation works have their value, and doubtless in their extension lies the remedy for, if not preventative against future famine. But "light railways for the better distribution of food supplies" are also of great importance. Madras railways have done their best in the hour of need, and the time, energies and brains of railway officials were severely taxed to meet with the requirements of the distressed districts. But there is a limit even to hard work, endurance and energy. There is little doubt that time was lost in the transportation of grain supplies; and where the need was greatest, say, in Mysor, in the remoter districts of Cuddapah, such as Mudanapilly and others, there were no railways to transport the heavy loads of rice and grain which were left under insufficient shelter, and exposed to thieves, decay and other destroying influences at a considerable distance from the distressed villages. It is more than probable that the inconveniences I have alluded to were pointed out to Lord Lytton during his brief tour through the Presidency, and from his own observations he must have come to the conclusion that light railways (speed being the great end and object) were as much a necessity in Madras as extensive irrigation works. But the returns on the Cauvery Delta and the Godavery works are large enough to prove the valuation of irrigation when well carried out, whilst the system of increasing the number of railways is always doubtful and expensive. Lord Northbrook's opinion, that the "two great remedies against famines should be worked together" is, I fancy, the one which should carry the most weight; but if there must be a choice in the matter, it should fall on the surest and least risky preventative. That irrigation works have answered in this presidency facts in the "Progress Report" established beyond a question, and no one who travelled through the distressed districts during the beginning of the past year could fail to note in the midst of the wilderness of barren red rock or sandy waste, the dismal jungly solitude, with its burnt up dusty vegetation and fringes of scorched yellow grass, the tender bits of green, the fresh young crops, the well watered fast ripening grain which startled him as he came suddenly upon them in the midst as it were of rock and bramble, of desert and dust that surrounded the traveller on all sides. These gems of vegetation reminded you of water channels and wells, of tanks and canals close by, and make you also bear in mind that when the famine was at its height, well irrigated districts, such as the Godavery, Tanjor, Kistna and Tinnevely, were untouched by the destroyer. A word or two, not about the famine, but its "after-effects." Are they passing away; is the patient recovering strength, and is he able to face the burdens which have been laid upon him? It is hard to answer questions which are put to officials daily. Mr. Garstin, rumour says, is to write a report of the famine year, being well qualified to do so, although some men state that Mr. Digby, the industrious secretary of the Famine Relief Committee, is likely to be chosen for the honour and glory of writing a résumé of famine doings. Perhaps they may throw "day-light" on the matter and tell us how we really stand. Meanwhile, there is scarcity and sorrow in the land, rice selling at four measures for the rupee, provisions unusually dear, and horse-grain or koultee expensive. Servants are again beginning to complain, but they are full-fed and prosperous in comparison to those who are to be found beyond the pale.—Englishman Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

RICE EXPORTS.—Madras has again begun to export instead of import rice, two Canal steamers having been chartered to load with rice for Europe.

THE LATE FAMINE.—Telegrams from Madras give the approximate decrease on famine relief works as 32,000 persons, on gratuitous relief 22,446, and the number now remaining about 369,000. Prices are fluctuating, and rice has risen in nine districts.

TRADE OF BURMAH.—From a report published with the British Burmah Gazette of the 29th ultimo we see that there was an increase of Rs. 87,26,977, or 9.33 per cent., in the imports and exports of merchandise on private account, while the transactions in treasure showed an increase of Rs. 1,48,23,108, or 181.30 per cent. The private import trade in merchandise, Rs. 4,70,94,039, was, the report informs us, the largest ever registered in the province, and exceeded that of the previous year by Rs. 88,80,055. The value of the traffic from foreign countries increased from Rs. 1,62,94,014 in 1875-76 to Rs. 2,17,00,253 in the year under review, or by Rs. 54,06,239, equal to 33 per cent.; while the coasting traffic also increased from Rs. 2,19,19,970 to Rs. 2,53,93,786, or by 16 per cent.

THE LATE MRS. SAUNDERS.—It is with very great regret that we record the death, on the 21st ult., in England, of Mrs. Saunders, wife of Mr. C. B. Saunders, C.B., the Chief Commissioner of Mysor. The deceased was a very popular member of Bangalor society, by whom her death will be much regretted. The late Mrs. Saunders was very well known for her ready and liberal acts of charity amongst the poor of Bangalor of all classes of the community who have long missed, and will now altogether miss, her presence. One of the standing memorials of the deceased lady's active charity is the school for Mohammedan girls in Narrainpillay-street, in which she took the deepest personal interest. We are sure Mr. Saunders has the sincere sympathy of his personal friends and acquaintances, and of the public of the Province generally, for the loss he has sustained.—Bangalor Examiner, Jan. 9.

A CHANDERNAGORE correspondent of the Indian Mirror remarks that it is a "strange inconsistency, that while the Queen of England assumes the title of the Empress of India and carries her administration throughout the Continent, this little place should still be held by a nation perfectly independent of the Government of the English. The turbulent Mahratta, the fanatic Sikh, the proud Mussulman, have all brought their kingdoms under the paramount rule of England in India; but that this little bit of land—a mere island in the ocean of English possession—should be owned and governed by a nation quite independent of the Government of the English, is an anomaly quite inexplicable from an Indian point of view. While the whole of the English dominions in India is groaning under taxation, the inhabitants of this station are nearly, if not entirely, free from it.

BELLARY.—The responsible famine officers at Bellary reported two months ago that the famine in that district was over, yet we learn that money doles are issued from the Mansion House Fund, which, it appears, must be got rid of somehow. It seems incredible, but we are informed on good authority that one thousand women and children are fed daily, none of whom require such assistance; and that the money which is issued weekly for the support of the aged and for infants is in no single case required. The crops are fair and the country is prosperous, considering all things; all the country people, besides, have left Bellary to work in their fields, and now seem contented. Those, therefore, who are being gratuitously fed are the people belonging to the town and bazaar, which means demoralisation to the whole population. We are assured that no one will work, and servants are not to be got; coolies won't go ten yards under four annas, even to carry a letter, and to take or fetch anything weighing over five lbs. weight they demand eight annas and a bullock cart; in fact, they will do nothing except as a great favour, and servants who used to be very good are loafing about the bazaars; the few who remain in service are impertinent, and walk off if one does not give in to them. Meantime trade and business of all kinds is almost at a standstill.—Pioneer.

COLOMBO BREAKWATER.—Sir John Coode, it appears, had two objects in view in visiting Colombo, to satisfy himself as to the progress of the work on the breakwater, and to look into the question of harbour extension. The first point was soon mastered. Sir John has left the island more than ever convinced of the satisfactory character of the work performed by Mr. Kyle, with whom he has left the fullest discretion in regard to future proceedings. It is said that Sir John Coode is of opinion that the breakwater will be one of the greatest engineering successes of the day. To the present time, little more than a year since its commencement, there have been 645 feet constructed, and it is calculated that there should be 1,000 feet of the breakwater laid down by the end of April. At the present rate of progress, 100 feet are laid monthly, for which forty blocks are used, whilst the number of blocks made in the yard each month is forty-three. Sir John Coode has collected a large amount of information relative to harbour extension, but more is required before he can venture to give the question the full consideration it deserves. All this, the Observer says, will await his arrival at home in April, when he will be able to come to a final decision before the advent of the north-east monsoon of 1879.

THE TROUBLES OF POLYGAMY.—A young Burman, the son of a Government clerk, was recently the hero of an adventure at Dallah, which has caused considerable amusement in Burmese circles. Like many another of his race, he was not contented with one wife, and recently took a second or junior wife. The youth and his most recent spouse crossed over the other night to Dallah from Rangoon to see a poay or theatrical performance going on there. Being well dressed and having plenty of money, which they distributed freely amongst the performers, the pair were given a good place, and seemed to be enjoying themselves thoroughly. But they had not taken sufficient precaution to keep their trip a secret from the senior wife, who with a band of possibly similar outraged wives suddenly appeared on the scene. Contrary to usual custom, these women seized upon the husband and dragged him triumphantly from the poay, amid the roars of the crowd, by the hair of his head. The junior wife, who seems to have had the first glimpse of what was coming, slipped from her lofty position, and was in a few seconds completely lost to view amongst the crowd. Satisfied with the capture of the male delinquent, no attempt was made to discover his companion, who eventually beat a retreat to a petty official's house in a great fright, where she remained safe till the next morning. We do not think that young man will be in a hurry to take another wife to a poay in Dallah for some time, at any rate until he gets properly divorced from his first wife, who so vigorously asserted her position and rights amongst a sympathising, if chaffing, crowd of some hundreds of Burmese men and women.—Rangoon Times.

THE COTTON TRADE.—In his review of the trade and navigation returns for 1876-77, Mr. C. A. Galton, referring to cotton, says:—The value of the trade in this article twenty-two years ago was twenty-five lakhs of rupees, since which time it has increased, though with considerable fluctuations, to nearly six times that sum, the average of the last five years being 137 lakhs. During the interval between 1855-56 and 1860-61 the price of cotton ranged between two and two and a-half annas per pound. In 1861-62 it was a little over three annas, the quantity exported being eight and three quarter millions of pounds and the declared value upwards of 170 lakhs. In 1862-63 the quantity exported fell by nearly 28 per cent. owing to the transfer of North Canara and with it the trade of the important cotton-exporting of Compta to the Bombay Presidency; but, in consequence of the American war and the unprecedented demand for Indian cotton in the English market which arose thereupon, the price nearly doubled, and the value of the exports rose by upwards of 40 per cent. The price of cotton, and together with it the value of exports, was steadily maintained in the years 1863-64, 1864-65 and 1865-66, during the continuance of the American war, and in the last-named year the exports reached 120 millions of pounds, the highest figure recorded for this Presidency. With the cessation of the American war, and as a consequence of the excessive demand for Indian cotton in the Manchester market, the exports fell at once in 1866-67 (eleven months) to less than two and a-half millions of pounds. In 1867-68 the exports nearly doubled and 1868-69 quadrupled. Since then we have been fluctuating between four and eight millions of pounds in quantity and 100 and 200 lakhs rupees in value. The principal cotton-producing districts are Belary, Tinnivelly, Kistna, Kurnool, Coimbatore, Madura, and Cuddapah. On the whole the area of cultivation ranges between one and a-half to one and three-quarter millions of acres in this Presidency. It can be increased to any extent, but at present there is not much inducement for extension, as the cotton produced is of inferior quality, and cannot compete with American cotton or even Egyptian cotton in Europe. A very large portion of the cotton produced is consumed in the country, and there are large exports to Mysor and Bombay.—Madras Times.

Bombay.

THE GOVERNOR.—We believe that Sir Richard Temple is contemplating making some important reductions in local establishments. It is believed that one of the Judges of the High Court will be lopped off, as the present judicial strength of the High Court was fixed at a time when there was much more work to do than there is at present.

SUICIDES.—We regret to hear that news has been received in Bombay of the death, by his own hand, of Mr. F. C. Blodwell, agent for Messrs. Whittle, Anderson and Co., at Dholera. We learn that Mr. William Gordon, Government pensioner at Sattara, late of the Judge's Court and Station Clerk, shot himself dead with a fowling piece on the 16th inst. The verdict at the coroner's inquest was that of temporary insanity.—Bombay Gazette, Jan. 21.

A VOLUNTEER COMPANY FOR COLABA.—On Monday evening a meeting was held at the Headquarters of the Bombay Volunteer Rifles, at which the desirability of forming a Colaba Company was discussed. The result was that it was resolved to open a list at head-quarters to be signed by any person who may wish to become members of a Colaba Company. The paper will remain there for a week, and should a sufficient number of signatures be obtained, a Colaba Company will be formed.—Bombay Gazette, Jan. 21.

FAMINE CENSUS.—The Government of Bombay has issued instructions regarding the proposed census of selected talukas in different parts of the famine country. It thinks it is very desirable now that the compilation of the census returns should be completed and the results ascertained as quickly as possible. To this end tabulation sheets have been prepared according to villages, and full instructions for using them are to be circulated. Special arrangements have been made in detail, and it is hoped that with the assistance to be granted the work of compilation will require but a few days, and Government relies upon Collectors taking the necessary measures to ensure the return of the compilation forms to the Secretariat by an early date in February.

DEFENCES OF ADEN.—Major-General Sir A. Taylor, K.C.B., and Major Pierson, R.E., have left for Aden, to carry out such parts of the duties of the Aden Fortifications Committee as require to be done on the spot. Meantime a Defence Committee, as it will hereafter be called, in token of the wider scope to be given to its operations, will assemble in Calcutta immediately under Admiral

MEDICAL.—After forty-nine years' service, Mr. Gill, Assistant Colonial Surgeon, has applied for superannuation.

COMMERCIAL.—Mr. McKean will probably be succeeded in the Mercantile Bank at Galle by Mr. Bailey.

CIVIL SALARIES.—The increase of 20 per cent. in the salaries of Civil Servants is confirmed. An advance of 25 per cent. has been anticipated, but the extra 5 per cent. was not conceded.

THE GOVERNOR.—His Excellency the Governor, who left Colombo on the 10th to inspect the northern districts of the island, arrived at Jaffna in the Serendib on the evening of the 13th, visited Point Pedro and Batticotta on Tuesday and Wednesday, and was expected at Trincomalee to-day (17th January).—Ceylon Times.

CHOLERA.—Cholera is reported to be still prevalent in the northern province, notwithstanding the arduous exertions of the Civil and Medical Departments to check it. It is now admitted that the Tamils who are constantly arriving in the district bring the epidemic with them.

CIVIL.—Mr. Roosmale Cocq, the District Judge at Galle, is a candidate for the Agency at that place, rendered vacant by Mr. Templer's promotion to Kandy. The vacancy in the Badulla Assistant Agency, caused by the promotion of Mr. Sharpe, is to be filled by Mr. King from Hambantota, who will be succeeded by Mr. Williams from the Matelle Assistant Agency.

COFFEE.—Accounts from most of the coffee districts indicate improvement, and are certainly much more encouraging than when we last wrote. The weather had become fine, and was more likely to mature the bearing wood and bring out a good blossom, which is in some districts already making its appearance, but later accounts seem of a more doubtful nature. It is thought probable that the current season's coffee crop may range between 550,000 and 600,000 cwts. At date our exports are 7,000 cwts. below those at the same time last year.—Ceylon Times, Jan. 17.

RAILWAYS.—The official return of the traffic of the Ceylon Government Railway for the week ending Dec. 30 shows an increase in the receipts of Rs. 544 70 cts. over the corresponding period of last year. We are glad to be able to congratulate the colony on the successful placing of the last batch of Ceylon Government 4½ per cent. debentures (Matale Railway) at £105, a rate which is one per cent. above the last sale of our island paper. It is not more, however, than the rate to which we are entitled, bearing in mind the excellence of the security, and the great scarcity of really first class investments, such as public companies and banks can look at for Trust moneys. The amount of the Matale Railway Loan was to have been £275,000.—Ceylon Times.

THE EARL OF DALKEITH has arrived in Calcutta.

A SPORTING PAPER entitled Billiards has been started in Calcutta.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL G. J. PASLEY succeeds to the command of the 34th Native Infantry on the retirement of Colonel R. P. Anderson, and Major W. V. FitzJacob becomes second in command.

THE 63RD REGIMENT has gone into camp on the Ferozepore-road on account of prevalence of fever. It is hoped that change of air and scene will eradicate the fever from which the regiment has been so long suffering.

HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN has approved the grant of a salute of seventeen guns to Nawab Vikaru Amra Amir-i-Kabir so long as he continues to act as one of the Regents of the Haidarabad State.

THE amount of Indian salt revenue for the first eight months of the current financial year has reached Rs. 3,99,91,243, as compared with Rs. 3,92,29,418 in the corresponding period of last year.

MR. JUSTICE CUNNINGHAM took his seat as a Judge of the High Court of Calcutta on Jan. 17, and sat with Mr. Justice Jackson, C.I.E., on the third Bench.

THE Allahabad Bank (Limited) has declared a dividend for the past half-year at the rate of 12 per cent. per annum, with a bonus of 3 per cent., and carried forward Rs. 4,000 to the reserve fund.

PETROLEUM springs are reported to have been discovered near Kummum in the Nizam's territory; and the Government is said to have despatched a well-equipped party, under Mr. Edelstein, a Hungarian, to make fuller investigations.

RETIREMENTS.

The following appears in the last Gazette of India:—

With the sanction of H.M.'s Govt. it is notified that the fifteen retirements under the provisions of G.G.O. No. 8 of Jan. 1, which remained un-allotted on Dec. 31 last, will be held available for officers of all three Presidencies up to March 31 next.

This offer is restricted to officers who are qualified under Clause 2 of the G.G.O. of Jan. 1, 1877, and who completed twenty-eight years' service on or before Dec. 31.

Applications will be disposed of by the Govt. of India according to priority of proposed dates of retirement, preference being given, if necessary, to the senior applicant, should there be more than one for retirement on the same day.

Officers of the Madras and Bombay armies should submit their applications in the usual manner to their respective Governments for communication to the Govt. of India.

RETURNED TO DUTY.

The undermentioned officers of the Bengal Civil Service reported to the Govt. of Bengal their arrival at Calcutta on the dates specified opposite their names:—

Mr. T. L. L. Jenkins; Dec. 24.

Mr. W. C. Macpherson; Dec. 27.

Mr. G. K. Lyon; Dec. 27.

Mr. H. Cox; Dec. 28.

Mr. R. E. Hamblin, Bengal C.S., reported to the Govt. of the N.W.P. and Oudh his arrival at Allahabad on the 4th inst.

Mr. C. S. Bayley, Bengal C.S., reported to the Govt. of Bengal his arrival at Calcutta on the 31st ult.

Mr. J. A. Grant, Bengal C.S., reported to the Govt. of the Punjab his arrival at Lahore on the 3rd inst.

DONATIONS FOR PROFICIENCY IN LANGUAGES.

The Gazette of India notifies that Mr. E. Stack, Bengal C.S., having obtained a certificate of high proficiency in Persian, has been presented with the authorised donation of Rs. 2,000, and that Mr. W. Hoey, of the Bengal C.S., having obtained a certificate of high proficiency in Urdu, has been presented with the authorised donation of Rs. 1,000.

ACCOUNTANTS OFFICE CALCUTTA.

The following temporary promotions are made in the Superior Accounts Estab.:—

From asst. examiner, 1st grade, to dep. examiner:—Mr. R. N. Burn and Mr. S. M. Johnson.

From asst. examiner, 2nd grade, to asst. examiner, 1st grade:—Mr. I. S. Hubbard.

From asst. examiner, 3rd grade, to asst. examiner, 2nd grade:—Mr. E. A. Denny.

Mr. H. Stuart is appointed dep. examiner, P.W. accounts, on probation, and posted to the office of the examiner of Guaranteed Railway Accounts, Calcutta.

THE FAMINE RELIEF WORKS.

The undermentioned officers are re-transferred from Madras Famine Relief Works to the provinces and branches of the P.W.D. to which they are permanently attached:—

To Bengal Irrigation Branch.—Mr. W. J. Fahie, exec. engr., 3rd grade; Mr. R. A. Oldham, exec. engr., 3rd grade (temporary rank); Mr. C. J. K. Watson, asst. engr., 2nd grade; Mr. A. Hays, assist. engr., 2nd grade.

To Military Works Branch.—Mr. M. Birkbeck, exec. engr., 4th grade (temporary rank); and Mr. F. G. Fox, asst. engr. 2nd grade.

CIVIL PENSION CODE.

The Governor-General in Council directs the publication of the following Addenda and Corrigenda to the Codes of the Financial Department:—

The following despatch from her Majesty's Secretary of State for India is published for general information:—

(Financial, No. 342.)

To H. E. the Right Hon. the Governor General of India in Council.

My Lord,—I have considered in Council your Financial letter, dated the 13th August, 1877, No. 241, recommending that Uncovenanted Officers may be allowed to retire on a superannuation pension at the age of fifty-five years without producing medical evidence of inefficiency.

2. You point out that, under existing rules, an Uncovenanted Officer who has attained the age of fifty-five years is only eligible for privilege leave, and for any special leave to which he may be entitled, and you consider it inequitable that an officer should be deprived of the privilege of furlough because he has attained to a certain age, and yet not allowed to retire without a certificate of inefficiency, which he may not be able to procure.

3. Your proposition is approved, on the understanding that a superannuation pension will only be granted to an officer who would be entitled to a pension of like amount if he had retired on medical certificate.

THE DE BRITTO CASE.

Bombay Castle, Jan. 14.—Letter from Messrs. Jefferson and Payne, Solicitors, High Court, dated 22nd December, 1877—Forwards a memorial to the address of his Excellency the Governor in Council, signed by a great number of the inhabitants of Bombay, praying that the capital sentence passed upon Joaquim Charles Britto on the 15th December may not be carried into effect, and requests that the necessary steps may be taken to submit the memorial for his Excellency's consideration at as early a date as possible.

Letter from the Honourable the Chief Justice of her Majesty's High Court of Judicature, dated 30th December, 1877—Forwards a letter from Mr. Justice Green, who submits his opinion upon the case of the convict Britto.

RESOLUTION.—Government have now received Mr. Justice Green's report on the memorial signed by a very large number of the leading inhabitants of Bombay, European and native, requesting that Government would extend the clemency of the Crown to the prisoner Joaquim Charles Britto and commute the sentence of death passed on him to transportation for life.

Mr. Justice Green, after a careful review of the various facts brought out at the trial, finally arrives at the conclusion that while not dissatisfied with the verdict itself, he yet considers that the evidence of the existence of a considerable degree of mental unsoundness in the prisoner is sufficiently strong to render his a proper case for not carrying into effect the capital sentence passed upon him.

In this view his Excellency in Council concurs. He is of opinion that the verdict of the jury was a correct one on the case placed before them, but that taking into consideration all the circumstances regarding the mental condition of the prisoner during the past few years, as shown by the evidence adduced, there is sufficient ground for Government exercising in this case the prerogative of mercy with which they are entrusted, and commuting the sentence of death to one of rigorous imprisonment for life, and the sentence is commuted accordingly. JOHN NUGENT,

Under-Secretary to Government.

THE INDIAN FAMINE.

On Monday afternoon, the 11th inst., a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Indian Famine Relief Fund was held at the Mansion House for the despatch of business. Alderman Sir Thomas White, in whose mayoralty the Fund was started, presided, and there were present Mr. C. G. Arbuthnot, Mr. Francis Buxton, Mr. S. P. Low, J.P., Alderman Sir Robert Carden, Mr. Teede, Mr. Parbury, Mr. William Scott, Mr. Hardcastle, Mr. J. H. Crossman, J.P., Mr. C. B. Dowden, Mr. W. R. Arbuthnot, Mr. William J. Soulsby, the secretary, and Mr. Winzar, the cashier. The fund was reported to amount to £509,000, of which £490,000 had been remitted to India. Since the last meeting, a month ago, £6,550 had been received, including £4,500, being a third remittance, from New South Wales, through the Mayor of Sydney; £1,000 from Hobart Town, £100 from Invercargill, New Zealand; £200 from Middlesborough, £127 from Darlington, and smaller sums. There was a balance in hand of £10,203. The Lord Mayor, it was stated, had had advices from the Mayor of Melbourne, stating that £3,500 more (making £27,500 in all) had been sent direct to Madras; from Hawkes Bay, New Zealand, intimating that £1,400 had been similarly despatched; and from the Mayor of Durban, Port Natal, announcing the sending of £1,600. The weekly statement from Madras, dated January the 19th, stated that a reaction seemed to have occurred in the famine districts, and the pinch of distress was being again felt with great severity. The number on relief works was 158,643, and fed gratuitously 210,896, making a grand total of 369,539. Except in North Arcot no rain was reported during the week ending 15th January. There was still occasion for much anxiety. The Executive hoped to be able to show working charges of less than three-quarters per cent. upon the sum entrusted to them. If that could be accomplished subscribers would have the satisfaction of knowing that their generous donations had been disbursed with a minimum of attendant expenditure. 130,622 deaths were registered in the Presidency of Madras in October. For the same month the registered births were only 36,039. Fever was the most destructive form of disease, as might have been expected after the heavy rains set in. The mortality from other causes was upwards of 52,000. The following were the ratios of mortality per 1,000 for some of the worst famine districts :—South Arcot, 71.4; Trichinopoly, 81.03; Madura, 90.6; Tinnevely, 48.2; Kurnol, 105.8; Cuddapah, 69.03; Bellary, 80.8; North Arcot, 93.2; and Salem, 100.7. On the motion of Mr. Parbury, seconded by Mr. Arthur T. Hewitt, a further remittance of £10,000 was voted to India, making, with former sums, half a million sterling, or over five-and-a-half millions of rupees actually sent out for the relief of the sufferers. Mr. Low observed that there was even a worse famine now raging in China, where nine millions of people were said to be starving, and children were being sold in the streets. It was resolved by the Committee, almost unanimously, to make formal applications to the India-office for such mortality returns as they at present possessed. Mr. C. G. Arbuthnot incidentally referred to the courteous action of the Eastern Telegraph Company in remitting messages to India free of charge, and said that if the Madras Committee had secured a like privilege over £1,000 would have been saved to the fund. The Committee resolved to meet again that day four weeks, and with that the proceedings ended.

The following letter from the India Office has been addressed to the Chairman of the Indian Famine Relief Fund :—"India Office, Feb. 13.—"Sir,—I am directed by the Secretary of State for India in Council to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 11th inst., asking on behalf of the Mansion House Committee of the Indian Famine Relief Fund to be supplied with such returns of the entire mortality in the famine districts as the India Office now possesses. In reply, I am instructed to state that the India Office has no returns of the kind mentioned by you, but that Lord Salisbury has been informed by the Government of India of the intention of the Government of Bombay and the Chief Commissioner of Mysor to take a census on the 19th January, with the view of ascertaining as far as possible the real loss of life in those territories arising from the famine. A similar census is to be taken by the Government of Madras towards the end of February or the beginning of March. I am to add that the results of the census will hereafter be communicated to you for the information of the Mansion House Committee.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your obedient servant, LOUIS MALLET.—To Sir Thomas White, Chairman of the Indian Famine Relief Fund, Mansion House."

THE INDIAN IMPORT DUTIES.

On Friday afternoon a very large and influential deputation waited on Lord George Hamilton (in the absence of the Marquis of Salisbury, who had been suddenly summoned to a Cabinet Council), at the India-office, Whitehall, with regard to the Indian import duties. The deputation comprised Mr. Hibbert, M.P., Mr. P. Rylands, M.P., Mr. Jacob Bright, M.P., Mr. W. E. Briggs, M.P., Mr. T. H. Sidebottom, M.P., Mr. E. Hermon, M.P., Colonel O. O. Walker, M.P., Mr. J. T. Cross, M.P., Mr. W. E. Brooks, M.P., Mr. Torr, M.P., and representatives from all parts of the manufacturing districts.—Mr. Hugh Birley, M.P., having briefly introduced the deputation, Mr. Jackson, a Lancashire cotton manufacturer, said that previously they had waited on Lord Salisbury to press the injustice of import duties on cotton goods, and the vote of the House of Commons had declared that they ought to be repealed as soon as possible; but now they wished to explain that, having hitherto always advocated the repeal of the import duties, they now came before the Government to ask as an alternative that they should impose an excise duty on the productions of the Indian mills. The speaker explained that such a suggestion would not have been made if the Government would allow the present duty to disappear, even at the rate of one per cent. per annum. Mr. Warden, representing the operatives of the Lancashire district, briefly supported the views expressed by Mr. Jackson. In reply, Lord G. Hamilton said that, hitherto the Government had been able to agree with the advocates of abolition in the application to India of sound economic principles and a sound fiscal system. But the proposal which was now made was somewhat different, although Mr. Jackson seemed to think it was quite in harmony with the principles of free trade. That might be so or not, but a very distinguished freetrader had expressed a contrary opinion very confidently in strong language, if strong language were to be taken as a proof of confidence. Be that, however, as it might, the object of the Government throughout had been to reduce the price of what was practically a necessary of life in India, and it was quite clear to impose an excise duty on the mills of Bombay would not in any way accomplish that object. There was, in his opinion, then, only one justification for such a proposal as that of Mr. Jackson, and that was that we should look on those import duties as part of the permanent income of the Indian Government. If the proposal were adopted, the immediate result would be that the total revenue derived from the duty on cotton goods in India would be increased, and the more it was increased the greater would be the difficulty in reducing or abolishing it. So far, therefore, from achieving the object which the Government had in view, he believed the imposition of an excise duty would have the opposite effect. Again, there was the great practical objection that it would be impossible to impose the duty on hand-loom. Mr. Jackson, it was true, did not think it necessary to do so; but if it was not levied on hand-loom then there would be a protection to those looms against competition from steam mills, and such a proceeding would certainly be contrary to the principles of free trade. He could not, therefore, on behalf of Lord Salisbury, hold out any hope that he would accept the suggestion to impose an excise duty. As to the depressed condition of the cotton trade, to which Mr. Whalley had referred, he might observe that he had before him some figures which showed that during the first eight months of this year the imports in India were 13 per cent. over the corresponding period of the preceding year, the value being 9 per cent. greater. Mr. Jackson had, no doubt, to a certain extent, accounted for that increase, but it was nevertheless, he thought, clear that the depression spoken of was not so much due to a falling off in the imports to India as to a decrease of consumption elsewhere. As for the pledges of the Government on the subject, he need, he hoped, hardly assure the deputation that they were bona fide pledges, and it was very satisfactory to find that at the present moment the two Ministerial exponents of the financial policy of the Government of India—Lord Lytton and Sir J. Strachey—were thoroughly in accord with Lord Salisbury, so that he hoped his noble friend might be in a position to redeem his promises sooner than Mr. Jackson seemed to suppose. There were, however, just now great practical difficulties in the way, and he believed that if the proposal to impose an excise duty were adopted the result would be indefinitely to postpone the abolition of the import duties. It was mainly on that ground that he could not hold out any prospect that Lord Salisbury could adopt the proposal. He would, however, in the future, as he had done in the past, use all the influence he possessed to promote the common object which they all had in view.

The deputation then withdrew.

A meeting of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce was held on Feb. 12 for the purpose of determining the course to be pursued for obtaining the abolition of the Indian import duties on cotton goods and yarns. Mr. B. Armitage presided, and there was a large attendance of members. Mr. John Slagg moved, "That, in the opinion of this Chamber, the trade of this district is entitled to a distinct pledge on the part of the Government as to the immediate repeal of the duties on the importation of cotton goods and yarns into India, and that if the condition of Indian finance does not permit of such a pledge being given, it is the duty of this Chamber to press for the imposition of an excise duty and the removal of the protective character of the import duties." Mr. R. R. Jackson seconded the resolution. Mr. G. Lord moved as an amendment that the latter part of the resolution referring to the excise be omitted, and this was seconded by Mr. N. S. Symons and Mr. Jackson, who condemned Mr. Bright's letter as ill-timed and in bad taste. He denied that the promoters of the excise duty were actuated by passion, but said they were moved by justifiable disappointment. After a long discussion the debate was adjourned for a week.

Miscellaneous.

INDIAN BANKS.—The Bank of Bengal has increased its minimum rate of interest and discount to 8 per cent. The Bank of Bombay has also increased its minimum rate of interest and discount to 6 per cent.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The tenders for £300,000 in Bills on India were received on Feb. 13 at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £174,968, at the average rate of 1s. 8<sup>7</sup>/<sub>16</sub>d.; to Bombay, £120,000, at an average rate of 1s. 8<sup>7</sup>/<sub>16</sub>d.; and to Madras, £5,032, at an average rate of 1s. 8<sup>12</sup>/<sub>16</sub>d. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras at 1s. 8<sup>3</sup>/<sub>16</sub>d. will receive about 75 per cent., and on Bombay at that price about 47 per cent.; all above in full. The Council have again got rid of the whole of the bills advertised for tender at the same rate they obtained on the 6th inst.; but allottees now get a much larger percentage of their applications at the rate than they did then.

INDIAN MEDICAL EXAMINATIONS.—The following is a list of Indian medical candidates who were successful at both the London and Netley examinations, having passed through a course of instruction at the Army Medical School, Netley:—Feb., 1878.—1, S. J. Thomson, gained the Herbert prize and Martin memorial medal, 5,008 marks; 2, R. N. Campbell, 5,000; 3, E. S. Brander, 4,972; 4, R. Manser, 4,885; 5, F. C. Chatterjee, 4,719; 6, G. A. Emerson, 4,565; 7, H. Adey, 4,500; 8, B. N. Koyaji, 4,290; 9, A. W. F. Street, 4,130; 10, H. P. Jervis, 4,065; 11, E. Tully, 4,050; 12, D. C. Davidson, 3,985; 13, C. H. Bennett, 3,942; 14, J. C. H. Peacocke, 3,890; 15, K. S. Nariman, 3,875; 16, A. F. Sargent, 3,697; 17, W. H. Thornhill, 3,615; 18, R. H. Robinson, 3,486; and 19, M. E. Reporter, 3,327.

H.M.'s TROOPS FOR INDIA.—Her Majesty's India troopship Jumna, Capt. George Parsons, sailed from Portsmouth on the 10th inst. (after being detained several hours at Spithead by the fog), with the 61st Regiment, from Dover to Malta, consisting of Lieut.-Col.

Blackett, Majors Heywood and Fane, Capt. Money, Dickin, Chetwynd, Somerville, Workington, and Fowler, Lieuts. Corbett, Law, Fryer, O'Connell, Whalley, Trotman, Gilmore, England, Tatham, and Baines, Adj. Curtin, Quartermaster Wilson, 739 men, 54 women, and 84 children. After embarking the regiment at Malta, the Jumna will (according to present instructions) embark the 2nd battalion of the 13th Regiment, now at Malta, for conveyance to India. The Jumna also took from Portsmouth various details for Bombay, consisting of 56 officers, 76 men, 8 women, and 16 children.

H.M.'s TROOPS FOR FOREIGN SERVICE.—The Infantry battalions now standing at the head of the list for foreign service are the 2nd Battalions of the 4th, 5th, 6th, 10th, and 14th Regiments, the 26th, 29th, 30th, 41st, 3rd Battalion of the 60th Rifles, 86th, 93rd Highlanders, and 1st and 3rd Battalions of the Rifle Brigade. The order in which they would be sent out would depend very much upon the fact of their destination being India, the Colonies, or special service. As far as possible the authorities desire to send those regiments whose last period of foreign service was in India to the Colonies, and those who were last on Colonial service to India; while in the event of a force being needed for special service, the highest on the list would be sent out without regard to their previous tours of duty abroad. As the 10th, 26th, 41st, 93rd, and the 3rd Battalions of the 60th and Rifle Brigade last came from India, their next foreign service would probably be in the Colonies; while upon the same principle the 2nd Battalions of the 4th, 5th, 6th and 14th, the 29th, 30th, 86th, and 1st Battalion Rifle Brigade would seem to be next destined for India. Looking to the reliefs which in the ordinary course would be needed during the next two or three years and the claims of the affiliated battalions abroad to be brought home, the order of departure from the United Kingdom would be somewhat as follows:—2nd Battalion 5th, 30th, 2nd Battalion 6th, 2nd Battalion 14th, 3rd Battalion 60th Rifles, 2nd Battalion 10th, 29th, 93rd Highlanders, 26th, 86th, and 41st.

TROOPS FROM INDIA.—The Indian relief troopship Serapis, Captain Davidson, arrived on the 11th inst. from Bombay, whence she took the 2nd Battalion 8th Foot, to Aden, and relieved the 56th Regiment, who have now returned to England, and will be quartered at Parkhurst. The Serapis left Bombay on Jan. 3, Port Said Jan. 20, and Malta Feb. 1. It appears that on the night of Jan. 26, when the Serapis was within nine miles of Malta, she was caught by a heavy gale of wind and driven to the eastward, having only twenty hours' coal on board, and it was useless attempting to steam against the gale. Much anxiety was felt in the island at her non-arrival, and the Raleigh having been sent in search of her, fell in with the Serapis, 154 miles from Malta and towed her in. Amongst the officers are Lieut.-Colonel G. F. Berry, in command; Major F. C. Hill; Captains A. Greenland, W. Bell, A. G. Spencer, H. H. Kelly, H. W. T. Smee; Lieutenants J. B. Newbury, D. A. Blest, H. G. W. Ford, E. C. Parker, W. B. Leslie, W. E. Stevenson, T. Stock, C. Wood, and H. J. H. J. Massey; Quartermaster C. V. Leitch; Surgeon-Major R. Jackson, with four hundred and fifty non-commissioned officers and privates, forty soldiers' wives, and one hundred and five children; Major C. L. Hawkins; Capt. J. F. Free; Lieuts. F. Howard, P. Hussey, F. E. Clark, J. A. F. Wall, and F. J. Burridge; Veterinary Surgeon T. J. Symonds; 274 non-commissioned officers and privates, twenty-six women, forty children, F and G Batteries C Brigade R.H.A.; also the following officers on leave of absence:—Major Tracey, Lieut.-Col. Warren, and Lieut. J. Hotham, R.A.; Lieut. W. S. O. Liardet, 1st Batt. 17th Regt.; Lieut. O. E. Davies, 2nd Batt. 22nd Regt.; Capt. R. S. Shinkwin, 59th Regt.; Lieut. J. King, 70th Regt.; Sub-Lieut. J. Lavender, 63rd Regt.; Major C. M. Stockwell, 72nd Regt.; Surgeons-Major R. Spence and T. Murtah, and Surgeon D. J. O'Flynn, A.M.D. Five deaths occurred on board during the passage, four of children and one of a corporal.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, Feb. 11.—INDIAN FINANCE.—Mr. FAWCETT intimated that on an early day he would call attention to the financial statement of Sir John Strachey, at Calcutta, and move a resolution declaring it unnecessary to burden the people of Madras and Bombay with any increase of the salt duty, and especially undesirable to raise the duty for military purposes.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, Feb. 12.—INDIAN PUBLIC WORKS.—Mr. FAWCETT asked when the select committee would be nominated, which was appointed three weeks ago, to inquire into Indian public works and the best means of preventing famines in that country.—Lord G. HAMILTON hoped to be able to nominate it in the course of a day or two.

INDIAN CIVIL EXPENDITURE.—Lord G. HAMILTON promised to lay upon the table the figures upon which Sir J. Strachey based the statement in his financial speech, that a net reduction of a million and a half in the net civil expenditure had been effected in the last seven years.

A PRESENT FROM THE QUEEN.—On the 10th January Major Henderson, the special commissioner in Kashmir, presented, as Envoy of the Viceroy, to his Highness the Maharaja of Kashmir, a life-size portrait of her Majesty Queen Victoria. A large number of visitors from Salkot, Lahor and other parts of the Punjab were present, and were received and entertained by the Maharaja in his usual hospitable style. The presentation took place at the new palace, the portrait being carried in on the shoulders of men of the 9th Lancers. The correspondent of the Civil and Military Gazette tells us that, Major Henderson made an eloquent speech in Urdu, stating that the portrait was intended as a memento of the Prince of Wales's visit, a great event in the annals of the country, and expressing a hope that this signal mark of her Imperial Majesty's goodwill would serve to rivet still more closely the bonds of cordial union which already exist between the Kingdom of Kashmir and the British Government. His Highness replied briefly and to the point, saying that his poor services did not merit the high honour just conferred on him. Next followed a musical and Terschorean entertainment, after the native fashion, succeeded by fireworks. A dinner in the new palace was the last act of the day's programme. At the close of the dinner the Maharajah joined the party. Major Henderson proposed successively the healths of Her Imperial Majesty and His Highness, both which toasts were drunk with enthusiasm, in no wise lessened by the well-chosen words in which Major Henderson alluded to the service rendered to us by our host during the Mutiny. The latter cordially and graciously thanked his guests for the warmth with which they had responded to the toast proposed in his honour, and then retired, leaving them to discuss their coffee and the events of a very enjoyable day.

We are informed that the wheat and pulse crops have suffered from the frost in several districts of the Central Provinces.

SCHWEITZER'S COCOATINA

Anti-Dyspeptic Cocoa or Chocolate Powder. Guaranteed Pure Soluble Cocoa of the Finest Quality, with the excess of fat extracted.

The Faculty pronounce it "the most nutritious, perfectly digestible beverage for Breakfast, Luncheon, or Supper, and invaluable for Invalids and Children."

Highly commended by the entire Medical Press. Being without sugar, spices, or other admixture, it suits all palates, keeps better in all climates, and is four times the strength of Cocoa thickened yet weakened with Arrowroot, Starch, &c., and is IN REALITY CHEAPER than such Mixtures.

Made instantaneously with boiling water, a teaspoonful to a Breakfast Cup costing less than a Halfpenny. COCOATINA A LA VANILLE is the most delicate, digestible, Cheapest Vanilla Chocolate, and may be taken when richer Chocolate is prohibited.

In tins at 1s. 6d., 3s., &c., by Chemists and Grocers.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are, from Bombay, February 4; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, February 2; Calcutta, February 1.

FROM the Madras papers we learn that a large and enthusiastic meeting was held in Madras on the 27th January, under the presidency of the Duke of Buckingham, to thank the people of Great Britain and the Colonies for their aid in the Famine. In reply to a vote of thanks, his Grace remarked that although the storm was over, yet much danger remained—the ship had still to reach her port. The best reward for his own services was the sight of those who had been saved. He held that the highest duty which the Governor of a Presidency had to perform was to provide for the safety and welfare of the people under his charge. That had hitherto been his object, and would be so long as he remained in Madras.

IN Madras there were still 330,000 persons on the relief works, and prices were still inclined to rise slightly. According to the last statement of the Madras Famine Relief Committee, “a reaction seems to have occurred in the famine districts, and the pinch of distress is being again felt with great severity.” This seems hardly consistent with the fact that special famine officers were leaving the Presidency, and that everywhere, save in the extreme north-west, Vizagapatam and Ganjam, the prospects seemed on the whole quite favourable. There are reasons, however—as the Pioneer remarks—for prolonging the famine. “The dispensation of charity is a pleasant, and often a profitable task; and, without charging people with corruption, it is not too much to say that a famine has its charms for a great number of native officials in Madras. The Civil Service is not so well manned there as in Northern India; native deputy collectors are plentiful.”

THE latest mail news from Mysor is not encouraging. It was the general belief there that “the hope of winding up the famine must be deferred.” Fever had been very prevalent in the district; and the mortality in some parts is said to have been alarming. Crops lay unharvested and lands unploughed because whole families were prostrated by the epidemic.

BOMBAY is much excited about the Licence-tax on Trades. The Times of India tells us that “the three non-official members of the Bombay Legislative Council are opposing the local Bill. Memorials will be drawn up at public meetings held in all the great centres, and the Chambers of Commerce will assist in memorialising the Home Government.” A requisition to the Sheriff was in course of signature, asking him to convene a public meeting of the citizens of Bombay to protest against the partial operation of the new licence tax.” This means, of course, that the objects of Sir J. Strachey’s fiscal regards are very unhappy at the exclusion of the professions and the public service from the privilege of contributing to the Famine Insurance Fund. The newspapers are talking bitterly about class taxation, as if that were a new and necessarily evil principle, unknown to the taxpayers in these fortunate islands.

WE are sorry to hear of great and growing distress in Katiawar. The people were emigrating in crowds to Bombay. Some three hundred men, women and children were herded in a shed on the Port Trust property, and lived on dry grain provided by a few charitable people. Others are wandering about the streets houseless and destitute. The price of grain in Katiawar is said to be four times higher than it was in January 1874, and twice as high as it was even in January 1877. Several taluks are suffering severely from the scarcity. The labouring classes cannot, even when they find work, earn enough to buy food, and the cultivators find it very difficult to support their families and keep their plough cattle alive. The Chiefs themselves have lost so heavily by last year’s drought that they can do little to help the sufferers. In cotton alone the loss is reckoned at three millions. Mr. Peile had opened work on new roads to employ the starving and check the emigration.

WE learn that the recommendations of the Committee on the reorganisation of the Indian Marine, which sat at Simla last summer, are still in the hands of the Military Accountant-General, who has to report upon their cost to Government.

MR. C. B. SAUNDERS, having formally resigned his post, is succeeded as Chief Commissioner of Mysor by Mr. C. Aitchison, some time Foreign Secretary, and not, as was generally expected, by Mr. J. D. Gordon. According to the Pioneer Mr. Gordon’s claim “both on the score of his public services, his long and intimate connection with the province, and especially his commanding influence with the Durbar, was one that could not possibly be overlooked. Nor is there any reason to think that it was forgotten. On the contrary, there is more reason to believe that Mr. Gordon’s wishes were consulted; and that, moreover, as a man who does not contemplate the perpetual bondage of an Indian career, he loyally concerned himself, in the best interests of Mysor, by accepting the continued guardianship of its youthful ruler to be.” It appears that the new Chief Commissioner was offered his present berth on a former vacancy in the time of Lord Northbrook. Mr. A. C. Lyall, Governor-General’s Agent in Rajputana, takes Mr. Aitchison’s place in the Calcutta Foreign-office.

MR. STEWART BAYLEY will become the Viceroy’s Home Secretary next month, when Mr. Howell will take up his regular appointment as Commissioner of Jabalpur. On Mr. R. B. Chapman’s promotion to the Supreme Council, in suc cession to Sir Edward Bayley, Mr. C. E. Bernard will take the former's place as Financial Secretary.

CHINESE AMBASSADORS lately arrived in Nepal bringing a Mandarin's title and a button for Sir Ranudip-Singh, Prime Minister of Nepal. The same honour was conferred on his predecessor, Sir Jung Bahadur.

THE Indian Arms Bill is almost unanimously condemned as having been drawn up in a "scare," and founded on a gross exaggeration of the quantity of arms imported into India. The Calcutta Statesman continues its attack on the proposed Bill by printing the actual number of fire-arms of all descriptions passed into Calcutta for the last three years. The return is as follows:—

	Rifles.	Guns.	Pistols.
1876.....	280	1,536	283
1877.....	162	793	426

The steady decrease is very marked. And, says the Statesman, "if Bombay imports the same quantity as Calcutta, and Madras half as many, we shall have in round numbers 2,400 guns and rifles per annum for the whole of India, that is, about one gun for every 800 villages in the country." This certainly does not show much necessity for such stringent regulations as those proposed.

At the meeting of the Viceregal Legislative Council on Jan. 30 the Select Committee's report on the Treasure Trove Bill was presented. A Bill to assimilate certain powers of the local Governments of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh was introduced and referred to a Select Committee. The Select Committee's reports on the Seamen's Wages Bill and on the several Taxation Bills before the Council were also presented. Mr. Thornton took his seat in the Legislative Council for the first time.

WE are glad to hear that a new lighthouse is at last to be built on Cape Guardafui, the scene of so many wrecks in the last few years.

It appears that the entire amount advanced by Government to the cultivators in Madras for the purchase of seed grains was only a little over three lakhs and a-half, which shows that, as happened in Orissa, the cultivators managed to keep their reserves of seed grain notwithstanding the scarcity caused by the famine.

IN one of the famine despatches lately published Lord Lytton gives full particulars of the arrangements made by him with the Governments of Madras and Mysor. In acknowledging this Lord Salisbury pays the following tribute to the Viceroy's excellent judgment. He says:—"The arrangements appear to me to have been well calculated to secure the objects which your Excellency had in view. I have to communicate to you, on behalf of her Majesty's Government, their high appreciation of the judgment with which your policy has been conceived, and the energy with which it has been carried into execution."

MR. BETHAM, the Special Relief Officer for the Tumkur Taluk, in Mysor, has sent in a report on seven villages, one for each section of the taluk, comparing the present state of the lands, the numbers of the population, and the tenanted houses, with the figures given in former years. The Famine Commissioner in a note remarks that a few facts of this kind, accurately collected from well-chosen villages, form a far better basis for drawing broad conclusions as to the agricultural prospects of the country than cart-loads of vague surmises and generalities. The conclusion Mr. Betham arrives at is, that the population in his seven selected villages has decreased by 20 per cent., the cultivation has fallen off by 45 per cent. in area, and the crop is approximately an 8-anna crop, so that the produce on the ground is 27.5 per cent. of the ordinary produce of a good year. Again, in a good season it would appear that there are two acres cultivated per head, whereas in the present season there are only 3.6ths of an acre, and so there is just one-third of the usual produce for each person in the ground. Mr. Elliot remarks on this that "if the usual produce supplies three times as much as the usual population can consume, there is now enough food in the ground for the present population, but if the usual produce does not so greatly exceed the usual consumption, there is not enough food in the ground, and we must look forward to a prolongation of the time of distress and scarcity, and part of the population must live on imported food, and must earn money by labour to buy that food."

THE Madras Mail complains that Colonel Dickens, while sitting at the head of the Indian Public Works Department "was allowed to sit in judgment on certain reports of an Engineer officer of the professional reputation of Colonel Rundall. Not one of the projects which their responsible officer had recommended as a preventive of famine was seriously entertained by the Government of India. One is almost tempted to ask if the Government were in earnest in considering what ought to be done to prevent the repetition of a scarcity like that in Behar, or whether the object in calling for Colonel Rundall's report was merely to throw dust in the eyes of the public. We trust this document will come under the notice of the Parliamentary Committee, for its history illustrates the unsatisfactory character of Public Works administration in India. We should hope one result of the present Parliamentary inquiry will be to place that branch of administration on a much improved footing."

WE are not surprised to hear that some letters have lately been exchanged between the India Office and the Admiralty on the subject of the Royal salute in India. An Imperial salute of 101 guns may inspire a certain amount of awe-struck gratification, but it must involve a large consumption of good powder. From this correspondence we learn that the salute of 101 guns was originally meant to be reserved for the Sovereign's personal presence in India, and that upon all other ceremonial occasions, anniversaries, &c., the lesser salute of thirty-one guns should be fired. Owing apparently to some vagueness in the wording of the despatch on the subject this intention was not clearly explained. It is deemed, however, expedient that this arrangement should now be adhered to, and instructions are, it seems, to be issued accordingly.

THE last report on the Madras Public Works Department refers, amongst other things, to the progress of the Madras Harbour-works during the year 1876-77. In the summer of 1876, great but not unexpected difficulties arose; and in October Mr. Parkes had to be summoned from England. On the whole, however, the progress made seemed to Government satisfactory; though the fact remains that Mr. Parkes had to change his original plan. The Government, however, quote Mr. Bateman's opinion that the work would suffer a good deal during its construction, but would be successful in the end; and with this assurance we must wait till Sir Andrew Clarke gives his verdict.

THE Secretary of State is said to have entirely approved of the orders issued by the Government of India some months ago with respect to octroi taxation, and has called for a special report on their general operation, after the system of direct collection shall have been in force for twelve months in those provinces in which a different system had previously ruled.

THE Bill for imposing a licence-tax on trades in Bombay has been published for the general information. It provides that on the 1st of April next, and on the 1st of January in every succeeding year, each of the Collectors throughout the Presidency shall prepare a list of all the persons in his district who are liable to this tax. The names, together with the class or grade under which each is charged, and the fee to be paid for each licence, will be published in the Chowree or other public building in every village, town, or city concerned. If exception be taken to the class or grade, notification must be made within thirty days; otherwise the fees must be paid within the same period and the licence obtained in return, or the trade cannot be continued. The petitioner's objection will be deemed valid if he can succeed in proving that the sum which he has been charged exceeds two per cent. upon his annual net earnings; and, if dissatisfied with the order made by the Collector, he may send in a further appeal to the Revenue Commissioner within a further period of fifteen days. The licence will thus have nothing of the inquisitorial nature of the income-tax while the assessment and collection should be nearly as free from fraud as they apparently must be from cost and trouble. Every person holding a licence will necessarily have to produce it, on demand, to an officer specially empowered by the Collector, but no prosecutions for neglect or refund will be allowed except at the instance of the Collector.

It is now several years since the Indian Government impressed upon all the chief local authorities the great advantage of endeavouring to train the natives of India in all those handicrafts that are necessary for the construction and maintenance of railways. It was also suggested that the large workshops in railways and canals might be turned to account as schools for teaching the natives. In 1876, the Government returning to the subject, made some further suggestions for the training of natives in each province, and called for the opinions of local officers thereon. Amongst others, Mr. Prince, the Engineer-in-Chief of the Rangoon State Railway, who has had great experience in the management of workshops, gave the following opinion:—"The working classes of the North-Western Provinces and the Punjab are eminently qualified, as regards natural ability and aptitude, to be trained to be foremen mechanics, while their steadiness and sobriety make them compare advantageously with Europeans. The inhabitants of Lower Bengal do not, as far as I have been able to observe, possess any natural aptitude to this kind, and, though some good workmen are to be found in Calcutta, I do not think Bengali foremen are ever likely to be very common. At the Roorkee workshops all the foremen are natives, and, as far as their experience goes, as good as any Europeans I have met with who have had similar limited means of learning. As regards the training of such men, I fear that nothing in the shape of any system of teaching would succeed. In matters of construction very little can be done in this way, if the natural gift is not there. It appears to me that such men can only be obtained by selection in the workshop. Everything must depend on the managers of workshops, and if they can be convinced of the importance of encouraging and giving promising native workmen the opportunity of advancement there would in time be no lack of native foremen." After considering all the opinions sent in, the Government of India has now decided that "the majority of the local authorities consulted on the subject being in favour of the proposal to localise the arrangement for the training of natives for foremen mechanics, as suggested, this arrangement shall be adopted in future. It is now left to the local Governments and Administrations, and to heads of Imperial branches of the department, to give effect to the measure, to which the Government of India attaches much importance."

ACCORDING to a Bombay telegram of February 20, a very crowded and enthusiastic meeting has been held at Bombay, at which resolutions were adopted protesting against the proposed fresh taxation for meeting the famine expenditure. It was also unanimously agreed to address a petition to Parliament, praying that the new Licence-Tax Bill should not be sanctioned until the clause exempting officials and professional men had been struck out. The petition further prays for the amendment of the India Councils Act, and for the representation of the great Indian cities in the Council of the Governor-General.

The Architect gives an amusing instance of the difficulties which Indian punctilio and etiquette have thrown in the way of Mr. Prinsep's picture of the Empress of India's Proclamation at Delhi. None of the portraits of the Indian princes, for instance, are to be drawn on a smaller scale than the others, lest jealousy should be raised among the originals. "For the same reason the group is semi-circular, Lord Lytton being seated at what would be the centre of the completed circle, so that the chairs of the princes are equidistant, by the mathematical precision of the radii, from his own. Mr. Prinsep has taken this semi-circle in profile, and has put all his portraits into the further section, which faces the spectator. The perspective produces a hardly perceptible difference of scale; Oriental dignity is respected without the sacrifice of the laws of art. Lady Lytton and her little daughter stand at the Viceroy's side." It is feared that the size of the picture—which will be about some 36ft. in length—will throw some obstacles in the way of its exhibition at the Academy.

THE difficulties which have hitherto hindered the conversion of Rhea fibre or China grass into a profitable industry are the want of a good machine to loosen the fibre from the stalks, and a cheap and efficient process by which the fibre could be satisfactorily prepared. The Indian Government has lately renewed its offer of a reward for the best means of overcoming these difficulties; but their efforts seem to have been already forestalled elsewhere. The Planters' Gazette, condensing an article from a Dutch paper, informs us that a M. Roland is said to have solved the first-named difficulty by a machine which takes the fibre off the dry stalk, and so does away with the process of maceration, requiring, in fact, no preparation whatever before being subjected to the machine, and leaving but little or no refuse. The cost of this machine is stated to be 1,500 francs, it can be set in motion by one man, and is capable of cleaning about 60 kilos., or 132 lbs. of fibre per day. "It has been purchased for the French Government by M. Aubrey Lecomte, with the intention of sending it to the French settlements in Guyana, C. China, Reunion, and Guadeloupe. All these colonies have, in consequence of the inducement offered by this machine, taken up the culture of the Rameh, and it is already carried on to some extent." We also learn that a process invented by Mr. Verdure de Bethorne is said to produce a cleaned or prepared fibre "not to be equalled by any other vegetable fibre." The treatment adopted by this gentleman is described as being at present unknown.

It appears that some time ago the Indian Government forwarded to England for experiment one hundred tons each of coal and iron ore from the Warora beds in the Central Provinces. A portion was handed over to Mr. Ireland, of Manchester, who forthwith undertook a series of trials with different processes. These experiments seem to have succeeded in placing beyond question the capacity of India to supply at least a portion of her own demand for steel goods. By means of what is called "the Blair process," Mr. Ireland has succeeded in producing from the Warora minerals a pure spongy wrought iron of the first quality. Not content even with this remarkable success, he has manufactured some of the iron into a steel which experts consider equal to the best produced in England. The results of the experiment have already been laid before the India Office, together with a recommendation that the necessary plant should be forthwith sent out to India for working up the raw material on the spot.

To discuss such a question as the stability of our Indian Empire is periculosæ plenum opus aleæ. Professor Sidney Owen, however, who discusses it in the current number of the Contemporary Review, has at least the advantage of knowing something at first hand of the country about which he writes, and many of his remarks on the dangers and difficulties which beset our rule in India deserve more than a passing thought. In reviewing, for instance, the course and character of our conquests before the Mutiny, he points out that with one or two exceptions—

We were, so to speak, co-conquerors with our native allies, for the general good of India, or of a considerable portion of India. Native self-respect was thus so far saved, and a sort of mutual polite understanding assumed, that we were confederates in a quasi-national struggle. But on the last occasion the blow was aimed singly against English ascendancy, and, though aided by native allies, we emerged from the contest asserters simply of that ascendancy; chastisers, certainly, of a military revolt, but of one that took the form of a popular revolution on behalf of the resuscitated phantoms of Mogul and Mahratta sovereignty. It was a direct issue between the British and the native raj. Thenceforth there could be no mistake, no amiable fiction; we re-conquered a large part of India by the sword, and directly on our own account; by the sword we must thenceforth secure our sway everywhere. And our large increased European army is the best proof how little we ourselves believe in the sentimental phrases about a grateful people gladly submitting to our beneficent authority.

In reply to those who think that no native force could make head against an army such as we could now muster, Mr. Owen remarks that "two contingencies are possible, which, especially if coincident in their operation, might make a considerable difference to our disadvantage—the advent of a native hero, and the pressure of a great European war." A man of the stamp of Sivaji, or Haidar Ali, or Ranjit Singh might turn up to our annoyance in the midst of a European war:—

We should, in the dearth of European soldiers, be compelled to rely mostly on native levies, when least able to pay them regularly (and regularly of payment has always been our strongest security for their fidelity); many of our friends would grow cold in our support, our enemies would be encouraged to strike in against us, the natural facilities and temptations which the country and the character of the people present for looting and licence would aggravate the evil; piracy would probably revive, and threaten our commerce, perhaps, as French privateering did in Wellesley's day, for a time (and time in war, particularly in such a war, is everything) seriously injure it; and even if undefeated in the field, we might, like Aurangzib, be brought to the verge of bankruptcy, with ulterior consequences which may readily be conceived.

MR. OWEN's suggestion that "we should withdraw gradually from the great central plateau of the Peninsula, easing our finances by disposing to the native princes of territories on that upland which they would covet, and we could well afford to abandon; retaining by the convenient fiction of the Imperial title, a general suzerainty over them, and a reasonable tribute in lieu of what we conceded . . . retaining also the coast districts, the great river areas of Hindostan Proper, and the northern regions, and thus commanding the same external frontiers as at present, and the resources of some of the most productive parts of the country as well as the harbours, and the facilities for foreign commerce and internal land and water traffic along the valleys of the Ganges, the Jumna, and the Indus," can only be regarded, to use his own words, as "a political dream which is far enough from any prospect of speedy fulfilment." There is less of the dream-like in his final suggestion that we should strengthen our hold on India "by engaging in the service of the Government, both civil and military, the higher classes of natives."

WE note that candidates for the two offices of Reader in Indian Law and of Teacher of Telugu in Oxford University are requested to forward their applications with testimonials to the Vice-Chancellor before the 1st of June next. The Reader on Indian Law will hold his office for seven years, at a salary of £300 a year, besides one pound fee from each student who may attend his lectures. The Teacher of Telugu will hold office for three years on a salary of £200 a year besides a fee of £5 from each student for each term of eight weeks, or £3 if his pupils read with him only thrice a week.

WE notice with regret the death on Thursday last of Major-General Sir Andrew Waugh, late of the Bengal Engineers, and head for many years of the Indian Survey Department. He entered the Bengal Engineers in 1827 and retired on full pay in 1861. As successor to Colonel Everest in the Direction of the Great Trigonometrical Survey, Sir Andrew upheld for years the high character of the service to which he belonged. He was sixty-eight when he died.

Odds and Ends.

MR. HENRY BUCKLE, Assistant Commissioner in British Burma, has obtained two years' furlough to Europe.

MAJOR A. M. BRANDRETH, R.E., officiates as Commandant of the Thomason College, vice Major A. M. Lang, on furlough.

MR. C. AUBREY and Surgeon Major W. F. de Fabek have been appointed Captains of the Moulmein Volunteer Rifles.

THE REV. W. C. BELL, Chaplain of Dhaka, officiates as Chaplain of Dinapur; and the Rev. T. D. Gray, Chaplain of Berhampur, is appointed Chaplain of Dhaka.

DR. R. A. BARKER, who has lately returned from furlough, goes as Civil Medical Officer to Bogra; and Surgeon G. C. Roy is appointed Civil Surgeon of Birbhum.

THE report that Mr. Brandreth, Commissioner of Jalandhar, is going on furlough has been contradicted, so the changes of appointments anticipated on his departure will not take place.

MR. A. SMITH has arrived at Dhaka, and taken over charge of the office of Commissioner of the Division from Mr. Peacock.

THE report of the Bombay Drainage Commission has been prepared, and will be ready for Sir Richard Temple's consideration on his return.

SIR HENRY DALY held a darbar at Mhau on the 19th ult., at which the young Maharaja of Dewas was invested with the Order of the Star of India.

IT is reported that the Government has refused the application of Colonel Reid, Commissioner of Lucknow, to retire on a bonus, so that he will continue on in Oudh for two years longer.

IT is reported that the unusually heavy rain at the beginning of December damaged nearly one-third of the cotton crop in the Berars. The third picking is now going on.

THE latest gossip at Bombay is that important reductions are to be made in the Local Establishments, including the reduction of one of the number of Judges of the High Court.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL A. SEAGRIM goes as Deputy Judge Advocate from the Peshawar and Rawalpindi to the Mirat, Rohilkhand, and Gwalior Circle; and Lieutenant-Colonel J. M. Stewart goes to the Peshawar and Rawalpindi Circle.

MR. G. J. CAWLEY, District Superintendent of Police in the Garo Hills, goes on furlough for nine months from March 15 next.

IT is expected that there will be many claimants to the Gadi of the Akhund of Swat, the chief of whom are Mian Gul, the Akhund's eldest son, and Sher Dil Khan, Chief of the Ranazais, the most powerful tribe in Swat.

STEPS are being taken to establish an Arbitration Court in Bombay.

ANOTHER Frontier Chief, the Mulla of Kotal, died on the 4th ult. COLONEL R. Y. CHAMBERS, of the Staff Corps, is posted to the Presidency for general duty.

LIEUTENANT C. W. RAVENSHAW is appointed Third Assistant to the Agent to the Governor-General for Central India.

DEPUTY SURGEON-GENERAL R. H. PERKINS is posted to the charge of the Sagar Circle of Medical Superintendence.

MR. F. S. COLLIS has resumed charge of his office of Reporter for the Indian Law Reports in the High Court.

COLONEL F. J. C. BROWNLOW is appointed Commandant of the 7th Bengal Cavalry in the place of Colonel J. Farquharson, who retires; and Major A. R. D. Mackenzie succeeds to the command of the 3rd Bengal Cavalry.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL G. J. PASLEY succeeds to the command of the 34th Native Infantry on the retirement of Colonel R. P. Anderson, and Major W. V. FitzJacob becomes Second in Command.

MR. S. M. MOENS, Magistrate of Gorakhpur, goes on furlough for one year from the 1st of March next; and Mr. W. R. Burdett, Magistrate of Etawah, for one year, from the 15th of February.

MR. E. STACK, C.S., has obtained the Government reward of Rs. 2,000 for high proficiency in Persian; and Mr. W. Hoey, C.S., the reward of Rs. 1,000 for high proficiency in Urdu.

MR. H. E. SULLIVAN, Resident at Travancore, has been appointed to officiate as Third Member of the Board of Revenue at Madras, and Mr. J. C. Hannington acts as Resident at Travancore.

IT is expected that the Hon. Mr. Justice Cunningham will be asked to accept the office of President of the Bethune Society, in the place of Mr. R. H. Wilson, who has resigned.

MR. H. G. COWIE officiates as Deputy Accountant-General and Deputy Commissioner of Paper Currency in the Central Provinces.

MAJOR T. O. UNDERWOOD officiates as Commandant of the 4th Panjab Cavalry, vice Colonel C. J. Galby, gone on furlough, and Major B. C. B. Clifford as Second in Command.

LIEUTENANT A. C. TALBOT officiates as Assistant to the Resident at Haidarabad, and Assistant to the General Superintendent for the Suppression of Thaggi and Dakaiti in Haidarabad.

MR. H. J. MCGEORGE, Deputy Commissioner of the Upper Godavari District, has been granted furlough for a year from the 1st of March next.

FIFTEEN of the number of retirements offered to Field Officers in 1877, not having been filled up, will be held available to officers of all three Presidencies up to the 31st March next, provided they had completed twenty-eight years' service on or before the 31st of December last.

THE Alliance Bank of Simla has opened a branch at Lahor.

CAPTAIN J. B. HUTCHINSON officiates as Judicial Assistant of Jhilm.

THE REV. G. T. DENNIS, from Dinapur, succeeds the Rev. A. Ramsay as Chaplain of Kasauli.

MR. C. J. A. DUKE, Officiating Deputy Commissioner in British Burmah, has been granted furlough for two years.

ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL,

SATURDAY, February 23, 1878.

THE OCCUPATION OF QUETTA.

LORD SALISBURY's recent despatch to the Indian Government on the occupation of Khelat may be regarded as a formal defence of the frontier policy which Lord Lytton has substituted for that of Lord Lawrence. That the defence is ably conducted, we need hardly say. Whether it amounts to a justification, is a question which we cannot answer in the affirmative. So far indeed as the Khan of Khelat is concerned, it may be admitted that in occupying Quetta we have studied alike his own wishes and the general interests of his State. According to the terms of the latest treaty we might have quartered our troops within the Khan's capital. But to "hostile critics" such a step would have seemed "a menace to the independence of the Khan." But no such objection could well be offered to the place where our troops are posted, whatever may be said of its strategical drawbacks. The Khan is glad to have them where they are, and his Sirdars appear to be of the same temper. All parties in Baluchistan indeed are pleased with an arrangement "beneficial alike to British and to Baluch commercial interests." As to the military questions involved in the maintenance of an isolated outpost far away beyond India's frontier, her Majesty's Ministers "are content to accept the judgment of the experienced professional advisers who either form part or are in the service of the Government of India." If numbers count for more than special ability, it is possible that the despatch may be justified even on military grounds.

There remains, however, the political objection urged by those who maintain that the mere presence of a British force at Quetta is "likely to be offensive to the Amir of Kabul, and to arouse the jealousy of the Afghans." To our thinking, this objection requires not only "some consideration," but a good deal more than it appears to have received from the Indian Government. We are assured indeed, that her Majesty's Government—

Earnestly desire to be on friendly terms with the people of Afghanistan, and they would be reluctant to take any step which would afford just cause of resentment to either the Amir Sher Ali or his subjects. They cannot, however, admit that any such cause is offered by the presence of British troops at Quetta, any more than by the location of our garrisons at other points in the vicinity of the Afghan border; nor can they regard the groundless susceptibilities of the Afghans, assuming them to have been excited, as justifying the abandonment of an arrangement desired by all parties in the independent state of Beluchistan, and beneficial alike to British and to Beluch commercial interests. The presence of British troops at Quetta no more constitutes a menace to Afghanistan than does the British garrison at Peshawur; so long as the Amir continues on terms of amity with the British Government, and abstains from acts of aggression, he has as little to fear from the forces at one place as from those at the other.

But this way of dismissing the political objection will hardly satisfy those who raised it. Lord Salisbury does not deny that the Afghans are offended at the British advance to Quetta; he simply declines to respect their "groundless susceptibilities," and sees no difference between a British garrison posted at Quetta and a British garrison at Peshawar. No difference between troops stationed within our own frontiers and troops stationed far outside them in dangerous proximity to Kandahar! We might as well plead that the presence of Russian troops at Kandahar would no more constitute a menace to India than does a Russian garrison at Samarkhand. It may be perfectly true that we mean no harm to Sher Ali by our occupation of Quetta, and it is easy to say that he has no right to take offence thereat. But a question of this kind cannot be settled in this off-hand way. We cannot expect the Amir of Kabul to take for granted our own interpretation of an act which we in his position would certainly be quick enough to resent. If the mere rumour of a Russian advance to Merv sufficed to arouse our susceptibilities, it is absurd to twit the Afghans with taking groundless offence at the British advance to Quetta. They know that Quetta commands the road to Kandahar and Herat. They have doubtless heard of the schemes proposed by Sir H. Rawlinson, Sir H. Green, and other Englishmen of mark, for counteracting Russia's alleged designs by a forward movement across the frontier; and the history of our Indian conquests would hardly encourage them to place implicit trust in professions which have been so often belied by the practical results.

Nor are their misgivings likely to be allayed by Lord Salisbury's significant avowal that "in the event of aggression by the Afghans, a force at Quetta is favourably posted, first to resist and afterwards to punish it." It is an odd way of soothing groundless susceptibilities to utter a threat which can only strengthen the belief that we have occupied Quetta for other purposes than those of "preserving the peace of the Khan's dominions, the security of commerce in the Bolan Pass, and the plain which lies below it, and the safety of" the British Agent. In a State paper meant to conciliate Afghan jealousy, such a threat might surely have been left unspoken. And the very reasons assigned for our interference in Baluchistan might seem to "hostile critics" to justify interference in other frontier States. As the Times itself points out, Lord Lytton "holds a sort of roving commission to meddle" with his neighbours. From Baluchistan he might "go on to Afghanistan on one side, and to Persia on another." We can only hope that he will not continue the process beyond Quetta, and that when his task is finished in that quarter, the British garrison may march quietly home. Lord Salisbury begs him "carefully to abstain from erecting any buildings or adopting any measures which can be held to indicate . . . a resolution permanently to maintain British troops in that town." But the "something bitter" springs up even here, for his lordship will "not attempt to forecast the interval which must elapse before these objects can be held to be assured without the presence of a military force in Baluchistan." No reference is made in the despatch to one cause of Sher Ali's resentment; we mean his claim to suzerainty over some part of the Khan's dominions. It is possible that the claim may be unfounded; but if Sher Ali urges it in good faith, his irritation will not be lessened by a policy which seems to favour the Khan at his expense. Whether that policy be wise or no, it must certainly fail to renew that good understanding with the Afghan ruler which Lord Lytton's predecessors deemed it prudent to strive after, and which Lord Salisbury himself so earnestly desires to maintain.

THE INCREASING SALT TAX.—II.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—On Saturday last Sir John Strachey and the Viceroy dined at Calcutta their intentions regarding the increase of salt tax.

Sir John Strachey fancies that he is giving relief in the North-West Provinces (Agra, Allahabad, Oudh, and Benares) to the extent of £200,000. Now what is the fact? Instead of a decrease of 13s. 6d. a ton, there has been an increase since last of 13s. 6d. a ton in prices, owing to the improper use which has been adopted of creating a Government monopoly. In page 98 of your paper of the 4th inst. you have excited to public criticism this abuse of official power. The public were informed that the monopoly would cause a great fluctuation in the price of salt; but monopolists are unfortunately not allowed one interest to interfere with another. Government wanted for other purposes the rolling-stock which was being employed for the conveyance of its monopoly salt; so in the salt merchants, who had prepaid into Government the enormous tax of £8. 2s. a ton, could not get the salt carried, and for this reason both retail and wholesale prices rose throughout the North-West Provinces. Is it not strange that what occurred in May last should only now be made public?

Not only the railway waggons but the railroad itself belongs to Government; so here you see the evil working of a Government monopoly unprecedented in the present generation.

As for the reduction of the Cheshire salt-tax from £8. 15s. 6d. to £8. 8s. 9d. a ton, critics will be inclined to assert that this is merely a blind to satisfy the Liverpool merchants that Government is considering their interests; but why Cheshire salt should be taxed £8. 8s. 9d. a ton, while official monopoly salt is only taxed £7. 8s. 6d. a ton in the same markets, is an argument which has never been explained, and which deserves little consideration by those statesmen who pretend to study public finance. Instead of a step towards equalisation, it is in reality a shuffle towards unevenness.

Let us now view in its naked truth the cruel increase of taxation laid on the poor throughout Southern India, where famine has just been raging. When her Majesty assumed the Government of India, on the 1st of November, 1858, the salt-tax throughout the Madras Presidency was £2. 3s. 10½d. a ton, and throughout the Bombay Presidency it was only £2. 0s. 6d. a ton. But in the year following the tax was increased, and in June, 1861, the tax for the Madras Provinces was £3. 10s. 10d. a ton, and for the Bombay Provinces £3. 7s. 6d. a ton. In January, 1865, the tax was again raised in Madras to £4. 1s. a ton, and the rates of taxation at Bombay were equalised with those at Madras. In October, 1869, the tax was raised in both Presidencies to £5. 11s. 4d. a ton, and now it is again raised to £6. 15s. a ton!!! This is what is most abominably called removing a scandal, and an equalisation of duties.

The price of salt untaxed is calculated by Government itself at less than 10s. a ton; twenty years ago the tax was upwards of four times the price; now it is upwards of thirteen times the natural price of salt. The poor in Southern India after having been decimated by famine are ordered to pay salt-tax more than three times the weight of the tax in the hands of the East India Company!

How strange that the great Conservative party in England, who formerly boasted that they cared for the poor, and who are constantly twitting the Whigs with cold legality and heartlessness, should now themselves treat her Majesty's Indian subjects with cold and hypocritical cruelty, such as to justify all civilised nations in pointing to us with the finger of scorn.

Such being the simple facts as extracted from the official Blue-books, let us consider the probable consequences in three points of view.

First. The demoralisation of millions of her Majesty's subjects by the temptations held out to manufacture salt illicitly. I estimate the consumption of illicit salt in the North-West Provinces, in the Punjab, and in Oudh as about equal in quantity to the duty-paid salt.

Secondly. The demoralisation of millions of her Majesty's subjects by the shoving into common jails of multitudes of men and women and children charged with evading the salt regulations.

On this subject I beg to suggest that the numbers of all persons seized either by Excise or Customs officers or by the police, on charges of having evaded the salt laws, should be reported to Parliament, the girls and boys under eighteen years of age being separately shown; those who have been released without any trial being also shown.

The number of women seized between the ages of fourteen and forty should be recorded, as they are for ever disgraced by being thrust into a common jail. We all know how the French Revolution of 1789 was assisted by the odious French Salt-laws, but we require to be reminded of the immediate cause of Wat Tyler's insurrection in this country of England in A.D. 1381. I have hitherto been unable to find a reliable history of the salt-tax in France in the sixteenth century; the tax appears to have been first imposed in A.D. 1345, and it appears that in 1552 Henry the Second of France was forced to abolish the salt-tax in the provinces south of the Loire.

And all this mischief is to be caused for no excusable reason. The salt-tax is increased, not for the purpose of enabling Government to pay its army and civil service, not for the purpose of enabling Government to pay the interest on the National Debt; but with the object of creating a surplus, which, with our experience of Indian government under Lord Salisbury, we must believe will either be wasted or lavished ignorantly on unproductive works.

Your obedient servant, T.

THE MAIL SERVICE FROM ENGLAND TO INDIA.

The Times of India observes that there is a very general opinion in mercantile and other circles that the new contract for the conveyance of the Indian mails to and from Europe should not be necessarily connected with the contracts for the conveyance of the Chinese, Japanese and Australian mails. If the contract for carrying the Indian mails be put up for tender independently, it is considered that the competition will procure much greater speed and efficiency than have been hitherto attainable. When the whole of the Eastern services are included in one contract, competition is virtually impossible. The P. and O. Company alone can tender, and being master of the situation the terms which it proposes must be accepted. When the present contract was made the P. and O. Company and the Messageries Impériales alone tendered. The French Company was disqualified because of its foreign nationality, and the great English Company had everything its own way. What is now wanted is to secure the maximum of speed between Brindisi and Bombay, and vice versa. The Bombay Chamber of Commerce considers that the speed might be fifteen knots an hour between Alexandria and Brindisi and thirteen knots between this port and Suez. Madras would be satisfied with an average of twelve knots all the way. That would give thirteen days' steaming to Brindisi. The stoppages at Aden and Suez and Alexandria, and the ten hours one minute set down for the railway journey through Egypt, would have to be added to the thirteen days. Those stoppages and the time taken in the land transit might easily be abridged. On the whole, the journey from Bombay to Brindisi might without much difficulty be accomplished in sixteen days, or even in fifteen and a-half. The Southampton route might be abolished and all the mail bags sent via Brindisi. This would effect a saving which would admit of a larger subsidy being paid for the service between Brindisi and India.

THE NEW LAND CESS IN THE NORTH-WESTERN PROVINCES.

The Pioneer reckons that in the last eight years we have seen, roughly speaking, six hundred thousand pounds a year added by taxation to the revenue of the province, and five-sixths of this has been levied on the land. If we suppose that the remaining sixth will be wholly devoted to purposes of insurance against famine—a most liberal hypothesis—we find the land taxed to the amount of half a million a year, in order that the Provincial Administration may be able to pay its way without the usual assistance from the Imperial treasury. From this point of view the difference between the land revenue and the local cesses becomes altogether imperceptible. The one goes into the Imperial exchequer directly, the other indirectly; that is all. Fifty per cent. on the land for Imperial, and six per cent. for local purposes, amount to fifty-six per cent. as the basis of present settlements; and it is vain to pretend that the taxation of any other class of the community has increased at anything like this rate. Necessity can always be pleaded; but only despair of any other expedient should justify resort to an instrument of taxation already, perhaps, almost overworked. The fatal facility of a rateable increase of the land assessments contrasts strongly with the labour and worry of other ways of taxation; but one can hardly believe that new direct or indirect imposts are beyond the reach of financial ingenuity. The objections to a new land cess were stated plainly enough in 1871 by Sir William Muir. They are, first, the risk of trenching upon the necessary margin of agricultural profit; next, the introduction of an element of insecurity unsettling the settlements; and, lastly, the strong temptation to repeat additions to a cess which affords so convenient a mode of meeting increasing charges. The last phrase has proved prophetic; and we can now only wonder where the additions will cease. Decentralisation may be the reason one year, famine the next; but the result is always the same; and because an income-tax is objectionable, and other taxes require thinking over, the weight of every new demand falls in disproportionate measure upon the most backward section of the Indian community, and the least remunerative of Indian industries.

CANALS AND RAILWAYS.

The Times of India remarks that the majority of people who have taken the Government of India to task for neglecting to spend more money upon irrigation works as a preventive against famines have pitted these works against railways. This is a grave mistake, for canals cannot do the work of railways, and if Government were to expend a hundred millions sterling to-morrow upon irrigation works, the result would not enable them any the better to dispense with the great trunk lines of rail-roads, the cost of which is so much deplored. As very properly pointed out by Mr. Juland Danvers, water and railroads may each aid and assist each other, and both combined very materially help the Government in alleviating future famines, though they will not prevent them. It is the idea that there is, or that there can be, any antagonism between these lines of traffic which has given rise to the present controversy and has occasioned much confusion in the minds of many who are so foolish as to believe that the Government of India, either from ignorance or folly, or worse still, from an inclination to forward the interests of the iron-masters of England and those of the powerful railway companies, here by a blind preference for railways over water works, sacrificed the best interests of the country and its people over whom they are set to rule. No Viceroy could have bestowed more careful attention on this subject than did Lord Northbrook after the famine in Bengal of 1874-75; and it will be a proud satisfaction to him and those who worked with him, and to none more than Mr. Juland Danvers himself, that sad as the loss of life has been in the recent famine, it has been tenfold less than it would have been had not the railways enabled the Government to pour food into the famine districts from all parts of the empire with certainty and rapidity. The railway system of India remains a lasting monument to the wisdom, foresight, and courage of one of India's greatest Governor-Generals, the Marquis of Dalhousie, and it seems strange to us that at that precise period of the Empire's history when the complete success of the experiment—for the adoption of railways in India was not only an experiment, but one fraught with extraordinary financial risk—should have been adopted by one who has been styled the Tribune of the People, to attack its efficiency.

Bengal, Upper India, &c.

THE NORTHERN BENGAL (STATE) RAILWAY.

This line, which is destined to effect a revolution in the trade of Northern Bengal and bring to our doors the products of that part of the province, was formally opened on Friday morning by his Honour the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal. At half-past eleven o'clock on Thursday night Mr. Eden, accompanied by Sir Andrew Clarke, Sir Edwin Johnson, General Crommelin, General Nicholls, Colonel Staunton, and a number of other officials and some personal friends, left Sealdah by special train for Damukdeah, the newly-opened station of the Eastern Bengal Railway. Mr. Franklin Prestage, the Agent of the Eastern Bengal Railway Company, accompanied the Lieutenant-Governor and party; and the arrangements made for the comfort and convenience of the visitors were excellent. Arriving at Damukdeah at six o'clock on Friday morning, his Honour and party crossed the Ganges in the steamer Jaboona, and in the course of a little more than half-an-hour arrived safely at Sara, the terminal station of the new railway, which is about five miles distant from Damukdeah, on the opposite bank. The Lieutenant-Governor was here met by Lord Ulick Browne, Commissioner of the Rajshahye Division, and the other officials of the district. The river bank and the road to the station were very neatly decorated, and a gorgeous shamiana was erected on one side, where his Honour stayed a few minutes during which time the various officials and the principal zemindars of the district of Pubna were introduced. The special train left the station at a little after seven o'clock, and reached Atrai at ten a.m. Mr. Eden and party here stopped for breakfast, and at the conclusion of the morning meal his Honour performed the ceremony of driving the last rivet through the bridge over the river Atrai. The line had previously to this been open from Sara to Atrai, but the absence of a bridge had retarded communication with Saidpur, from which station trains had been running to Jalpiguri regularly. The formality of driving the last rivet was gone through with as little ceremony as possible, and the special train did the more practical work of passing over the bridge and reaching Saidpur at about three o'clock in the afternoon. The country between Sara and Saidpur was one vast mass of cultivated tracts. Here and there, indeed, was a tope of trees, and occasionally an uncultivated patch met the eye; but it was impossible not to notice that these districts, so far as their natural products are concerned, are some of the richest in Bengal, and it would be difficult to over-estimate the value which this new railway will be to them. Up to this, notwithstanding the partial construction of the lines, the greater portion of the exports from this quarter of the Empire have found their way to other markets by means of the old-fashioned boats; and when this is said some idea may be formed of the advantages which the people will derive from the now completed line. It is almost useless to mention here the very great convenience which this railway will afford to the European population, for a glance at the map will show that it places Darjiling within twenty-four hours' journey from Calcutta, the only break in this journey being the crossing of the Ganges at Damukdeah. On arriving at Saidpur, the Lieutenant Governor was met by the principal officials of the railway, and after lunch his Honour held a reception of the zemindars of the Rangpur district. On this occasion an address signed by more than a dozen leading zemindars of the district was presented to the Lieutenant-Governor. In reply, Mr. Eden thanked the zemindars for the address, and said he entirely agreed with them as to the beneficial results which the railway would ensure. There could be no doubt, his Honour said, that an easy means of communication being opened, the products of some of the richest districts of Bengal would soon find their way to the seaports, and thus materially improve the condition of the country. In saying this, the Lieutenant-Governor hoped that the zemindars would not then expect too large and sudden an increase of rent from the rayats, whom it would be far more advantageous to keep in a rich and prosperous condition; on the other hand, he trusted that, with an increased means of payment of rent, the rayats would promptly recognise their obligation and pay their dues without demur. With regard to the sanitation of Rangpur, Mr. Eden expressed his gratification at the interest which had been shown for the principal town of the district, and instanced the action taken by the Government in this matter as a practical illustration of the fact that Government was always willing to help them if they began by helping themselves.—Englishman, Jan. 25.

STATION TALK.

LAHOR, Jan. 20.—With the late Dewan Pundit Manphul, c.s.i., who died on Jan. 2, conversation must have been a pleasure. In the estimation of the general public the name of this estimable man and valuable public servant is associated with the dawn of our knowledge of Central Asia, as, after he had compiled a valuable account of the country near Ladakh and Yarkand, he was sent to Bokhara to collect information as to Russian progress. But Pundit Manphul was for all his life intimately associated with the Government of the Province, and was a mine of information as to its history and inner life. The Anjumani Punjab among its many projects cherishes the establishment of a scholarship in the University which shall bear his name. I have not courage to face the gigantic programme for an educational congress which it has put forth. It sweeps over the whole range of knowledge, and proposes to discuss the most difficult questions, with an air of calm confidence that takes one's breath away. As I write, the Punjab Gazette has come in, containing a catalogue of books registered during the quarter ended June. Among the usual exploits of Hanuman and Krishna; the weary old loves of Leila and Mujnu, Ranjha and the Princess Hir, Bugga Mal and Bishnu, Sohni and Mahinwal; Mohammedan Prayers and Confessions, are two accounts of the Delhi Imperial Assemblage, some important translations of mathematical works, and a little treatise by a college student of Lahor, called an "Epitome of the History of England," which the Curator of the book depot thinks is intended "to serve perhaps the purpose of cramming." There is also the second edition of a song in praise of the police arrangements of Mr. Warburton, District Superintendent of Police, Ludhiana. There is also a new little tract, apparently by a Brahmin, examining the religion professed by Guru Nanak, which the author believes to have been the same as that taught in the Vedas and Shastras. The Lahor paper not long since said that the Sikhs were increasing in numbers, but I believe, on the contrary, that comparatively few converts are made, and that the followers of Guru Nanak will at no very distant period be absorbed into Hinduism pure and simple. But although the teaching of Guru Nanak may be demonstrated not to clash very violently with the Vedas and the Shastras, it will require a considerable amount of fine drawing to make out the identity of the two creeds in practice. But the Brahmins were ever an ingenious race, and they are sure to manage it in the end.—Pioneer Correspondent.

THE NAGA EXPEDITION.—(CAMP SAMAGUTING, Jan. 3.)—My last letter was from Borpathar five or six days ago, when on the eve of marching for Dinapore to reopen communication with this place. When a few miles from Borpathar, we met the dak, escorted by twenty men of the Naga Hills police. These were the first men who had come in from the Samaguting direction for nine or ten days. They reported having seen no Nagas on the road; but this did not mean they were not there, as a Naga, if he does not wish to be seen, generally takes very good care that you cannot see him, although he may be within a few yards of you in the jungle. That night we camped at Hurriajan, on the banks of the Dhunsiri. The place consisted merely of a very small clearing in the forest, a rude stockade, and a small rest-house. At each of these places, as a rule, there are dak runners and chowkidars. All of them, however, as I said before, had bolted through fear of the Nagas. Close to Hurriajan a Naga path comes out on the road, and it was here that a few men of the Naga Hills police came across a prowling party of Nagas, and wounded one. It was also at this rest-house that some Nagas attempted to make a night attack on a small party escorting the dak, but were unsuccessful, on account of the party being too wide awake for them. It is probably at Hurriajan that my headquarters will be for the next few weeks, while superintending the dak arrangements. Just before reaching this place my attention was drawn to what I took to be a large bird flying to a tree. On reaching the tree, however, the brute fixed its claws into the trunk and began hopping up. Of course I had a shot at him at once, and down he came, half-flying like a wounded bird. It turned out to be a veritable flying squirrel; length about two feet, breadth ditto, colour grey, tail long, and black towards the end. Stretching him, from the fore to the hind feet, when extended, was a curious kind of web covered with hair, whilst from the fore feet a small bone seemed to protrude outwards, and served the purpose of stretching out the web aforesaid. The general appearance of the animal including head, &c., was certainly that of the squirrel. I had never seen an animal of the kind, neither had most of my men, for the greater part dwellers in the forest and jungle.—Times of India Correspondent.

GOA.—His Grace the Archbishop of Goa, after a week's stay in Calcutta, left on Feb. 2, on a tour of inspection of the Portuguese missions in Eastern Bengal.

NATIVES FOR THE CIVIL SERVICE.—The Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal has applied to the Government of India for permission to nominate the minor brother of the Maharajah of Durbhunga to the Covenanted Civil Service.

THE PARCEL POST.—A protest against the introduction into this country of the "value payable" parcels post system in regard to English packets has been submitted to the Director-General of Post-offices by the Calcutta Trades Association.

A NEW NATIVE JOURNAL.—A new Anglo-Urdu weekly newspaper is to be published at Hyderabad, under the orders of Sir Richard Meade, British Resident, from the 1st inst. It is the fourth paper issued in Hyderabad under the permission of the Resident.

MAJOR BRIND.—We learn that Major Brind is slowly recovering from his accident at Simla; he is still, however, quite helpless, recognising his friends at times, and at others appearing quite unconscious, while he has not the smallest recollection of the accident that brought him to this pass.

LADAKH.—News from Ladakh has been received up to the 20th of December. It appears that the delay in the arrival of the caravan this year has been due to the road being closed by Niaz Beg, the rebel governor of Khoten. This rebellion against his authority has been put down by the young Ameer, and the merchants have received permission to proceed to India. Among them is Mr. Dalgleish, of the Central Asian Trading Company, who was expected in a few days. A messenger, with letters from the Ameer to the Viceroy, is said to have arrived.—Englishman.

KASHMIR.—The attempt to grow hops in Kashmir has not, we are told, been a success this year. The condition of the people in Kashmir generally also appears to be bad. A letter from Dubgaon, dated the 28th December, to the Labor paper, states that the weather there has been more severe than the oldest inhabitant can recollect. Snow, rain and sleet have been falling continually, and there has not been twelve hours' sunshine, so the writer of the letter says, for six weeks. A great part of the rice and maize crops has been destroyed, and a large number of ponies and cattle actually starved to death. The zemindars complain also that their sheep are dying, owing to the scarcity of food.

ROBBERY AT A THEATRE.—There was great consternation (says the Statesman) at the Calcutta Opera House on Tuesday night after the performance was over and all the visitors had departed. This was occasioned by Signor Massa having discovered that the man in charge of the Box-office had decamped with all the money in hand, amounting to nearly Rs. 1,200. Search was made everywhere, but Mr. Ayres, the missing man, was nowhere to be found. The police were very busy searching all Wednesday, but the only clue they are said to have obtained is that somebody corresponding with the description given had been seen at one of the railway stations. Signor Massa is doing his best to help in tracing the runaway.

EXCISE ADMINISTRATION.—A native officer, Babu Obhoy Chandra Das, has been deputed, according to the Englishman, to inquire into the details of excise administration in certain districts. He is first to proceed to Jessor a district which, in excise revenue, has been unfavourably compared with Burdwan. Equal in population, the former yields less than half the excise revenue of the latter. The difference amounts to more than three-fourths of a lakh, a sum well worth looking after in these hard times. Other districts, which disclose a similar backwardness in excise revenue, are also to be taken in hand. The attention of the officer deputed is specially directed to the probability that the irregular and illicit use of excisable articles is connived at, and even shared in, by the subordinate officials whose duty it is to put down such abuses.

LIEUTENANT GILL, R.E.—We have heard nothing lately of Lieutenant Gill, though his overland journey across China and Burmah should, when the details are published, prove a sensation second only to Stanley's march across Africa. But even in the middle of China he can scarcely have been the hero of stranger adventures than befell him in his youth; and as his story is not known in India it is worth repeating:—Lieutenant Gill was standing one afternoon at the door of a club in Pall Mall when he saw an old gentleman chasing a hat down the windy street. He at once ran after the hat, and restored it, to the old gentleman's vast delight. The old gentleman asked his name. "Gill." "By Jove, that's my name too! How do you spell yours?" As they both spelt it the same way, the old gentleman asked him to dinner. "Don't mind if I do," said Lieutenant Gill, and as the old gentleman lived on the line to Waltham, where the lieutenant was quartered, the acquaintance was often renewed. The upshot of all this was that the old gentleman died, and left every penny he possessed to the man who had been courteous enough to chase an old gentleman's hat. The fortune was a big one, and included a gin distillery in Hackney, worth seven thousand pounds a year. In a month or two the last general elections came on, and the people of North London were astonished to see every wall placarded—"Lieutenant Gill, R.E., for Hackney." Hackney is an ultra Liberal borough, and it was a little startling to see a young fellow who had only lately joined the Engineers contesting it in the Conservative interest, against two such well-known and popular candidates as Fawcett and Reade. The result was inevitable. Lieutenant Gill was defeated, but he had money and pluck, and he succeeded in finding a flaw in the electioneering arrangements, and compelled the issue of a writ for a new election. He was defeated again, but this time after a comparatively close contest, and after earning the gratitude of the Conservative party, and the promises of the wire-pullers. He then looked about for some other way in which his fortune and services might be useful to the country. Eventually he obtained leave on full pay, so as to keep his rank, while travelling and exploring at his own cost. After Mr. Margary's death he determined to complete the exploration of the Chinese and Burmah frontier districts in which the Government had failed. We heard some months ago that he had been successful, and we believe his experiences will soon be published. A large fortune is not often inherited under such strange circumstances, nor is it often used with such intelligence and pluck. But after all, the men who will run down from their club steps to pick up a stranger's hat and the men who cross China are almost equally rare.—Times of India.

Madras.

PONDICHERY.—The French war steamer Bourayant, from Pondicherry, anchored in the Madras roads on the 4th ult.

EMIGRANTS FOR NATAL.—Another batch of 400 emigrants, both male and female, will embark on the ship Malabar, at Madras, for Port Natal.

RANGOON.—Efforts are being made to assist the Madras immigrants in Rangoon, who have lately been arriving in large numbers, to settle down as cultivators in the districts of British Burmah.

HAI DARABAD.—Dr. Window, Madras Army, at present attached to the Haidarabad Residency, has induced Sir Salar Jung to sanction a diplomaed midwife for the City Hospital. She is a Madras East Indian, well known at Bombay and Haidarabad.

CHINCHONA.—The Burmah Forest Department have been successful in securing over one hundred viss of Chinchona bark from their plantation at Tounghoo. Should the bark be pronounced good and sell readily, it will be an encouragement to the department, and those in charge, to continue their exertions.

FAMINE SUBSCRIPTIONS OF COOLIES.—The second subscription list of the Madras Famine Committee in the Mauritius amounts to nearly Rs. 9,000. Nearly half of this large sum was contributed by Indian coolies employed on the sugar estates in Mauritius—a fact that says something for Lord Salisbury's scheme of education.

MR. RICE.—We understand that (on the recommendation of the Government of Madras) the Secretary of State has approved of the suspension of Mr. Rice, of the Civil Service, from all employment for a period of six months, and at the expiration of that period, of his appointment as an assistant to a Collector. Mr. Rice's offence consisted in the writing of an insulting letter to the Collector of Koinbator.

THE KOTAGHERY MASSACRE.—We (Pioneer) learn that the Badagas sentenced to penal servitude for life for their share in the crime known as the Kotagheri massacre have returned from the Andamans, whither they had been sent to undergo their punishment. The climate of the Andamans did not agree with the health of these poor fellows, and the Government, in its tender solicitude, has sent them back to the Hills, where they will enjoy the comforts of their native air and the occasional visits of their friends and relatives. The Kotagheri massacre was a most atrocious crime; how far the present measure of punishment is calculated to deter the natives from committing similar crimes, in their ignorance and fanaticism, is a question but too easy to answer.

an itinerant egg-dealer, of whom he purchased an egg for an anna, and breaking it, produced a sovereign from inside, tapping a second egg with equal apparent good luck. The astonished dealer, vehemently refusing an offer of an anna a-piece for the lot, was seen to retire to the nearest tree, and there break by turn every egg in his basket, with what result need not be told." When Dr. Lynn was in Bombay the natives cherished a suspicion that he was a near connection of the Shaitan. Had the trick described by the correspondent been performed in Bombay, that suspicion would have become an indisputable fact.

RAILWAY BRIDGES.—Further progress has been made in the construction of the larger bridges on the South India Railway line between Madras and Villapooram, in South Arcot. The iron works of the Panar bridge have been completed and opened for traffic. The last six spans were completed with very great difficulty, owing to the heavy rains and floods experienced in the last few weeks. Arrangements are being made by the authorities of the South India Railway to begin with the Pondicherry extension line as early as possible; all the plans and specifications are ready, and as soon as certain preliminaries have been arranged, the work will be taken in hand. All the works on the South India Railway line have suffered severely from the recent floods, and it will therefore be necessary to carry out all repairs with the greatest efficiency.

KADAPAH.—The Collector of Kadapah, Mr. Price, is of opinion that the people in his Collectorate are recovering very rapidly from the effects of the famine. He says:—"The young adults of both sexes have put on flesh again in a most astonishingly rapid manner, but the young girls and boys still show evident signs of what they have gone through. The children are again growing plump. One can hardly realise that but a brief period since misery and emaciation were everywhere rife." Fever is, however, very prevalent in some of the talooks. It is said to be invariably fatal to natives, and is worse than either the famine or cholera. The Collector says that a very intelligent Bengal assistant surgeon was sent into one of the talooks, but could make nothing of the fever. The major portion of the people refused to have anything to say to him or his medicines. The common native idea is that quinine induces excessive biliousness and so kills. The assistant-surgeon is of opinion that the fever is of a highly malarious type.

COAL BORING IN THE GODAVERY DISTRICT.—The coal boring operations in the Godavery district, to carry out which the Government some time ago detailed a special officer of the Public Works Department, were continued up to June, 1876, when the approach of the rains brought the works to a close. Pits were dug in the position selected by the Geographical Department, but without success, and the Government determined to postpone further attempts, leaving for future consideration the question of sinking a shaft at the spot where in 1875 a seam of scaly coal was met with. As further search for coal in the Godavery district has been almost abandoned, and the Superintendent of the Geological Survey in India has voted against it being made in the Kistna district, the probabilities are that in the two districts referred to the search for coal will be given up as a bad speculation, unless there are men like Colonel Applegath who will persist in stating that coal is to be found, but decline to carry out operations and satisfy the public mind on this score. Coal is to be found in parts of Bengal, and companies have been formed there which work the mines with success. The coal fields of Raingunge and Warrora have been worked with fair success, but in this presidency, except in Upper Godavery, all attempts have been unsuccessful, although the Government offered rewards if a certain quantity was obtained and submitted to test in any part of the presidency. The Government originally set apart Rs. 13,500 in the budget for coal boring operations in the Godavery district; about eight thousand rupees have been in all expended, but with little or no benefit.—Madras Standard.

STATION TALK.

INDOR, Jan. 19.—A Durbar was held here this day, with much éclat, for the purpose of investing his Highness the Maharajah of Dhar with the insignia of a Knight Commander of the Star of India, and Bukshee Khooman Singh (Commander-in-Chief of his Highness Holkar's Forces), and Huzrut Noor Khan (the Kamdar of Jowra) with Companionships of the same Order. Also to present with due ceremony, to his Highness the Maharajah Holkar, a portrait of her Majesty the Empress of India. The Durbar was held in a large shamiana pitched in the garden to the North of the Residency. Detachments of the Central India Horse, Bhopal Battalion, and 23rd Regiment N.I. lined the road from the bazaar to the Flag-staff. A detachment of the 17th Regiment formed a guard of honour from the entrance gate to the tent. The band was placed inside the garden, whilst a detachment of R.H.A. were located about 300 yards distant. His Highness the Rajah of Dewas, junior branch, came to the Durbar at 11.45 A.M., under a salute of fifteen guns. After him came the Rajah of Dewas, senior branch, with the same salute. These two Princes were escorted to their seats by Capt. Barr, 1st Assistant Agent. His Highness the Maharajah of Dhar came at 11.50 A.M., with the same salute, and was shown into the robing tent. Huzrut Noor Khan and Bukshee Khooman Singh came next, and were shown into the same tent. Last of all came his Highness the Maharajah Holkar, with his two sons, his Prime Minister, and other courtiers, under a salute of twenty-one guns, and after his taking the seat the Durbar was declared open by Lieutenant-General Sir H. D. Daly, K.C.B., who explained, in a short speech, the purpose for which the Durbar was convened. His Highness the Maharajah of Dhar was then brought from the robing tent by Colonel Kincaid; and General Daly, after telling his Highness that he was ordered by his Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General of India to invest his Highness for his loyal services to the British Government with the Insignia of Knight Commander of the Star of India, pinned the Star on his breast. His Highness thanked the Agent Governor-General in a few appropriate words. The purport of General Daly's speech was then read in Urdu to his Highness by Captain F. H. Maitland, Second Assistant Agent, with characteristic ease and fluency. Similar ceremonies were gone through in investing Buxee Khooman Singh, and Huzrut Noor Khan as Companions of the Star of India. After the investiture ceremony was over, General Daly rose, and addressing the Maharajahs, Major-General Forbes, Commanding at Mhow, and the ladies and gentlemen present, said that he had received orders from Government to present, without the omission of any ceremony due to the occasion, the portrait of her Majesty the Empress of India to his Highness Maharajah Holkar. That it was the portrait of a Queen whose name was held in reverence and esteem even in the proudest Courts of Europe. That his Highness was one of the four great Princes who had been thus honoured, and that the successive Holkars would find in this token a strengthening bond of union between them and the British Government, which would defy the shocks of wars and revolutions. The band played "God Save the Queen" as the General finished, and a Royal salute of 101 guns was fired. After this a photograph of the Durbar was taken by a local artist, by name Din Dyal, and the Durbar dissolved.—Times of India Correspondent.

THE PARSEES AND THE PARIS EXHIBITION.—A number of Parsees are preparing to proceed to Europe, with the object of being present at the opening of the Paris Exhibition in April next.

COTTON MILLS.—There is a rod in pickle for the Bombay mills. His Excellency the Governor wants to know why they do not consume their own smoke, according to the law made and provided. The Municipal Commissioner has been called upon to report officially upon this subject.

HEAD QUARTERS OF THE ARMY.—We—Times of India—are informed that the Head Quarters of the Bombay Army are to be established at Matheran during the hot weather. The Chowk Hotel has, we hear, been rented for Rs. 3,000, and the Commander-in-Chief will leave Bombay on the 15th.

ACCIDENT TO LIEUTENANT PRICHARD.—At the Bellary garrison races, held Jan. 31, Lieut. Prichard, 43rd Regiment, was thrown from his pony, and falling on his head sustained a scalp wound and severe internal injuries. He was picked up insensible, and is now lying in a precarious state.

DEPARTURE OF OFFICIALS.—The Honourable Mr. Justice Kemball, Mr. R. V. Hearn, the Government Solicitor and Public Prosecutor, Mr. Charles E. Fox, Master in Equity to the Bombay High Court, and Mr. J. Elphinstone, C.S., Collector and Magistrate at Rutnagherry, left for Bombay by the mail steamer of the 17th inst. Mr. Gonne, Secretary to Government in the Political Department, arrived here by the last mail steamer. He will take over charge of his office shortly from Mr. Jardine, who has been acting for him, and the latter gentleman will proceed to Rangoon to take up the Judicial Commissionership of British Burmah, to which he was recently appointed.

MILITARY.—The Squadron of cavalry which left Rajkot for Disa on the 21st has been ordered to stand fast at Koodwa, the first stage from Rajkot, owing to intelligence having been received at that station of the outbreak of cholera at Wudwan, which is on the route selected. The route usually taken by troops from Rajkot to Disa is that laid down in the Route-Book compiled by the Quartermaster General's Department, which passes through Patun, Dupada, Hulwad, Drangdra, Myka, &c., and which is also some miles shorter than that via Wudwan, Veerunggaum, &c. If, therefore, this route be considered unsafe, the old one ought to be used, and the inconvenience and expense that will be caused by detention at Koodwa or return to Rajkot will thus be avoided.—Times of India, Jan. 28.

SURAT.—The Surat correspondent of the Bombay Samachar says:—"Cholera is now making fearful ravages in the town. A number of bodies have been observed floating near the banks of the river close to the burning-ground of the Hindus. The authorities here have been so neglectful as to consider this visitation as an ordinary occurrence. The germs of the disease are every day disseminated over a wider extent, and about three or four deaths are registered every day. The outbreak of the disease is attributed to the people being allowed to wash their dirty linen in the river from which the inhabitants draw their drinking supply. It is also attributed to the people living on putrid vegetables on account of the famine. The local authorities do not prevent the people from washing in the river, which appears to be the fruitful source of the malady now so widely prevailing in the town."

KATIWAR.—It is with very much gratification we have received the announcement of Mr. Jardine's appointment as Commissioner of British Burmah, in which case his locum tenens, Mr. E. T. Candy, is likely to be confirmed as Judicial Assistant. During Mr. Candy's tenure of office in this province, the popular opinion held of him is unchanged, his thorough conscientiousness in the discharge of his (sometimes disagreeable) duties, his earnest desire to deal out justice to all alike, without reference to rank, position, creed or colour, his experience of the ways and habits of the people in the province, and his kindheartedness, though at times assuming a stern exterior, has impressed him favourably in the minds of everyone having business transactions with him, so that his confirmation in the appointment will effect a public good, which it is quite certain the Governor will not deny us.—Times of India Correspondent.

THE GOVERNOR.—H.E. the Governor arrived at the Byculla Railway Station by yesterday morning's Jubbulpur mail, accompanied by Mr. Buckland, his Private Secretary, Dr. Waters, and Captain Anderson, A.D.C. Sir Richard Temple left Calcutta on the 23rd, but broke his journey at Fyzabad in Oudh, where he visited the Royal tombs and gardens, and again at Jounpore, to see some remarkable ruins of mosques which are said to be very ancient. From Mogul Serai the party came on direct to Bombay. His Excellency was not officially received, but Mr. Ravenscroft and Mr. Jardine, Secretaries to Government, General Aitchison, Commanding the Garrison, Sir Frank Souter, Commissioner of Police, and the Deputy Commissioner, Mr. Vincent, Captain Rivett-Carnac, Military Secretary to his Excellency, Captain Babington, Superintendent of Railway Police, and Lieut. Frith, A.D.C., were in waiting at the station; and a Chief of Kattywar and the Chief of Jeth, near Beejore, with their attendants, were also present. His Excellency after some conversation on the platform drove to Government House, Malabar Point, escorted by a dozen Lancers. Mr. Platt, the Traffic Superintendent of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway, accompanied the train in to Bombay, which arrived here an hour late.—Times of India, Jan. 28.

MUSKETRY.—The C. in C. of the Bombay army, in giving directions for musketry practice and field firing to be carried out in the present year, notices as follows:—The troops engaged in musketry practice should, where practicable, be formed into brigades or divisions; and the various regiments or detachments should be required to parade as strong as possible. Ammunition to the extent of twenty rounds per man in the Native infantry and ten in the cavalry will generally be found available, owing to unavoidable casualties, and this amount should be expended when possible. The reports for 1877-78 should show the distances up to which the fire of the Martini-Henry had been found effective against troops in positions such as they might be expected to occupy in actual war. The distances from the enemy at which fire may be opened will depend on the nature of the ground, and the skill of the men, but 1,800 yards may be considered the utmost range of the Martini-Henry rifle, and 1,200 of the Snider. In the third or final stage the attacking party should not advance closer than about 200 yards from the enemy's skirmishing line. The C. in C. would impress upon officers commanding parades for field firing the great importance of the practice being conducted in an intelligent manner, and as far as possible under the conditions of actual war. The results of the firing should be recorded by stages, and all hurried and objectless fire prohibited, as well as any undue saving of ammunition for expenditure at close ranges, in order to make a high percentage of hits, as this is not so essential a part of the exercise as the giving of the men the best practical idea of what would be experienced on service.

CONSULAR.—The recognition by the Govt. of India of the appointment of Mons. H. de Closets as Vice-Consul for France at Madras has been confd. by H.M.'s Govt. The recognition by the Govt. of India of the appointment of Mr. A. Delageniere as acting Vice-Consular agent for France at Aden has been confirmed by H.M.'s Govt.

RETIREMENTS OF OFFICERS OF THE STAFF CORPS.

Jan. 1.—With the sanction of her Majesty's Government, the Right Hon. the Governor-General in Council is pleased to notify that:—

1. During the year 1878 ninety officers of the Staff Corps and Cavalry and Infantry of the Indian army will be permitted to retire from the service, receiving, in addition to the pension to which they may be entitled by length of service, under existing regulations, not exceeding the full-pay pension of a Colonel (£456. 5s. per annum), an annuity representing the estimated value of their prospective claim to the Colonel's allowance, or its capitalised value, as they may prefer.

2. This offer is restricted to substantive Lieutenant-Colonels who shall have completed twenty-eight years' service from the date of first commission, on or before the date from which they apply to retire, who may either, 1st, have been appointed to one of the Staff Corps on or before the 12th September, 1866, and can claim the Colonel's allowance under the provisions of G.O. No. 808, of the 26th September, 1866; or 2ndly, may be entitled, under G.O.G.G. of the 12th September, 1862, to the Colonel's allowance after twelve years' service in the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel.

3. The number allowed to retire under these conditions will be distributed as follows:—For Bengal, 40; for Madras, 30; for Bombay, 20; total, 90. In the event of the whole of the retirements allotted to a particular Presidency not being taken up in that Presidency, those remaining will be distributed in such manner as may be determined by the Government of India.

4. Applications to retire will be considered and disposed of successively according to priority of proposed dates of retirements until the number of retirements allotted to the service shall have been accomplished, when retirements under this order will cease for the year. In the event of its becoming necessary to select one from among two or three applicants for retirement on the same day, preference will be given according to seniority from the date of first Commission.

5. Officers wishing to retire under the terms of this order must, whether in or out of India, submit their applications to the office of the Adjutant-General of their respective Presidencies, naming such prospective dates for their retirements as will admit of the receipt of their applications by the Adjutant-General on or before the date named, such date not to be earlier than the 1st April, 1878.

6. Officers whose applications are accepted will be gazetted out from the dates named by themselves, but will continue to perform their duties and receive the pay and allowances of their positions until officially informed of their removal from the effective list, either by direct communication, or by publication of the Gazette at the station at which they may be serving.

7. Officers retiring under this arrangement will forego both the good service pension, if they are in receipt thereof, and all claim to bonus compensation under the terms of the despatch of the 8th of August, 1866, [G. O. No. 808 of 26th September, 1866.] No. 160.

8. Applicants to retire must state—

1st. Their rank and service.

2nd. Their age (supported by certificate of birth, or, in its absence, by a formal declaration).

3rd. Whether they wish to receive commutation for their prospective allowances in the shape of an annuity, or to capitalise its value. Officers who desire to receive the capitalised value of the annuity must attach to their applications a certificate in the form given in Appendix A. In the case of officers retiring out of India, the health certificate required will be called for and furnished under instructions from the India-office in London.

4th. Whether they desire to receive payment, wholly, or in part, in India, or in England.

9. The table given in Appendix B shows the rates at which the 'expectation of the Colonel's allowance will be calculated in carrying this order into effect in the case of officers of various ages and service.

10. For the purpose of arriving at the amount payable in each case, whether as an annuity or in a single payment, officers' ages will be calculated from their birthday next succeeding the date from which they propose to retire and the number of years they have to serve before becoming entitled to the Colonel's allowance will be calculated from the date of the proposed retirement. When the period to serve contains a fraction of a year, the fraction, if it be six months or under six months, will be excluded altogether; if it exceeds six months it will be reckoned as a complete year.

11. Payments of the capitalised value of the annuity made in India under this order will be at the rate of 1s. 10½d. for the rupee.

12. Officers who elect to receive an annuity in preference to the capital sum, will not, after their retirements have appeared in the Gazette, be allowed to capitalise such annuity under the provisions of this order; and it is to be understood that no separate applications of individual officers to retire after the present retirements have been allotted will be entertained on the basis of this order.

13. Officers of the half-pay list of the Staff Corps will be permitted, if disposed to retire from the service, to avail themselves of this scheme of retirement, provided they are eligible thereto by the fulfilment, previously to their transfer to the half-pay list, of all the conditions required. The time passed by an officer on the half-pay list of the Staff Corps will not count towards the twelve years in the grade of Lieutenant-Colonel required to qualify for promotion to the Colonel's allowance.

14. No application from officers to cancel their retirement, or to change the date of such retirement, will be entertained after it has been announced in the Official Gazette of the Presidency to which they belong.

SMALL-POX having been very prevalent in the State of Loharu, the Nawab has introduced compulsory vaccination, and ordered that all children under ten years of age are to be at once vaccinated.

The latest report on the weather and crops in the North-Western Provinces says:—"Rain reported in most districts; prospects good, but prices still high."

TEMPORARY communication has been restored over the Palar River on the South Indian Railway, and through traffic for both goods and passengers was resumed on the 15th ult.

In the months of October, November, and December last the quantity of cotton exported from India was 231,985 cwt., valued at Rs. 62,67,894, as compared with 341,111 cwt., valued at Rs. 82,47,938, exported in the corresponding period of last year.

PROMOTION IN THE INDIAN ARMY.

(From Last Night's Gazette.)

Victoria, by the grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Queen, Defender of the Faith, Empress of India.

Whereas it has been represented to us that it is expedient to make further regulations for governing the promotion in the army of the officers of our Indian forces, our will and pleasure is that the following regulations be established, and be the sole regulations under which the promotion in the army of such officers shall be effected, viz.:—

REGULATIONS.

1. A captain may attain the rank of major (a.) By regimental seniority; (b.) By twenty years' service in the army in the case of officers whose appointment to our Indian forces was made subject to the conditions prescribed in the General Order of our Governor-General of India in Council, dated the 9th of December, 1859, No. 1,637; (c.) By brevet, after twenty years' service in the army, so long as there remain any captains on the list of cavalry and infantry in our Indian forces; (d.) By brevet, in succession to a vacancy on the establishment of General officers, provided such vacancy occur before the 1st October, 1880, or thereafter for so long as there remain any captains on the list of cavalry and infantry who are not subject to the conditions prescribed in the General Order of our Governor-General of India in Council, dated the 9th of December, 1859, No. 1,637; (e.) By brevet, for distinguished service in the field; (f.) By brevet, for distinguished service of an exceptional nature other than in the field.

2. A major may attain the rank of lieutenant-colonel—(a.) By regimental seniority; (b.) By twenty-six years' service in the army in the case of officers whose appointment to our Indian forces was made subject to the conditions prescribed in the General Order of our Governor-General of India in Council, dated Dec. 9, 1859, No. 1,637; (c.) By brevet, after twenty-six years' service in the army, so long as there remain any majors on the list of cavalry and infantry in our Indian forces; (d.) By brevet, in succession to a vacancy on the establishment of general officers, provided such vacancy occur before Oct. 1, 1880, or thereafter for so long as there remain any majors on the list of cavalry and infantry who are not subject to the conditions prescribed in the General Order of our Governor-General of India in Council, dated Dec. 9, 1859, No. 1,637; (e.) By brevet, for distinguished service in the field; (f.) By brevet, for distinguished service of an exceptional nature other than in the field.

3. A lieutenant-colonel may attain the rank of colonel:—(a.) By twelve years' service in the substantive grade of lieutenant-colonel; (b.) By brevet, after thirty-one years' service in the army, five of which shall have been in the grade of lieutenant-colonel; (c.) By brevet, on appointment to be one of our aides-de-camp; (d.) By brevet, as a reward for distinguished service in the field; (e.) By brevet, for distinguished service of an exceptional nature other than in the field; (f.) By brevet, after five years' satisfactory service with the rank, whether substantive or brevet, of lieutenant-colonel—(1.) In any military appointment, except as commanding a company or as equerry or extra equerry; (2.) In any civil situation approved by our Secretary of State for India in Council upon the recommendation of our Governor-General in Council and Commander-in-Chief in India, provided it be of a nature to afford practical experience likely to be afterwards of advantage in military service. (g.) By brevet, after eight years' satisfactory service as a substantive lieutenant-colonel or substantive major, with the brevet rank of lieutenant-colonel, as equerry or extra equerry to the Sovereign or the Prince of Wales. No period of acting staff service of less than six months' duration shall reckon towards the rank of colonel, unless it be converted into actual staff service by subsequent confirmation.

4. The rank of brigadier-general shall be local or temporary only.

5. The names of general officers shall be borne upon three separate lists. The first shall contain the names of those on the fixed establishment, and of those who having been promoted out of their regular turn shall be supernumerary to the fixed establishment; the second, those of officers retired under our Royal Warrant on Dec. 31, 1877; and the third, those who shall have retired from the service with the honorary rank of major-general, lieutenant-general, or general.

6. The names of the colonels and general officers of the Staff Corps now borne on the Indian list to regulate promotion shall remain on that list, and the names of the officers of the Staff Corps henceforth promoted to the rank of colonel shall be placed on that list, to be thereon retained in italics, until their death or retirement, for the purpose of regulating the promotion of the officers below them.

7. The fixed establishment of general officers (including the names of officers of the Staff Corps) shall be the following:—Generals, 23; lieutenant-generals, 35; major-generals, 59—117.

8. Every vacancy on the establishment of general officers shall be filled by the promotion of the senior colonel of the Indian Army; or by the moving up of the name of the senior officer of the Staff Corps borne on the list to regulate promotion; or by the transfer of a general officer from the supernumerary list as provided in Art. 12.

9. Every vacancy on the establishment in the rank of lieutenant-general or in that of general shall be filled up in like manner by the promotion of the senior officer of the Indian Army in the grade next below, or by the moving up of the name of the senior officer of the Staff Corps borne on the list of that grade.

10. Temporary rank and command as major-general, lieutenant-general, or general may, for the convenience of our service, be conferred without regard to seniority, on colonels, major-generals, or lieutenant-generals respectively, and if the officer during the continuance of such temporary rank and command shall have conducted himself to our satisfaction, the rank so held may, upon the recommendation of our Governor-General in Council, be converted into permanent rank after having been held for five years in time of peace, or for any shorter period in the field during war. A colonel who shall vacate an appointment as temporary major-general, and whose temporary rank shall not have been made permanent, may, upon the recommendation of our Governor-General in Council, be made an honorary major-general, and shall retain that rank until he succeeds to the establishment in virtue of his seniority on the list of colonels.

11. Promotion may be conferred upon a colonel, major-general, or lieutenant-general, without regard to seniority, for distinguished service in the field, and in such case the recommendation of our Governor-General in Council, detailing the services for which the officer is promoted, shall be published in the General Orders of our Indian Military Forces, and in the London Gazette.

12. An officer not below the rank of colonel, promoted after temporary service in a higher rank, or for distinguished service in the field, shall be borne as supernumerary, and shall not be placed on the establishment in his new rank until the time when he would have attained such rank by seniority; that is to say, when the surviving officer who stood next senior on the list to the officer promoted under Art. 9 or 10 shall have attained the same rank on the establishment, the next vacancy shall be filled by the transfer of the supernumerary general officer to the establishment.

13. A supernumerary major-general, who has been promoted after temporary service and absorbed, under Art. 12, into the establishment, shall have seniority according to the date of his permanent rank as major-general, and shall rise to be lieutenant-general, whether before or after his absorption into the establishment, in accordance with that seniority. A supernumerary general officer promoted for distinguished service in the field, and absorbed under Art. 12, shall take his seniority from the date of his promotion as published in the London Gazette.

14. Field-marshal shall be appointed at the will of the Sovereign, and the rank shall be conferred without reference to seniority. A general officer retired under our Warrant of the 31st day of December, 1877, shall remain eligible for promotion to the rank of field-marshal.

15. A major-general or a lieutenant-general, retired under our Warrant of the 31st day of December, 1877, shall be promoted to the rank of lieutenant-general or general when the officer on the establishment who was next junior to him as a colonel shall obtain such promotion.

16. Every officer permitted to retire on full pay may be granted a step of honorary rank on retirement.

Given at our Court at Osborne, this twenty-eighth day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-eight, and in the forty-first year of our reign.—By her Majesty's command,

SALISBURY.

One appointment subsequently added.

Miscellaneous.

THE GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY COMPANY have made a further call of £2 per share on the shares with £16 and £12 per share respectively already called up, payable on or before the 29th March.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The tenders for £300,000 in bills on India were received at the Bank of England on Feb. 20, and the whole amount was allotted to Calcutta at an average rate of 1s. 9d., Bombay and Madras of course getting nothing. Tenders at 1s. 9d. will receive in full; and there is no allotment below that price. Compared with last week the above rate shows a rise of 1 per cent.

MAJOR JONES, R.E.—Major Jones, R.E., who has just returned to England from India, has been appointed Instructor in Military History, Strategy, and Military Law at the School of Military Engineering, Chatham, in succession to Lieut.-Colonel L. A. Hale, R.E., who has been appointed Professor of Fortifications at the Staff College, Sandhurst.

TEA CULTIVATION AND MANUFACTURE.—The Prize Essay on "Tea Cultivation and Manufacture," by Lieut.-Col. Edward Money, which won the Grant Gold Medal in India, is about to be reprinted in this country by Messrs. W. B. Whittingham and Co., of 91, Gracechurch-street. The original essay has been revised and much enlarged, and will be issued as a demy 8vo. volume of 200 pages, with tables and addenda upon the management of tea gardens and tea manufactories.—Athenæum.

THE INDIAN IMPORT DUTIES.—The Manchester Chamber of Commerce have just held a special meeting to consider the question of the Indian Import duties. A proposal was made that in the event of the Government being unable to repeal the duties at once to press upon them to impose an Excise duty. Mr. John Bright had condemned this proposal in a letter to the President as being contrary to the principles of free trade. An amendment was adopted condemning the import duties, but disapproving the substitution of anything in the way of a tax in their place.

THE INDIAN ORDER FOR LADIES.—Regarding the new Indian Order for Ladies, a correspondent to the Morning Post asks:—"Is it owing to an oversight, or is it because the services of the army are not likely to be required again under any circumstances, and that therefore its feelings are not worth consideration, that the names of Lady Napier of Magdala, Lady Sandhurst, Lady Haines, and Lady Chamberlain have been omitted from the list of members of the Order of the Crown of India? The unexplained omission of such names as the above has caused much natural surprise in the Queen's military service."

THE LATE ADMIRAL STANLEY.—To-day the funeral of a gallant old officer, Admiral Edward Stanley, who has died at the age of eighty years, will take place at Kensal-green. He was one of the old fighting men who are now becoming few, his first active service being at Algiers. In February, 1835, he received the thanks of the Governor of the Cape for the services performed by him during the Caffre war, and in 1836-38 he was so successful in suppressing piracy in the Straits of Malacca that he obtained high testimonials from the Governor-General in India, the Commander-in-Chief, and the Chambers of Commerce of Penang, Madras, and Singapore. By the latter he was presented with a sword valued at one hundred guineas.—Army and Navy Gazette.

STAFF COLLEGE.—Arrangements—says the Army and Navy Gazette—are being made by which officers who have passed out of the Staff College may complete their course in India in cases where they wish to do so, or when it is considered for the benefit of the public service that they should not be detained in England. Hitherto it has been the almost invariable practice to send all officers to Aldershot for duty with the Cavalry and Artillery during the drill season, a course which has kept them away from their regiments for an extra twelve months, and deprived them in some cases of staff employment, which non-certificated officers have obtained in the absence of those with the recognised qualifications.

WILL OF THE LATE SIR CHARLES FORBES.—The will of the late Sir Charles Forbes, of Castle Newe, Strathdon, Aberdeenshire, and Broomwood, Surrey, has been proved by his two sons, Sir Charles John Forbes and Mr. George Stewart Forbes, and by the executors. The testator was senior member of the firm of Forbes, Forbes, and Co., of London, and Sir Charles Forbes and Co., of Bombay. The whole real estate in Scotland, of large extent and value, descends to the present baronet, as heir, who takes as legatee the Bombay service of plate, the whole of the personal estate in Scotland, and the freehold residence in Queen's-gate-terrace. Mr. G. S. Forbes has a legacy of £25,000, and the testator's stock in the firm of Forbes, Forbes, and Co., and the leasehold house in Eaton-place West, and stables. The value of the real and personal estate in England, Scotland, and India exceeds £250,000.

ROYAL ASIATIC SOCIETY.—At the meeting of the Royal Asiatic Society, on Monday, the 18th inst., Sir Edward Colebrooke, Bart., M.P., President, in the chair, G. V. S. Fitzgerald, Esq., A. R. N. Hawes, Esq., and Colonel Robson Benson were elected Residents, and Colonel J. T. Norgate, Bengal Staff Corps, D. Barkley, Esq., M. Edward Naville, H. B. Griggs, Esq., Krishna Row, Esq., Non-resident members. Mr. Kingsmill, the President of the North China Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society, contributed a paper, "On the Migrations and Early History of White Huns, chiefly from Chinese Sources," in which he traced the wanderings of the Yuëti (the White Huns, or Ephthalitæ of the later Greek writers), who, in the latter part of the second century B.C., overran and destroyed the Greco-Bactrian Kingdom, after it had subsisted for about 120 years. Mr. Kingsmill suggested, on philological grounds, that the word Vidal or Viddhal was the true rendering of the old Chinese name, and that this might be considered as identical, not only with the Ephthalites of Procopius, but also with the Haiathalak of the Arabs.

IRRIGATION REGARDED AS A PREVENTION OF INDIAN FAMINES.—On Friday evening a paper was read on this subject by Mr. W. T. Thornton, C.B., before the Indian section of the Society of Arts, in the Lecture-room of that institution, John-street, Adelphi, Colonel Yule occupying the chair. After referring to the frequency of Indian famines, and speaking of the great cost of them to the Government, he said he admitted that, if the theory of the irrigationists were correct, it would be economy to spend fifty, or even a hundred, millions in constructing irrigation works for the whole of India. It was impossible to overrate the importance of such irrigation works as could be implicitly trusted to continue in a condition to furnish water when it was needed, but as a matter of fact the maximum discharge at the head works of the Ganges and Jumna Canals was often less by a fourth in one year than in another, and it was obvious that even in Northern India not only was irrigation not capable of indefinite extension, but if provision were made for the utmost extension possible in one year immense tracts of ordinarily irrigated land might in extraordinary deficient seasons be left without a drop of water. Far greater must be the risks incurred in the Deccan, where there are no snowy mountains, and where what mountains there are intercept most of the moisture which they attract. If canals could not be relied on in such junctures, still less could tanks. Last year in Madras the failure of crops was most complete on lands which in ordinary seasons would have been styled wet by reason of their being irrigated. What they had to deal with was the rainfall; but there were in India vast breadths of country which never in any single year received more rain than was required for that same year's purpose, and it could not, therefore, be stored in those districts for subsequent dry seasons. This was not the only drawback. Another had been expressed with epigrammatic force and neatness as the inability of water to run up hill. Neither from the banks of any river nor from the site of any tank did the ground decline on all sides with so uniform a slope but that its surface was broken by occasional undulations, and Southern India in general consisted not of low-lying plains, but of lofty table lands, averaging 1,500 above the sea level, and the rivers which traversed it had their channels for the greater part deep down below the surface, so that anicuts or dams could not be placed higher up stream than at present. It was plain, therefore, that if irrigation works were multiplied to the utmost extent, much the greater part of India would still be left high and dry. But while denying that even universal irrigation could be a specific for famine, he admitted that irrigation very far short of universal would be not only a most valuable palliative, but would likewise serve as a partial preventive. The Indian Government had been attacked for spending so little on such works; but he maintained that no other Government, ancient or modern, had been nearly so lavish in respect to public works as it had been during the last twenty or thirty years. After a few words from Sir Arthur Cotton and Sir George Balfour, M.P., the discussion was adjourned until Tuesday next.

Imperial Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, Feb. 19.—INDIAN APPOINTMENTS.—Mr. O'DONNELL called attention to the appointment by the Indian Government of Mr. Molesworth Macpherson, first as secretary to the Legislative Council, and then as deputy-secretary to the Legislative Department, and moved that such appointment constituted an improper evasion of the law, was unjust to the regular Civil Service of India, and was calculated to bring the Indian Administration into public discredit. The hon. gentleman explained that Mr. Macpherson had been in India only a very short time, and had been called to the bar only eighteen months when he received the first valuable appointment. The Act of Parliament had hitherto required that gentlemen should have a residence of seven years in India before appointment to this office, and this requirement was avoided by a colourable evasion of the law, namely, that of altering the name of the officer. This young gentleman was deprived of his position in the Legislative Council, but as a solatium he was appointed to another office, from which a man of thirteen years' experience had to retire. It was time for Parliament to exercise rigid supervision over Indian appointments, for colourable evasions of this sort were the main door by which jobbery entered the service. —Lord GEORGE HAMILTON said there was great misconception in regard to the facts and the law relating to this appointment. The appointment was excluded from the schedule of the Civil Service Act. It was connected not with the executive administration, but with the legislative business of the Governor-General. It was important that the acts of the Indian Government should be drafted clearly and intelligibly. On the vacancy occurring the Indian Government telegraphed to the Home Government asking them to send out a competent English lawyer as draughtsman. They were unable to get one at the salary mentioned, and the Indian Government therefore did their best to supply themselves. There had been no evasion of the Act of Parliament to which reference had been made. If the Indian Government had not appointed a lawyer, there would have been two civilians in the department, a thing that was quite unprecedented. No doubt insinuations were made in a number of Indian newspapers that Mr. Macpherson had been appointed through the influence of his friends; but this was not the case. Mr. Macpherson never applied for the office, nor had any of his friends. The first they heard of the appointment was from the Gazette. During the short time he had held the post of deputy or assistant-secretary to the Indian Council, Mr. Macpherson had shown great aptitude and ability. —Mr. O'DONNELL acknowledged the straightforward manner in which the noble lord had met the motion, and was proceeding to make some further remarks when an unsuccessful attempt was made to count the House. —Mr. DENZIL ONSLOW hoped the hon. member for Dungarvan would not in future become the spokesman in that House of discontented Indian servants. —Mr. PARNELL trusted that nothing that had taken place would deter the Indian civil servants from bringing forward their complaints in a proper and constitutional manner, as they had done that evening.—The motion was then withdrawn.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, Feb. 20.—OFFICERS IN THE INDIAN SERVICE.—Lord G. HAMILTON, in reply to Sir J. M'KENNA, said: Officers in the Indian service are either in the local service or the Staff Corps. The first have their rights guaranteed by a clause in an Act of Parliament, and the Staff Corps promotion being by length of service, the Royal Warrant alluded to could not regulate their retirement. At present there is no scheme for the revision of the pension regulations of the Indian Army under consideration.

INDIAN IRRIGATION REPORTS.—Lord G. HAMILTON stated, in answer to Mr. F. HARRISON, that the Indian Irrigation reports were too bulky to be laid on the table of the House, but that there would be no objection to the production of a small return showing what was the exact state of things in connection with the subject.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, Feb. 21.—INDIAN FINANCES.—Lord G. HAMILTON promised Mr. FAWCETT that Sir John Strachey's recent financial statement at Calcutta should be in the hands of members by Monday.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FRIDAY, Feb. 22.—TAXATION IN BENGAL.—Lord G. HAMILTON stated, in reply to Mr. O'DONNELL, that certain modifications had been made in the licence tax which was introduced in the Bengal Legislative Council, and by which incomes of less than two shillings a week, such as were earned by the very poorest classes of native market dealers, were to be taxed, but until he received the Bill in its final shape he was unable to state in detail what they were.

SELECT COMMITTEES.—On the motion of Lord G. Hamilton, the Select Committee on Public Works (India) has been nominated as follows:—Mr. Balfour, Mr. Fawcett, Mr. Childers, Mr. Ashbury, Sir G. Campbell, Mr. Onslow, Mr. Cross, Mr. Hardcastle, Sir J. McKenna, Mr. Lloyd, Mr. Grant Duff, Mr. Mulholland, Mr. Smith, Mr. Agnew, and Lord G. Hamilton. The "Select Committee to inquire into the Royal Artillery and Engineer Officers' Arrears of Pay" was reappointed and nominated on the 5th inst. The number of members is seventeen, the list being as follows:—Sir George Balfour, Sir Walter Bartlett, Mr. Campbell Bannerman, Mr. Courtney, Mr. Grant Duff, Lord Eslington, Mr. Fawcett, Mr. Carpenter Garnier, Lord George Hamilton, Sir John Hay, Mr. William Holmes, Colonel Jervis, Mr. Mills, Mr. Muntz, Major O'Beirne, Mr. Denzil Onslow, and Sir Henry Wolff. This Committee held its first meeting on Friday at the House of Commons. Lord George Hamilton was appointed chairman. The Committee will meet again on Thursday next, when it is expected that General Dickens will be examined on the subject of public works.

MR. J. C. WILLIAMS.—We are very glad to see, from the last North-Western Provinces Gazette, that Mr. J. C. Williams, C.S., has at last emerged from his troubles, and has been appointed Joint Magistrate of the first grade. Whatever indiscretion may have marked his proceedings in connection with the incidents which led to the temporary stoppage of his promotion, nothing has ever been advanced or suggested against his character or abilities, and in his subsequent career it is not unsafe to predict that he is likely to be a more valuable public servant than many a contemporary who has had a less stormy official youth. Sooner or later the opportunity will no doubt come when the energy and indomitable spirit which were only too apparent during his ministrations in Oudh will again bring Mr. Williams to the front, in some way which will redound equally to his own glory and the good of the State.—Pioneer.

MR. DAUKES, Under Secretary to the Government of India, Home Department, is about to take furlough to Europe; and Mr. C. E. Buckland, at present Private Secretary to Sir Richard Temple, is likely to be appointed to officiate during his absence.

EDUCATIONAL REPORT.—From the official Review of Report for 1876-77, it appears that the Educational Institutions of Bengal have in general stood the test of financial reductions fairly well during the year. Some of the weaker schools, which had no inherent vitality, were swept away, but the more important institutions, including primary and higher English schools, have maintained their ground notwithstanding their close dependence on the Government grant, which appears to have been reduced by half a lakh below that of 1875-76, and nearly  $1\frac{1}{2}$  lakhs below that of 1875-76. "Under these circumstances," says the official review, "the Lieutenant-Governor regards it as a satisfactory proof of the general soundness and vitality of our educational system, that notwithstanding these disadvantages and drawbacks, the number of schools and colleges under inspection, and the pupils attending them, have showed a marked increase during the year." This favourable conclusion is supported by the remarks of the Government on the extent of support derived from popular contributions. This is what they state:—"A general summary of the results of the year, as gathered from the foregoing paragraphs, shows that while the work of the department has been conducted under some difficulties and disadvantages, considerable progress has been made, and a still further measure of success may be hoped for in the future. In particular, the educational history of the year is characterised by two circumstances, which appear to the Lieutenant-Governor to afford special ground for satisfaction—the large increase in the funds contributed by the people themselves to schools of every class, and the marked success of the candidates from Bengal schools and colleges in the examinations of the University. The former of these shows that the present system of public instruction is founded upon a secure basis; that it is not merely a Government department, but a national institution. The latter affords a proof that this confidence is not misplaced; that the contributions, both of Government and of the community, are usefully expended; and that, while the basis of education in Bengal is broad the superstructure also is high. These are results upon which, in the Lieutenant-Governor's opinion, both the officers of the department and the people at large may justly be congratulated." The practical neglect of technical education, notwithstanding all the talk that there has been on the subject in Calcutta, is deplored by the Lieutenant-Governor, who calls upon the classes which, in spite of all warnings, continue to overcrowd the public service, to expend their energies in a more fruitful direction than that of ill-paid clerkships and over-stocked professions.

THE EARL OF DALKEITH'S VISIT TO INDIA.—The East India Railway authorities have placed a special saloon at the disposal of the Earl of Dalkeith during his present tour in Upper India, to be attached or detached from any passenger train as may be desired.

Mr. A. E. Gough has been appointed Professor of English Literature at the Banaras College; and Mr. W. H. Wright, who has just returned from furlough, is appointed to succeed him as Professor of History and Philosophy at the Muir Central College.

A NEW WORK BY COLONEL MALLESON, C.S.I.

FINAL FRENCH STRUGGLES IN INDIA AND ON THE INDIAN SEAS.

This Work describes the contest between the French and English Navies in 1783, the damaging effect produced by French Privateering on British Commerce, the capture of the Islands which nurtured the Privateers, and the career of the most famous Foreign Adventurers in India, concluding with an Account of the Expedition despatched from India to co-operate with Sir R. Abercromby in 1801.

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS COMPANY (Limited).

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1851, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer.

Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 18s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d., postage, free. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, free. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, free.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Post-office, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS, &c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c. It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, free.

READERSHIP IN INDIAN LAW.

Candidates for the office of Reader in Indian Law are requested to forward their applications with testimonials to the Vice-Chancellor before the 1st of June next.

The conditions of the office are specified in the following Statute approved in Convocation on Feb. 5.

J. E. SEWELL, Vice-Chancellor.
New College, Feb. 16, 1878.

VI.—OF THE READER IN INDIAN LAW.

1. There shall be a Reader in Indian Law, who shall be nominated from time to time by the Vice-Chancellor, the Proctors, the Professor of Comparative Philology, and the Corpus Professor of Jurisprudence, to hold office for seven years.

2. The Reader shall give lectures on Indian Law, and on the Indian systems of Land Tenure and Land Revenue. He shall give two lectures a week during six weeks in each of two Terms; and shall also give further instruction to students who have attended his lectures, during eight weeks in each of the three Academic Terms (Easter and Trinity Terms being counted as one).

3. The Reader shall receive annually the sum of Three Hundred Pounds from the University Chest. Each student shall also pay to the Reader a fee of One Pound for each course of lectures.

4. In case of misconduct on the part of the Reader, the Vice-Chancellor and the Delegates of Appeals in Congregation shall have power to admonish him, or, if need be, to declare the Readership vacant, according to the process prescribed in respect of the Professor of Logic and other Professors.

5. If the Reader, either from illness, or from some other urgent cause approved by the Vice-Chancellor, shall be for a time prevented from discharging his duties, he shall name a fit and sufficient deputy, to be approved by the Vice-Chancellor, and in case of his neglect to do this the Vice-Chancellor shall appoint such deputy.

6. Whenever a deputy shall be appointed, the Vice-Chancellor shall determine the proportion of the Reader's stipend to be paid to the deputy.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered.
CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.
CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague.
CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.
CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms.
CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c.
Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manila, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec. 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.
CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.
Sold in bottles at 1s. 14d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words, "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are, from Bombay, February 11; Agra, Allahabad, and Madras, February 9; Calcutta, February 8.

THE Indian papers were sounding the alarm on a subject of which the telegraph has since told us more to the same effect. Very serious reports were carried up country from Madras and Mysor. The Government—we are told—fear that in any case famine relief cannot yet be closed; may, perhaps, be needful down to August or September next. Even at the end of November last the area of cultivation throughout the whole of the Madras Presidency was 2,750,000 acres below the average of 14,500,000. Nor did there seem, when the mail left, much chance of an increase. The harvest of the dry crop, which was 60 per cent. of the whole, is now nearly over; the wet crop—says the Pioneer—"will no doubt be a good one, but it is believed that much of it is already in the hands of merchants and soucars; whose interest it will be to starve the market. Under these circumstances, much depends on the turn things may take at the end of this month and at the beginning of the next, when the wet crops are harvested." The numbers on the relief works were already beginning to rise, while prices were still as high as before.

UPPER INDIA was not wholly free from like anxieties. In Rohilkhand, where prices had nearly doubled on those of the year before, the people are said to be suffering severely from a famine which would last for the next month or six weeks till the rabi is gathered in. There have been some deaths from sheer starvation, besides many due indirectly to the same cause. In the whole division there was no grain save what was imported by railway, and most of that was absorbed at the out-stations. The Government was giving some relief and doubling the private subscriptions, but there was a painful feeling abroad that enough had not been done to meet the need.

WE learn that very great distress prevailed in certain taluks of the Bellary district owing to the failure of the crops. Rain was needed in other taluks to ripen the crops. Whole villages were being deserted, the people flocking into the larger towns. It is generally asserted that the Government relief works were closed too soon. Be that as it may, the Government have ordered the immediate reopening of several works. Mr. Ballard, second member of the Madras Revenue Board, had arrived at Bellary to consult with the Collector on this matter.

A TELEGRAM had been received at Calcutta from the famine committee at Madras asking for further remittances from the Calcutta fund, on the ground that their prospects were bad and their funds low. It appears that the imports of food grains into Madras in the week ending the 25th January were 4,799 tons—figures which seem to suggest the fact that the famine is not yet over in several districts.

SIR RICHARD POLLOCK and General Keyes were expected in Peshawar on Feb. 13, to consult with the Lieutenant-Governor as to the further measures that should be taken with reference to the Jawakis, who had refused to give up their leaders, and claimed to deduct the damage done by our troops from the amount of the fine demanded by Government. As they have since yielded unconditionally, the war may be considered over.

WE are not surprised to hear that the Indian Government is engaged in addressing a strong remonstrance to the Secretary of State about the extravagant nature of the military charges in this country. If the Viceroy and the Minister for India will only keep on protesting in concert, year after year, it may be that such constant dropping of water will in time wear out the granite of War-office indifference. But it will take, we fear, a very long time to get justice done to India in this or any other fashion.

WE see it stated that the post of Inspector-General of Education for the North-West Provinces will, on Mr. Kempson's retirement, be abolished; Mr. R. Griffith performing the duties under the title of Inspector-General of Schools.

THE news from Kabul is seldom trustworthy; but there may be some grains of truth in the story told by the Civil and Military Gazette, that some of the Khans of the tribes residing on the Kandahar frontier have shown symptoms of disaffection to the Kabul Government, and have opened communications with British officers at Quetta, both by letter and in person. This having been made known to the Amir, stringent orders were issued by him to his father-in-law, Mir Afzul Khan, Governor of Kandahar, to prohibit any such intercourse, and to endeavour to conciliate the disaffected tribes. Disturbances are reported at Herat, and one of the Khans, the father-in-law of the imprisoned Yakub Khan, is said to be fomenting them with a view of hastening the release of the latter.

THE following items complete our summary of mail news:—Between twenty and thirty officers who have been employed on famine relief duty in Madras have been directed to return to their own districts.—A farewell dinner was given at Calcutta to General Thuillier, late Surveyor-General, last week.—Mr. Digby, Honorary Secretary of the Madras Famine Relief Fund, is engaged on a history of the Famine Campaign in two volumes.—H. E. the Commander-in-Chief has left for Karachi on a tour of inspection.—The line of railway about to be constructed by the Pondicherry Railway Company will probably be worked by the South-Indian Railway Company.

—The ship Allahabad, from Calcutta to New York, put into Galle on the 29th Jan., owing to fire having broken out on board. Efforts were made to put out the fire, but it is believed that the greater portion of the cargo has been lost.—In the event of Dr. Cruikshank proceeding to England on leave, Major Qrobyn is likely to succeed him.

It appears that the diocese of Lahor is to include Sind as well as the whole province of the Punjab, and the Bishop is empowered to constitute two archdeaconries and to appoint archdeacons thereto. The limits of the diocese, however, may be varied from time to time.

THE Indian Arms Bill, as about to be presented in the Viceroy's Council, professes to be "in the main a consolidation of the existing law, and a re-enactment of it in a simpler form, with such improvements in points of detail as the experience of the working of the Arms Act of 1860 has shown to be desirable." On two points only does it contemplate changes of any importance. For one thing it imposes duties on the importation by sea of arms and parts of arms, &c. Those duties are fixed at high rates without reference to the value of the articles on which they are imposed, "especially with a view to check the importation of a cheap class of arms, the importation of which has of late years largely increased." There is reason, we are told, to suspect that a large proportion of these inferior arms finds its way into the hands of the criminal classes in the interior of the country, or of the hostile tribes on our frontiers. Owing to the difficulty of preventing the transit of such arms from the seaports it is proposed to levy an uniform duty, as "the simplest method of checking their importation, and the method least calculated to interfere with the legitimate trade in arms of a superior class." Secondly, with regard to the possession of arms; at present the mere possession of arms is prohibited only in certain provinces, which were disarmed under the Act of 1860. "Throughout the rest of the country, though no person can go armed or carry arms except under a special exemption or by virtue of a license, the mere possession of arms other than cannon is not restricted." It appears that from this cause the law prohibiting the transport of arms and the export of arms across the frontiers has been extensively evaded. "As long as all persons indiscriminately may have arms in their possession to any amount they please in the districts which have not been disarmed, it is practically impossible to prevent such arms being passed on to the disarmed districts to the predatory classes in native States, and to the hostile tribes on our frontiers." For these reasons it is now proposed to place the possession of arms throughout the whole of British India under control by Section 11 of the Bill, which requires all such possession to be under a license. Provision, however, is made for the comfort of "respectable persons desiring to possess arms for legitimate purposes." There will be a period of three months after the Bill becomes law, during which the possession of arms in the districts not hitherto disarmed will not be illegal, and during which any person in such districts can apply for a licence. Other sections provide that in these districts no person shall be prosecuted for possessing arms without the previous sanction of the magistrates of the district, and imposes very stringent conditions on searches for arms. Moreover the Government reserves power to "exempt any class of persons from the operation of the prohibition altogether." In conclusion, the Bill affirms that "with a system of licenses granted either without charge or on the payment of small fees, and in cases where it is safe so to grant them for reasonably long periods, the Bill will not, as regards the possession of arms, materially affect the position of any persons to whom the right to possess arms can, with a due regard to the public peace and safety, be conceded." We may add that all exemptions granted under the present law will be maintained.

THE Bengal Customs Report for 1876-77 seems to show that war in Europe encourages the home demand for Indian wheat; and the Government hopes that the stimulus now given will be permanent. In 1872-73 the export of wheat from Calcutta amounted to less than 5 lakhs of rupees in value; this year the value was over a crore and 23 lakhs, or above a million sterling. Another ill wind that has blown good for India was the failure of the beet-root crop in France; owing chiefly to which the exports of sugar from Calcutta were raised from one year to another by some 17,660 tons. The Madras famine affected the foreign trade in rice. Ceylon, which is generally supplied from Madras, was obliged this year to resort to Calcutta, which thereupon sent over 100,000 tons. The rate of exchange has induced people to adorn themselves with less careful art—so at least thinks the Bengal Government, when it sees that the imports of apparel into Calcutta have fallen off considerably. An increase, on the other hand, in the quantity of coal imported is ascribed to the extension of railways and of steamer traffic; but the former cause, it is hoped, will presently have the more desirable effect of stimulating the supply of coal from the Indian mines. Indian progress is already manifest in the steady decline which marks the exportation of raw jute fibre. Local mills now command a practical monopoly of all the Asiatic, and a large proportion of the American and Australian markets, and they are fast developing their relations with China. The sufferers are the Dundee mill-owners, whose demand for raw jute has consequently grown far less urgent.

HAVING given publicity to the story lately told in a Bombay journal to the discredit of the Public Works Department, we lose no time in publishing the following denial offered by the Englishman:—

With reference to a paragraph that has appeared in many newspapers, to the effect that a contract for a portion of the earthwork of the Ahmabad and Pahlapur Railway had been let at an extravagant rate, and sublet at a large profit, we are authorised to state that the contract-rate mentioned was absolutely false, and largely in excess of the actual rate, which was a particularly cheap one for that part of the Bombay Presidency.

We hear that Mr. R. C. Carrington, of the Marine Survey Department, has just issued an excellent chart, showing the Indian coast from Coconada to Bassein river, with the numberless mouths of the Ganges.

THE offices of the Surgeon-General of her Majesty's British Forces in India and of the Surgeon-General of the Indian Forces are to be amalgamated, and Dr. Kerr-Innes will take charge of the Medical Department under the Government of India.

IN the course of his essay on "The Stability of our Indian Empire," which we noticed last week, Professor Sidney Owen touches on the danger of "rash Parliamentary interference, and the crude and violent suggestions of popular sentiment influenced by agitation." He sees among us a growing disposition to take "a fussy interest in Indian affairs, to form strong opinions off-hand, and to press those opinions strongly upon our rulers." The proverbial dangers of a little learning are obviously great with reference to a country so remote as India, peopled by races of whom most Englishmen know so little, and governed under conditions so foreign to our ordinary wont. It would be better perhaps for India if we left her affairs to be managed entirely between the local rulers and the India-office, and such has hitherto virtually been the rule. But the growing pressure of popular opinion at home is a force with which we must reckon more and more in the future. At a recent meeting of the East India Association, Mr. J. Routledge gave several reasons for regarding popular interference in the government of India as "both reasonable and inevitable," in spite of the difficulties and dangers which such interference may beget. Inevitable perhaps it is, until we grow wise enough to comprehend the extent of our ignorance and to recognise the limits beyond which interference should not go. Mr. Routledge, therefore, urges the need of educating public opinion to the proper pitch. Enlightened public opinion would indeed, as Mr. Sidney Owen admits, be invaluable. But then, it may be asked, to whose hands should the task of educating opinion be entrusted? There is no lack of volunteer teachers, but the net result of their conflicting doctrines hardly tends to encourage the growth of that general enlightenment which all right-feeling persons must desire. By all means "Let knowledge grow from more to more"; but who will undertake to educate our teachers?

THE Rangoon Chamber of Commerce has memorialised the local Government on the unsatisfactory condition of the trade with Upper Burma, asking that our relations with that country may be placed on a more satisfactory footing. They point out that "the treaty of 1862 expressly provided that there should be free intercourse between buyers and sellers in the King's dominions. Article 6 stipulated that 'traders should be allowed to travel in such manner as they pleased, without hindrance by the Burmese ruler, and to purchase whatever they might require.'" The systematic evasion by the King of the Treaty provisions on this head attracted the attention of the Government of India so far back as the year 1866; and his refusal to accept the proposals for a revision of the treaty in that year drew down a strong remonstrance from the Governor-General, which resulted in the treaty of 1867. This treaty merely renewed the former one with some fresh stipulations, under which the King agreed to abolish all monopolies except three, viz., the trade in timber, earth oil, and precious stones. For some time the provisions of the treaty appear to have been respected, as up to 1874-75 the trade between the two countries rapidly increased; but latterly the King appears to have adopted a system of interference with trade which practically amounts to a renewal of his monopolies, and since the above year the value of goods exported to Upper Burma has seriously diminished. The memorialists go into figures, showing the decline of the trade with Upper Burma since the interference, and state that "the concessions made by the British Government in favour of Upper Burma are estimated to equal about thirteen lakhs of rupees per annum, without taking into account the large quantity of rice exported duty free across the frontier, which, if shipped to foreign ports, would produce a revenue of three lakhs of rupees, and is, therefore, equivalent to a further concession of that amount." Finally, the memorial states that "it is high time that the King of Burmah should be made to show his appreciation of this liberality by a rigid adherence to the terms of the treaty, and I am desired to express a hope that every effort, consistent with the policy which Government may have decided to follow, will be used to induce his Majesty to abstain from a course which has proved so seriously detrimental to trade, and to establish that free and unrestrained intercourse which the treaty was intended to secure, and which alone can restore confidence and place the commercial relations of the two countries on a sound footing. The Chamber feels assured that it only requires the display of a sufficient amount of firmness to ensure the consent of the Burmese Government to any measures which may be considered necessary for the attainment of these ends."

A Times telegram of Feb. 24, from Calcutta, states that on the previous night the Government received the grateful intelligence that the Jawakis had at length accepted unconditionally the terms imposed. Their deputation was to have arrived next day at Peshawar, where the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab has been residing for some days past in order to use his personal influence in bringing peace negotiations to a satisfactory conclusion. Reports from the frontier state that certain of the tribes who were friendly to the Jawakis express great indignation at the conduct of the Amir of Kabul, complaining that the hostility of the Jawakis was entirely owing to the Amir's instigation, though he now refuses to render them assistance in their contest with the Indian Government. The success of our Government in this affair—says the correspondent—"will doubtless not only teach the whole of the frontier tribes a most salutary lesson, but will probably act as a powerful lever in inducing the Amir to change his attitude of hostile and jealous estrangement and to seek our friendship and alliance. The only argument these Oriental princes understand is that of military power, and it is well, therefore, occasionally to show them that when it is needful we are perfectly prepared to accept the alternative of war."

From the same source we learn that accounts from Madras and Mysor are by no means satisfactory. Prices do not fall, as was expected, but maintain an upward tendency. The area of cultivation in the Madras Presidency up to the end of November was two and three-quarter millions of acres below the average. It is expected that the outturn of the wet crop will be fair, but a large portion has already been bought up by native merchants, who will doubtless hold out for high prices. If prices take a downward turn at the beginning of March, all will probably go well; if otherwise, as soon as harvesting is over demands for relief will again be clamorous and it will be impossible to close the works till August or September, and only then in the event of the dry grain harvest turning out bountiful. In the meantime the reports from the North-West and Oudh are equally unfavourable. The poorer classes are suffering the most pinching distress.

THE same telegram informs us that Mr. Rivers Thompson, Chief Commissioner of Burmah, succeeds Sir Edward Clive Bayley in the Viceroy's Council.

A CORRESPONDENT has sent to the Times the following extract from another telegram:—

The whole of the Jawaki tribe has accepted our terms unconditionally. By an admirably planned and executed surprise movement on Sapri, Ruka has been killed, and the other four ringleaders in the Albuzai outrage captured. The Jawaki war has thus been successfully brought to a conclusion without any concession on our part, or necessity for further operations against Swat which have lately been in contemplation. In fact, the effect all along the border is most satisfactory, and has completely established the superiority of the new system of border warfare and policy which was so much opposed by the old Punjab officials.

A PARIS telegram of February 25 informs us that the Shah of Persia is expected soon to arrive at St. Petersburg, and the Czar has directed Prince Menschikoff to meet him at the frontier and offer him Imperial hospitality during his stay.

It appears that, after all, the Pioneer was wrongly informed about the successor to Mr. Charles Saunders. According to a recent telegram it is not Mr. Aitchison, but Mr. Gordon, who has been appointed Chief Commissioner of Mysor.

THE Englishman draws an unpleasant picture of the corruption which prevails in Indian hospitals. It has been assured by "a medical officer of high standing and long experience in the service of Government," that so great is the dishonesty of the hospital attendants, that, in order to ensure the patients their proper rations, "it would be necessary for the medical men themselves to stand over them while eating their meals." In one case, for instance, though a seer of meat per head was allowed for soup, it was found hopeless to secure the patients of a large hospital anything better than the thinnest broth, until the plan was hit upon of padlocking the covers of the pots in which the soup was cooked. "At first the superintendent of the hospital thought he might be able to effect a better result if he saw the meat cut up and put into the pots. But this plan produced no appreciable improvement in the soup turned out. In the meantime it was accidentally discovered that the meat was taken out of the pots during the process of cooking, and fried or curried by the cooks for their own dinner. Perforated lids with locks were then procured, and the pots closed and re opened in the presence of the superintendent, the result being that a spoon would stand in the soup produced, when cold." This, we fear, is no uncommon instance of the heartless robbery that goes on in every hospital, and it is beyond the powers of any superintendent to put a stop to the system so long as his subordinates cannot be depended on to second his efforts.

WE are glad to see that Mr. Hughes's "Notes on Muhammadanism," which were commended so highly on their first appearance, have already reached a second edition. By a careful process of revision and enlargement Mr. Hughes has enhanced the value of a little book which compresses into about 280 pages the cream of many volumes on Mohammedan Theology. Its accuracy has been guaranteed by competent critics, and its usefulness as a clear and complete handbook of Muslim faith and practice must be acknowledged by all who have ever found the need of such a book.

THE death of Sir Alfred Wilde has enabled Lord Salisbury to fulfil the public expectation by conferring the vacant seat in the Council of India on Sir Henry Norman. It is pretty certain that no Indian officer of the same age and standing can show nearly so good a title to the post which Sir Henry now fills. If varied experience in the field, on the general staff, and in the Viceroy's Council, go for anything, Sir Henry should prove a valuable colleague to Sir Garnet Wolseley, and a counsellor of weight to Lord Salisbury in all matters of military importance. Much, indeed, may be expected of an officer little more than fifty years old, who for twenty years past has played a conspicuous part in the administration of the Indian Army, and who served with credit for seven years as Minister for War under three successive Viceroys.

SIR ANDREW WAUGH deserved a more detailed notice of his Indian services than we gave last week. A Scotchman, sprung from a family of soldiers, Sir Andrew joined the Bengal Engineers in 1827. Five years afterwards he was attached to the Great Trigonometrical Survey, which had passed in 1823 from the hands of its founder, Colonel Lambton, into those of the yet more famous Colonel Everest. In the work of carrying out the Great Arc Series, Everest owed much to the zeal and high abilities of his young assistant Waugh, who was soon placed at the head of a separate party, for the purpose of connecting the Dehra Dhun base with that measured on the Sironj plain. In 1839 Captain Waugh completed a series of triangles in the Dakhan over a distance of 260 miles. The accuracy of his measurements marked him out for fresh undertakings, which issued in the completion of the Great Arc Series of triangles from Cape Comorin to Banog in the Himalayas, in 1842. His chief wrote of him as "having attained a degree of accuracy and perfection of skill which it would be impossible to surpass," and dwelt with a fine appreciation on his "talents, acquirements, and habits as a scholar, a mathematician, a gentleman, and a soldier." On Everest's retirement, in 1843, Colonel Waugh, at his chief's recommendation, at once took his place as Surveyor-General and head of the Great Trigonometrical Survey. Under the new chief the work of triangulation went steadily forward under all kinds of difficulties, climatic and physical, to which some of his best officers succumbed. Disease and death—as Mr. Clements Markham has shown—were the frequent penalty involved in the discharge of duties which, however important, fill but little space in the world's eye. It is needless to follow out the course of Colonel Waugh's great and varied undertakings from 1843 to his retirement in 1861. Enough to say that he took home with him the hearty thanks of his Government, and the best wishes of the splendid staff of surveyors who had been trained under his supervision. He had already been knighted for his services, and had received the gold medal of the Geographical Society. In 1869 he became Vice-President of that society, and his scientific fame won him an honorary fellowship in similar societies at Berlin and in Italy.

Odds and Ends.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL C. W. FLETCHER officiates as Commandant of the 7th Bengal Cavalry, vice Colonel Farquharson, retired, and Captain H. C. Creak as Second in Command.

THE DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM is expected to leave Madras for Utkamund at the beginning of April; and the Government offices will all be established there by the 15th of that month.

IT is stated that it has been found necessary to establish a Relief Camp in Alwar to alleviate the distress amongst the people; and the Maharaja and rich natives in the State have subscribed liberally for the same purpose.

IT is rumoured that the young Nizam is about to take a tour to visit the caves of Ellora, Daulatabad, and the ancient places in the neighbourhood; and that his Highness and suite will be absent from his capital for two months.

MR. J. H. GARSTIN, additional Revenue Secretary to the Madras Government, and Personal Assistant to the Governor, who is compiling the "Manual of South Arkot," will, it is expected, be entrusted with the duty of preparing the history of the late famine in Madras.

THE REV. G. T. DENNIS has been appointed Chaplain of Kasauli.

A PORTRAIT of the late Lord Hobart has been sent as a present to Madras by Lady Hobart, and will shortly be hung up in the Banqueting-hall.

THE nephew of the Raja of Pudukota, and a grandson of Sir T. Madava Rao, have arrived at Madras for the purpose of entering as Students at the Presidency College.

MAJOR A. HARCOURT officiates temporarily as Deputy Commissioner of Labor.

THE native cashier of the Bangalor Bank has been committed to the sessions on charges of criminal breach of trust.

MR. MACKINTOSH BALFOUR has been installed Grand Master of all Scottish Freemasonry in India, in the place of Captain Morland.

A COMPANY has been formed at Macao to encourage the cultivation of tea. The gardens are to be placed under the management of Chinese.

OWING to the failure of the crops in Kashmir, large exportations of grain are being sent there from the Panjab, which is also furnishing large supplies for Oudh.

THE price of food grains in Gwalior has fallen considerably of late—has, in fact, almost reached normal rates; and many of those who emigrated at the time of the expected scarcity are returning with their families.

A NEW remedy for cholera, which is said to be efficacious, and is certainly cheap, is said to be used in parts of Bhartpur. It consists of cauterising the outside of the stomach with a hot iron in the earlier stages of the disease.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY has been graciously pleased to accept the position of patron to the "Indian Association for the Cultivation of Science."

THE last district reports from the Panjab tells us that some damage has been done to the crops in Gurgaon by frost, and in Peshawar by excessive rain, whilst in Karnal the cattle continued to die of hunger.

THE officers of the Great Trigonometrical Survey of India have made it necessary to assign a slightly different longitude to that at present received to the Observatory at Madras. The exact rules will shortly be announced.

THE 23rd Madras Native Infantry embarks from Madras for the Andamans on the 10th March.

MR. W. MACKWORTH YOUNG has been appointed to officiate for Mr. Rivaz as Superintendent of the Kapurthala State.

CAPTAIN H. VERE HUNT, of the Madras Staff Corps, has been appointed Assistant Cantonment Magistrate of Tounghoo.

THE quantity of cotton exported from British Burma during the month of December was 7,671 cwts., valued at Rs. 1,60,543.

MR. P. E. ISAACSON, Collector of Customs at Akyab, goes on leave for two years on medical certificate from the 19th February.

THE FRENCH IN INDIA.

ALL who take a genuine interest in the marvellous tale of English conquest in India will be thankful to Colonel Malleeson for the volume which has just issued from his attractive pen. What Lieutenant Low has done for the Indian Navy the able author of "Final French Struggles in India" has done for those gallant rivals who so long but vainly disputed with us the possession of that Eastern Empire which forms at once the glory and the despair of its present rulers.* In his present volume Colonel Malleeson completes the good work begun by his former "History of the French in India." In that work the fight for empire between the great rival nations of the West was brought down to the fall of Pondicherry in 1761, when the French power in Southern India was broken, as it turned out for ever, by the countrymen of Clive and Coote. The smaller volume now published records the later efforts of the French to turn back the tide of victory which, after sweeping over great part of India, was destined finally to engulf the French islands in the Eastern seas. It supplies, in fact, to use the author's own words, "a suppressed chapter of Anglo-Indian history." To most persons in this country it will be news, for instance, to hear, that in 1783, but for the timely conclusion of peace with France, our hold on Southern India would almost certainly have been lost through French co-operation with Haidar Ali. It was only in the latest editions of Mill's History that Professor Wilson pointed out the fact which Colonel Malleeson has enforced at greater length in his interesting account of the career of Admiral Suffrein—a sailor worthy to rank with the foremost heroes of our own naval history. And yet Mill himself might have learned the truth on this point from his own countryman, Colonel Wilks, who makes no secret of the straits to which Suffrein's daring seamanship had reduced the English in Southern India, when the news of the Treaty of Versailles came to rescue them from impending ruin. It was fortunate, too, for us, that some of Suffrein's captains behaved no better at critical moments than French officers had done before them in the days of Dupleix and Lally. Not a little of our success in India may be set down to the jealousies and quarrels which marred the best-laid plans of our French opponents.

* "Final French Struggles in India and on the Indian Seas." By Colonel G. B. Malleeson, C.S.I. W. H. Allen and Co. 1878.

The next outbreak of war with France, in 1793, brought out a new source of danger to our countrymen in India. In the second part of this volume Colonel Malleeson records the exploits of some of those French privateers who preyed so long and successfully on English trade in Eastern waters, until, in 1810, Lord Minto was enabled to deal the blow which Lord Wellesley was prevented from dealing ten years before. Of the mischief done by the privateers some idea may be formed from the fact that in five years they captured 2,266 English merchantmen, while the captures on our side amounted only to 375. Those who grumble at the rules against privateering laid down in the Treaty of 1856 would do well to ponder the lesson which the author draws from these figures, that "the nation which carries the largest amount of the commerce of the world must always be the chief sufferer from privateers." The chief seat of mischief in the case before us lay in the islands of France and Bourbon, for whose capture Lord Wellesley had prepared the expedition which orders from home diverted to Egypt. It was left for Lord Minto to carry out his predecessor's plan, and so put a final stop to a method of warfare which had cost our merchants many millions.

In the third part of his book Colonel Malleeson describes the doings of those foreign adventurers who "disciplined and trained the armies which contested India with England at Aligarh, at Delhi, at Liswari, at Assaye, and at Argaum." The strange careers of such men as Raymond, De Boigne, Perron, Thomas, and the infamous Sumru, serve to illustrate the disorders, the corruptions, and the utter chaos which marked the interval between the downfall of the Moghuls and the establishment of British supremacy in India. They also serve, in Colonel Malleeson's opinion, to illustrate the last vain efforts of the Latin race to counteract the progress of the irrepressible English. Most of these adventurers were of low origin; some of them for a time governed large provinces and commanded powerful armies; but the career of each was a mere episode, however brilliant, in the tale of English conquest, and their influence, whether for good or evil, ended with their death or retirement from the scene of their chequered fortunes. Like meteors they flashed for a moment and disappeared, while the best of their battalions were swept away before the resistless onsets of Lake and Wellesley. India has sometimes been likened to Italy in respect of physical, moral, and political traits; and the lives of these adventurers remind one strongly of the Free Lances who divided Italy among them in the days of Sforza and Rienzi. And they help us to realise, in Colonel Malleeson's own words, "the condition to which the whole of India would have been reduced had Lake been beaten at Laswari and Wellesley at Assaye. We can see how intrigue ruled supreme; how moral character went for nothing; how audacity, recklessness, corruption, always triumphed; how combined in one man they were irresistible." Our rule at any rate has changed all that for the better. It is hardly needful to remark, in conclusion, that Colonel Malleeson has produced an interesting and well-written book, derived from the best available sources, and pervaded by a spirit of generous sympathy with the brave foreigners whose achievements serve to heighten the lustre of our own successes.

MR. BRIGHT ON THE INDIAN PRESS.

The Bombay Gazette holds that the importance attached to every word uttered by Mr. Bright makes it desirable that we should offer some comments on his misleading description of the Press of India. He said that all the people with white faces are Government officials, and have therefore an interest only in patronage, promotions, salaries, and pensions, and having stated this much he found no difficulty in adding that as a consequence there is no public opinion in the country which fights against economy. We have no sooner recovered from our surprise at finding ourselves, together with many independent brethren who possess our respect and esteem, described in this way, than we find ourselves face to face with a new reason for amazement. Mr. Bright says that in India there are two sets of newspapers—those, first, which are published by Englishmen; “but these, being the papers of the Services, cannot, of course, be in favour of economy!” When we had read this extraordinary statement, and reflected that it had been made by a man of Mr. Bright’s standing, Dominie Sampson’s famous ejaculation became an involuntary testimony to our surprise. We were even more inclined to exclaim “Prodigious!” when we found that Mr. Bright’s tremendous generalisation had involved him in a blunder which he could easily have avoided if he had taken the trouble to think deeply about what he was saying. After having shown that all the white-faced people in the country are officials, that all white-faced editors are either officials also or the inspired ones of officials, and that therefore no opposition to Government can be expected from such a combination of autocrats, he goes on to say that the English press in India does, after all, touch the Government! Such blowing of hot and cold—such assertions that white is not black, but black is white—we have not seen for many a day past in serious political controversy. To use Mr. Bright’s famous phraseology, he practically asserts that all the editors of the English newspapers in India have gone into the Cave of Adullam, but that at the same time they are not in it, being the only opposition which the Government has to fear. Now, the white-faced editors must either be one thing or another—they cannot be official organs and at the same time severe critics of men in office. It would be unnatural to suppose that newspapers kept by the Services would ever offer any opposition to official intentions or criticise with effect these intentions when they emerged into the sphere of deeds. On the other hand, if the Anglo-Indian Press were not independent or quasi-independent, it could scarcely venture upon delivering those criticisms which Mr. Bright admits to be the only criticism which the Government of India feels. If it did so, it would be disappointing its patrons, the Services, and the officials would rather withdraw their support from it than assist it with the means of being disagreeable to the great custodian of the promotion and pay to which they all aspire. In fact, it would be as easy for Mr. Bright to be himself and Lord Beaconsfield at one and the same time as for an Anglo-Indian Press to be the mere instrument of the official classes, and at the same time the only power which the Government of India feels to touch it.

FRONTIER ADMINISTRATION.

The Pioneer admits that our relations with Russia may hinge on to our relations with Kabul; our relations with Kabul may modify our treatment of the intervening tribes. And inasmuch as the Government of the Punjab is clearly not the right agent to employ in diplomacy between Great Britain and Russia, the time may have come when change of some sort is inevitable. Suppose actual war breaks out between the two Powers, the events in and on the northern frontiers of Kabul will undoubtedly assume great importance, and the warmest advocate for respecting the dignity of the Punjab would scarcely contend that, under all contingencies, the Lieutenant-Governor of that province would still be the proper person to correspond with the Ameer—or whatever Government might replace him in Afghanistan. When the Viceroy descends from this large view of the subject, he seems to us less successful in enforcing the desirability of a change from the present system. In the course of that part of his Minute which sets forth his own views as to the way the frontier ought to be administered, he introduces us once more to the upright English gentleman who has not, so far, played a part on the stage of this controversy, equal to that which might have been expected from his personal appearance. The uprightest English gentleman who could be sent to Jowaki-land could not give many lessons in the elements of chivalrous behaviour to the gallant highlander Bhabri, for example. And as for civilisation, that can only be taught by very slow degrees. A Governor-General’s agent going to the hills to carry out Lord Lytton’s ideas might begin by trying the effect of his chief’s example; but would be apt to fall back on the more effective invention of Messrs. Henry and Martini. The tribes may not by any means be the brutes and savages they have sometimes been called. Indeed, the experience of the Jowaki campaign gives one some new ideas on that subject. But they are a loosely organised body of fighting clans, and they will certainly not be dissuaded from following their natural instinct, though they may be disheartened. By prompt and vigorous action on the part of local officers not hampered by the roundabout system of responsibility now in force, nor by his Excellency the Viceroy’s policy of sweetness and patience, a good deal might be done without much bloodshed and without any great expeditions, in the way of convincing the tribes that raids no longer pay. It was not the moral influence of upright English gentlemen that at last induced the hill tribes of Scotland to abandon predatory habits. Indeed, the Scotch highlands were not quieted without proceedings a good deal more bloodthirsty than any reprisals that can be laid to the charge of the Punjab Government. But experience proved that the methods adopted, though rough, were effective. They operated to civilise even Scotchmen, so there are hopes for Jowakis. But before you can educate your Jowaki you must get him to leave off fighting; and you can only accomplish this result, when the pupil has to be dealt with at an early stage of his advancement, by satisfying his sense of what is creditable to humanity—namely, by fighting better than himself. It does not humiliate him to be beaten, having fought well, but it does make him prudent, and by degrees pacific. No doubt there is much to be said in favour of not leaving off when you begin a great expedition until you are successful; and the Jowaki expedition itself is now an illustration of the merits of that theory,—but there is also much to be said against the theory which puts off an expedition too long. The Jowaki expedition is actively illustrating this also. It is too soon yet to say that the policy of the Jowaki expedition will turn out a failure; but the character of the campaign has not, so far, been encouraging for the Viceroy’s theory of such operations. The old hand-to-mouth system of reprisals on which the Punjab Government worked was not grand or fascinating to the imagination, but the history of a good many years shows a very fair measure of success attained by that system. The hills were not finally quieted, it is true, but they were steadily growing quieter; and so far as their recent management has been unsuccessful, this was not owing to the reprisal system, but to the impossibility of managing prompt reprisals subject to the sanction of two different Governments.

Bengal, Upper India, &c.

THE JAWAKI CAMPAIGN.

The Pioneer correspondent with the Jawaki Expedition gives the following account of the Jawaki chiefs:—“The demeanour of the deputation was throughout quiet, dignified, and respectful. Bhabri is a fine looking old man, standing at least six feet two inches in his sandals. His clear cut acquiline nose and flowing beard make him look at a little distance a younger man than he really is; but as you approach him closely his sunken eyes and hollow cheeks tell an unmistakable tale of anxiety and privation; and Sir Richard Pollock told me he scarcely recognised him, so changed is he from what he was six months ago. His last words to the Commissioner were said aside; ‘You are an old man like me; throw a veil, if you can, over our shame!’ Zal Beg, on the other hand, a vivacious little old man, with a red beard and wrinkled face, is the very antithesis of Bhabri. He is said to have been the most active amongst all the leaders of the war party, and to have taken a prominent part in almost all of the late raids. Had I not had this key to his character, however, I should simply have put him down as one of the mildest and pleasantest-looking old gentlemen I had ever met in frontier society.” The same authority gives the following as a complete list of our casualties in action, omitting losses from raids and murders:—

Miscellaneous.

COLONELS’ ALLOWANCES.—Major-General Charles Douglas, Royal (late Bengal) Artillery, and Lieutenant-Colonel J. C. Hood, are admitted to Colonel’s allowances; the former from the 3rd of October, 1877, the latter from the 29th January, 1878.

FINANCES OF THE PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENTS.—At the end of the year the various Indian Governments had at their credit in the public treasuries and banks over Rs. 10,31,00,000. The amount at the end of 1876 was over Rs. 9,98,00,000, at the end of 1875 nearly Rs. 12,53,00,000.

TEA IN KUMAON.—News from Kumaon up to the middle of January says:—"The soil is now in excellent condition for hoeing among the tea bushes, and if the season 1878 goes on as it has begun, the tea planters will have a bumper yield for 1878 to make amends for the deficient crops some of them had for 1877."

FOOD SUPPLIES IN THE PUNJAB.—The Punjab has well been called the granary of India. In spite of the large quantity of food grains exported some months ago to the famine districts, the new demand in Oudh has brought a new and seemingly boundless supply to light. The accumulation at the Ludiana Railway Station alone is now over nine lakhs of maunds.

CAMP OF EXERCISE.—There has been a camp of exercise at Nusseerabad from the 15th to the end of January. General Phayre, C.B., thanked the officers of the Deollee Irregular Force and of the Mhairwara Battalion for their able help, and says he has never seen better native troops than those of these corps. He thinks the objects of the camp of exercise have been fully gained. Nusseerabad has not been so full of excitement for a long time as it has been during the past fortnight.

CANPORN.—A second concert has been given in aid of the funds of the local volunteers, at which a programme of good music was discoursed to an audience that would probably have been larger but for the surfeit of gaiety from which the station has recently suffered. Mrs. Tweddell, Mrs. Condon, and Mr. Wright obtained encores for songs of a popular character, but the success of the evening was the Micere chorus from Il Trovatore, with solos by Mrs. Tweddell and Mr. Wright. The funds of the corps should be looking up after the support the concerts in their aid have received.

EMBEZZLEMENT BY A NATIVE OFFICIAL.—Babu Shama Churn Bhattacharji, the late Treasury Head Clerk, Lahor, who in September, 1876, absconded, after embezzling large sums of Government money, and for whose arrest Rs. 1,000 reward were offered by Government, has been arrested at Connagore, near Calcutta. He was given up to the Hooghly Police by one Babu Mohendra Nath Palit, of Connagore, with whom he is said to have taken refuge about the 25th ult.

FAREWELL DINNER TO GENERAL THUILLIER.—The Calcutta Town Hall was on Feb. 2 the scene of a farewell dinner, given by his brother officers and friends to Major-General Thuillier, on the occasion of his approaching departure from India. Sir Edwin Johnston, who was supported by Sir Richard Garth, occupied the chair, and between sixty and seventy persons were present. After the usual toasts had been drunk Sir Edwin Johnston rose and, in very handsome terms, proposed the health of the guest of the evening. Major-General Thuillier returned thanks in a very feeling speech, and the party broke up at about eleven o'clock.

AN INFANT ATHLETE.—At the annual athletic sports of the 34th (Cumberland) Regiment at Ferozepore, on the 25th January, a little boy, only four years and six months old, was brought forward, and announced as prepared to "walk half a mile, run half a mile, and pick up and place in a basket twenty-five oranges, put down in a line, one yard apart from another—all within twenty minutes." This gives over 700 yards. The little mite, dressed prettily in knickerbockers, red shirt and blue sash, and striped cap, started at the signal, and did his work in excellent style, seeming to take it quite easily and quietly. He was loudly cheered and applauded each time he came round. He finished his undertaking in seventeen minutes and four seconds, and did not seem any the worse for his plucky feat.

KASHGAR.—The Lahor correspondent of the Pioneer writes:—"I see that, from information derived from Chinese sources, you assume that the invading army of Celestials is within a dozen marches of Kashgar. This news is contradicted by the Yarkund traders, lately arrived at Ladakh, among whom is Mr. Dalgleish, of the Central Asian Trading Company. They report that the Chinese force is still at Kohna Turfan, which is at least 800 miles from Kashgar. There seems no reason to doubt the correctness of their information; and it is probable, therefore, that the story of the capture of Aksu, which appeared, doubtless with embellishments, in that periodical work of fiction, the Peking Gazette, is no more true than many other items of intelligence made known to the world by that too imaginative paper."

PERSONAL.—The Lucknow paper states that Sir Fitzjames Cumming, who is on a tour in this country, has gone on a shooting excursion with the Maharajah of Bulrampur in the Nepal Terai. The following changes will not be without considerable interest in the North-West; they arise from the departure of Mr. G. Michael, Commissioner of Benares. To Mr. Cairns Daniell, while Mr. James Simson, who succeeded Mr. Cairns, will take up the Judgeship at Lushington, the Sessions Judge of Allahabad, is expected to be on furlough for six months from the 1st of May. The High Court as to the way the vacancy ought to be filled are pretty well known, and we cordially hope they will agree with the Government.

A HARD CASE.—Of ordinary Baboo-English most readers will be tired, but the following letter may be found worth reading, even blasé as we all are to the style:—"To the Editor of the Pioneer, Allahabad. Honoured Sir,—By the death of my male parent's the cares of my innumerable families has devolved on my poor helpless shoulders to meat the wants of their bellies of all sizes, viz., from small children's to biggest individuals. But how can I do this onerous duty when I am not able to give satisfaction to my own belly which remains hungry for want of proper nourishments so undispensible to sustain the mortality of my vital breath as Coper has said in his poetry. If you will give me any situation; I shall do my duties to please you in this world and in the next. I have passed the Entrance of University but no gentlemen takes heed to me in providing birth. By your doing so you can be thus my male parents for helping. Hoping you will send early replies I am yours faithful obedient."

NARROW ESCAPE OF LADY LYTTON.—As the Viceroy's party, consisting of Lady Lytton, the Hon. Miss Lytton, Mrs. Barnett, Mademoiselle Fiez, and Captain Liddell, were returning from the Cathedral, after morning service last Sunday, in one of the Viceregal carriages, the horses suddenly became unmanageable on nearing the Outram Statue on the Chowringhee-road, and bolted with the barouche. Four of the body-guard who escorted the carriage fell back as they found that the coachman was fast losing control over the horses, and by riding beside them they frightened the animals all the more. Turning to the left the horses went at a frightful pace, the coachman, whose hat was blown off, still standing up and using his best endeavours to stop them. He was fortunately able to do so before they came up to the meeting of the four roads near the fort. Captain Liddell lost no time in assisting the ladies out, and a stranger passing by at once placed his brougham at her Ladyship's disposal. The ladies displayed great presence of mind by sitting quietly in the carriage.

THE EAST INDIA RAILWAY.—Mr. Renfel, C.E., Consulting Engineer to the East India Railway, has left Calcutta on his tour of inspection. He was to visit the Kurupalle coal mines and the workshops at Jampur, among other important points, and between the 6th and 12th would be joined by Lieutenant-General Strachey, R.E., and Mr. Bradford Leslie, the Company's Agent, the trio making the grand tour of the entire line. There is plenty of work on hand. The question of doubling the rails over the whole of the uncompleted length, and that of constructing tramways between some of the larger stations and the nearest entrepôts of native merchandise, await decision. For instance, at Cawnpore, a connecting link is needed between the railway station and the principal gunge. Again there is Badeysur, not far from Calcutta, which equally needs linking with the enormous depository of native traffic, a mile and a half off on the river bank. In fact, these facilities are required in fifty different directions. The traffic of the East India Railway, great though its present development, is only in its infancy.

OVERLAND COMMUNICATION WITH BURMAH (ALLAHABAD).—A correspondent of the Rangoon Gazette has started a subject of great interest to people in the provinces, viz., overland communication between Calcutta and Burmah. The project seems a very feasible one, and we have already rail communication to Prome, which is 163 miles on the way. From Prome to the coast of Arracan, either at Tonghoop or Kyook Phyoo, is a distance of 190 miles, which might easily be accomplished by dak, if the roads were improved, in twenty-four hours. From that portion of the coast to Calcutta, forty-eight hours would be necessary, or eighty-four hours only from Rangoon. There would be no great physical difficulty in having the railway extended to Tonghoop on the coast, if we except the Arracan Yomar range of hills. The Gazette states that Mr. Rivers Thompson, when in Calcutta, will consult the Government of India on the question of extending the Calcutta and South-Eastern State Railway into the province. The opening out of the Yomar range for coffee and tea plantations, for which they are admirably suited, and the ease with which labour could be obtained from Bengal if a railway existed, are facts which speak well for the returns of such a line.

MILITARY.—In the Gazette of India of the 19th of the last month we read that "the services of Colonel T. E. Gordon, C.B., Commandant of the Meywar Bheel Corps, are replaced at the disposal of the Military Department with effect from March 20th, 1878." Passing by the confusion of tenses, we venture to conclude that on March 20 next the officer named in this notification will be brought into the Adjutant-General's Department to fill the vacancy which will occur on that date by reason of the expiration of Major Scott's five years' tenure of office. Doubtless, too, we are justified, in concluding that Colonel Gordon will be the future Deputy Adjutant-General, and that on the post becoming vacant, as it is shortly expected to become, a new Adjutant-General will be sought for in the British service. We shall then revert to the former arrangement, of having the Adjutant-General selected from the British army, and the Deputy from the Indian army. Colonel Gordon's appointment will be favourably received by the Indian army, and with justice, for he is in every way qualified for so important a position; and we hope that the selection of his immediate superior will be equally judicious. If he be an experienced and popular regimental commanding officer, endowed with capacity, honesty, and independence, the army will be well satisfied.—Englishman.

DEPORTATION OF BALUCHIS.—An Allahabad contemporary says:—"A singular crowd could be seen in the Allahabad Railway Station a few evenings ago, the platform being blocked by upwards of 200 Beloochis, men, women and children, who were being deported by a paternal Government. The predatory bands of these wanderers have given the authorities so much trouble that the police in the Central Provinces were ordered to arrest all they could find in the various districts, and send them to Jubbulpore. Thence they were forwarded to Delhi by railway, and a halt of a few hours was made at Allahabad for refreshments. A number of native policemen were supposed to be in charge of the convoy; but no proper arrangements had been made for feeding the miserable party, and the complaints of the wretches were fully justified. They expressed a belief that they were being starved to death, and the pice they had with them did not suffice to buy much food. As they sat huddled together on the bare platform, they were keenly examined by the idle natives about, one of whom expressed an opinion that they were Russian spies whom the Sirkar had captured. Certainly in their filthy state they would have done credit to a full-flavoured Cossack. No steps seem to have been taken for preserving the ordinary laws of sanitation, and the condition of the unfortunates by the time they reached Delhi must have been rather odorous—to say the least."

THE MEDICAL SERVICES.—The members of the Indian and Royal Medical Services are eagerly waiting for information concerning the changes known to be imminent in those departments; and we hear that orders are expected within a short time, which will provide for very revolutionary changes. For years the expense of keeping up a double administrative staff has forced itself on the attention of Government; but in consequence of the refusal of Parliament, some seventeen years ago, to consent to the amalgamation of the two medical services, nothing could be done. Now, however, we believe the subject is under the consideration of the Secretary of State, and Dr. Cunningham, the Sanitary Commissioner with Government, who is at present in England, is understood to be advising the Home authorities. The first step will probably be the separation of the Indian Civil Medical Service from the military, making it a department per se, under the Lieutenant Governors of Provinces, with a Medical Secretary to Government as the local head. This change is recommended on the theory that after a man has spent fifteen or twenty years at civil work, he has necessarily become unfitted for the discipline and routine of military duty. It is presumed that all the present incumbents of civil appointments will be permitted to retain them, and that all other members of the Indian Medical Service will obtain the right to take up civil appointments as vacancies occur. The military organisation is a much more complex subject.—Pioneer.

A NEW ANÆSTHETIC.—The following letter appears in the Englishman:—"Investigators have experimented on different anæsthetics in the hope of finding a substitute for chloroform, having its advantages without the liability to fatal accidents. Hitherto chloroform has held its place, every substitute tried having been found to present disadvantages preventing its general employment. In a paper presented to the French Academy, M. Guibert describes some promising results obtained by the combined action of morphine and chloroform used so as to produce a state of analgesia, in which the patient, although insensible to pain, can see, hear, and answer questions more or less relevantly. At least fifteen minutes before administering the chloroform, fifteen to twenty milligrammes of hydrochlorate of morphia is injected under the skin; the quantity of chloroform inhaled is very moderate, eight to ten grammes having been sufficient for severe operations, the inhalation not being continued during the operation. The patient is told to answer questions put to him, and the inhalation of the chloroform is stopped when he becomes agitated, sleepy, or his ideas are confused; the required insensibility has then been arrived at. To maintain this state, it is merely necessary to administer chloroform carefully according to the mental state of the patient tested by questioning him. By avoiding the production of complete insensibility, and the administration of the usual large quantity of chloroform by the lungs, the danger which attends the administration of chloroform alone is avoided."

RETIREMENT OF NATIVE OFFICERS.—The increased and accelerated pensions for officers of the native army, to which the Secretary of State has given his consent, as we lately announced, apply to the case of native, not European officers. To readers acquainted with the original recommendations this would not need explanation, but for some others the announcement seems to have left room for groundless expectations. The long expected orders on this subject will shortly be promulgated. They are based on the report of a special committee assembled at the Delhi Camp of Exercise in 1875-76, though they do not go the length which the committee recommended. The principle on which the rules were originally framed is unchanged, viz., a small pension after a period of fifteen years in the case of a soldier being physically unfit, and a higher rate after a length of service sufficient in itself to render a man unfit for further active work. These limits were fixed at fifteen and forty years respectively, and the objections urged against them were, that in the first case a soldier on completing fifteen years' service endeavoured to qualify himself for his first pension, and that in the latter, having failed to get his pension in the early stage, he tenaciously clings to the service to qualify for the second. In these new rules the Government have refused to acknowledge the first objection, and have retained the fifteen years' limit; but they have acknowledged the second, and have reduced the period from forty to thirty-two years. This limit, it is hoped, will give the Government the best part of a soldier's life, and at the same time give the soldier himself a reasonable hope of a pension at a comparatively early age. The rates for the native officers' pensions have been modified, in the case of jemadars, from twelve and twenty to fifteen and twenty-five, and for subadars, &c., from twenty-five and forty to thirty and fifty. No change is made in the rates of pension for the other grades. On the whole, though we should have preferred a more thorough change to a limited period of service, accompanied by compulsory retirement and a right to a pension, the change now introduced may be considered a move in the right direction; and if the responsible authorities avail themselves of the power to compulsorily retire all men who qualify for the higher rate of pension, there should be no inefficiency in the army on the score of old age—a complaint which is unfortunately too rife in all three armies, but particularly those of Madras and Bombay. Some slight improvements are also introduced in the formation of invaliding committees for cases in which the inefficiency to be dealt with is not purely physical, so as to facilitate the discharge of men who, in days gone by, would have been considered "undesirable men to retain in the ranks," and disposed of accordingly.—Pioneer.

THE GODAVERI AND KISTNA WORKS.

So much has been lately written and said of the advantages of such large works as the Godaveri and Kistna and of the benefits they have conferred upon the country during all seasons, that it may not be uninteresting to give a few particulars of the large irrigation works in some of the most flourishing of the northern districts of the Presidency. These important projects may be justly attributed to the persistent advocacy of such men as Sir Arthur Cotton, who began and partially completed the Godaveri net work of channels. Owing to the large irrigation and navigable lines connected with the Godaveri, the crops thereabouts never fail, the country is always well supplied, the people are in a far better position than in the districts where there are no irrigation works like those of the Godaveri, and famine and all the evils which follow in its wake are unknown. The chief irrigation work in the northern districts is the Godaveri canals. With its 450 miles of navigable waterway and its large and productive trade, the district, now the second in importance in the Presidency, will soon, with the completion of the irrigation schemes still in progress, rank first, from a revenue point of view. The Godaveri anicut works were begun in 1844-45 for the supply of canals of the delta at the head of which it stands. The Godaveri drains an area of 115,570 square miles; the crest of the anicut is 33 feet above mean sea level and 33 miles from the coast. The length of the crest of the weir on the line of which the river is divided into four branches is 3,938 yards; the greatest supply of water which passed over the weir is 15'25 feet—these figures have, we think, since the issue of the report before us, been exceeded. In connection with the main canals are the Eastern Delta, which has a bottom width of 184½ feet, and when carrying a full supply the water is 8.21 feet deep; the Central Delta is 114 feet wide at the bottom, with a depth of seven feet of water; the Western Delta varies considerably in width, and all the principal canals are navigable. Four hundred and fifty miles of canals are ready for navigation, many of them in the past few years have been greatly improved, the total area of the delta is 2,923 square miles; the irrigation under the canals embraces 513,143 acres, with an average revenue of Rs. 15,61,019. The Eastern Delta canal is 146 miles in length; the Central Delta 142 miles; the Western Delta above a hundred miles; in all there are 495 miles of canals, of which 431 miles were completed up to the end of 1876-77. The Kistna anicut works were begun in 1852, many years after the Godaveri works. The site chosen for the anicut is at a point where the river is much narrower than its normal width; the length of the crest of this weir is 1,280 yards; in 1874 it was increased to a height of 19'42 feet above the weir crest, and this was the highest fresh which has occurred since the anicut was built. The drainage basin of the river has an area of about 11,000 square miles. The river divides the delta into two parts, the Eastern Delta main canal will, when completed, have a bottom width of 200 feet, and the depth of water 8½ feet; the main canal of the Western Delta has a bottom width of 230 feet and a depth of water of eight feet. The chief canals are navigable and their length is at present 254 miles. It is intended to make some additions hereafter by the extension or improvement of the canal so that it may be navigable. The area of the two parts of the delta is together 2,110 square miles, the irrigated area is 226,226 acres and the revenue Rs. 8,90,753; the ultimate area of irrigation is estimated at 500,000 acres. The proposed length of the canal is given at 320 miles, of which about 266 have been completed; the Eastern Delta embraces the Ellore, Mausulipatam, Bantumilly, Puderu and Budameru Canals; the Western Delta includes the Nizampatam Canal, the Bank Canal and the Commamoor Canal, the last-named being the one on which famine labour was lately largely employed, and with the best results. —Madras Standard.

STATION TALK.

RANGOON, Jan. 19.—Mr. J. D. Sandford, our Judicial Commissioner, will shortly leave for Mysor. I understand the members of the Bar intend inviting him to a dinner before he leaves, to show the esteem they have for him. He is, likewise, very popular in private society here, and is always ready to join in sports and pastimes, which makes him, I may say, universally liked. The versatile Colonel Wyndham has, I am informed, offered to construct a balloon for his Majesty the King of Burma, and promises to ascend in it himself. One hundred pieces of long cloth and earth-oil are asked for. The King has ordered the Kin Woon Woondouk, who, having been with the Burmese embassy in Europe, is supposed to be au fait with balloons, to report on the gallant Colonel's proposal. We are promised large supplies of refined white sugar from Upper Burma next year. The King imported the necessary machinery about five or six years ago, and has ordered 500 men to employ themselves solely in sugar cultivation this year. Two steamers for the Assam line have recently been constructed by the Irrawaddy Flotilla here, and have been successfully launched from their dockyard at Dallah. I suppose you may expect them in Calcutta next month, and I have no doubt the accommodation will be superior to any at present afforded on inland steamers plying with Calcutta, judging from the complaints one sees in your columns occasionally. The authorities have, I am glad to see, revoked the licence they granted at upset price to a man to sell liquor, a few doors from the shop of a licensed vendor who had bought his licence to sell for some thousands of rupees. It was such a scandal that it only required to be made public to be removed. In advocating a High Court for the province, a local paper points out that Burma is the only place where a Court of Appeal exists, in which the Judge whose decision is appealed from sits with one other Judge to hear the appeal. Such is our "Special Court." It need hardly be said that it is not a popular Court, and it seems a farce making a litigant pay stamps to appeal to the same Judge and another. In the past four years I do not think any decision of the Recorder's or Judicial Commissioner's has been reversed by the Special Court in which both these judges sit. It is said that a Stud Farm is soon to be established a short distance from Rangoon. A correspondent draws attention in the local papers to the large number of Commissariat elephants kept up in Rangoon. Troops to any place are always conveyed from sits with water, and the elephants are literally eating their heads off and doing nothing. In these days of reductions, it is surprising no one has noticed what a saving might be effected in this item in Rangoon. I recommend the subject to the notice of the Commander-in-Chief.—Englishman Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

BANGALORE BANK.—The native cashier of the Bangalore Bank has been committed to the sessions on charges of criminal breach of trust.

SMALL CAUSE COURTS.—It is reported that the Madras Government intends shortly to abolish all the country Small Cause Courts in that presidency, and to establish subordinate Judges' Courts in their stead.

SIR SALAR JUNG.—A Puna paper informs us that "Sir Salar Jung has sent a valuable present to the Prince of Wales as a Christmas gift. A telegram was received during the Mohurram from H.R.H. the Prince of Wales to Sir Salar Jung expressing his thanks for the present and inquiring about the health of the young Nizam."

ANTIQUARIAN REMAINS.—A granite image of "Budh" was recently found in Tinnevely when some excavations were being made. At the suggestion of the collector, Mr. Pennington, the image is to be sent to the Central Museum at Madras, and to be placed on a pedestal. It is a fine and rare specimen of art. Soon after it was found the image was placed as a statue on the esplanade at Tuticoreen, opposite the beach; it weighs 25 maunds, but as the native Christians objected to it on the ground that it will cause a bad impression among the non-Christians, they asked that the image be removed, and it has accordingly been ordered to be placed on the grounds belonging to the Museum.

SUTTEE.—It appears that though the Legislature has succeeded in putting Suttee down, the disposition of Hindu females to destroy themselves on the death of their husbands has not been altogether extinguished thereby. On the 13th January last a case in point occurred. A Brahmin of Bangalore, after suffering for a long time with leprosy, was on the point of death; his wife, observing that he was about to breathe his last, left the house under the pretence of seeking medical aid. Her husband died a few hours after, and a search for his widow resulted in the finding of her lifeless body floating in a well.

A GOLD MINING COMPANY.—A meeting was lately held by the members of the Alpha Gold Mining Company at Ootacamund, when three new directors, gentlemen well known in Madras, were appointed members. The present "expressed their conviction that, considering the splendid results shown by the working of the Alpha Reef by the Prince of Wales Company, which has indisputably proved the existence of gold in paying quantities, the time has arrived when active operations should be resumed on the Alpha. It is hoped that the company will be worked with greater care than before. Everybody is looking forward to large profits and with perseverance and a good haul of gold-producing quartz, the anticipations entertained may not prove Utopian dreams."

WEATHER PROPHECIES.—Mr. Pogson, the Government Astronomer of Madras, undismayed by Mr. Blanford's sneers, has again come forward with a guess as to the weather likely to be experienced in the Madras Presidency this year. In a memorandum published in the Madras Gazette of the 22nd inst. he says:—"If, as appears to be now pretty evident, the minimum frequently of solar spots, corresponding to maximum solar heat and minimum rainfall at places not far from the equator is now past, further deficiency in Southern India need no longer be feared for several successive years; but its recurrence between 1887 and 1889 may be as certainly anticipated as that of any other natural periodical phenomenon with the laws and working of which we are already much better acquainted."

MASTER AND SERVANTS' BILL.—The Master and Servants' Bill which Mr. Coleman proposes to introduce into the Madras Legislative Council is a model of brevity as compared with that produced by Mr. Stokes. It consists of only six clauses, but these seem to comprise all that is practically wanted, though the registration of servants is omitted. The objects and reasons of the Bill are as follows: "The object of this Bill is to give jurisdiction to magistrates to determine disputes arising between masters and servants, and to punish servants convicted of misconduct in the course of their service, or of unlawfully terminating their engagements. Masters may at present sue their offending servants in the Civil Courts; but in this, as in most other countries, this remedy has not been found of much practical effect; and it is believed to be expedient to give magistrates a summary jurisdiction in such cases."

MR. R. RICE.—The Madras Mail says that Mr. Robert Rice, B.A., B.L.D., late Assistant Collector of Bellary, and now "out of employ," on Rs. 320 per mensem, has been suspended for six months, and will, at the end of that period, revert to the position of Assistant Collector. He has been thirteen years in the service, and has passed with honours in Tamil and Telugu, and has also passed in Hindustani. It seems that having let his angry passions rise, he gave expression to them in a letter addressed to Mr. Wedderburn, the evergreen Collector of Coimbatore, Mr. Rice's former district, and that virtuously indignant Nestor showed him up to Government, whereupon the Government reported him to the Secretary of State with the above-mentioned result. We are not acquainted with the circumstances of the disagreement between Mr. Wedderburn and his former subordinate. Perhaps it may be inferred that, as is usually the case, there are faults on both sides, and the weaker has gone to the wall in the good old fashion.

"HUE AND CRY" DESCRIPTION.—The police of Vizagapatam have proclaimed a gentleman named Rodgers, who is accused of criminal breach of trust. Mr. Rodgers is minutely described in the police sheet. His colour is "dark brown;" his figure is "erect;" his gait is "swaggering;" his general appearance "slovenly and dirty;" his face "oval;" his nose "regular;" his caste "East Indian, but says he is a West Indian;" his trade "gives out he can do everything;" his cloth "is described as "English dress, generally seen in white pants and a black coat;" his "personal habits" are "drinks;" his associates "are drunkards." A Madras paper obtains all this from the district Gazette, and observes:—"When next our readers see a dirty, brown gentleman in 'white pants and a black coat,' swaggering, with erect figure and regular nose, on the highway, they may conjecture that they are regarding the illustrious Rodgers, a gentleman who can, by his own account, do everything."

LOCUSTS.—A correspondent writes:—"That pest of ryots, the omnivorous locust, has turned up in Tinnevely. I have not personally seen the beast, but on the most reliable authority I have heard that for a distance of seven or nine miles from Manichee towards Tuticorin the country is so infested, that the other day the train, for some distance, three miles or so, could scarcely get along. Thousands swarmed on to the engine and got smashed up under the wheels, so that the wheels slipped, and the driver had to descend and get sand put along the line for some three miles to get up the necessary friction. It was just, my informant says, as if the metals had been greased. There can be no doubt this is the locust, though no official information seems to have been given to the public. The insect appears to be about an inch long, with a grasshopper-like body and wings. It abounds in swarms, and the vegetation near has been destroyed; the cumbu stalks are left, but the leaves are gone. These are sufficient indicia to enable one to diagnose. If they have come to Tinnevely, they will doubtless look for pastures new. They will visit Madura and Trichinopoly. One thing is against them; a good many crops are being harvested, so that the reaper will have anticipated the destroyer."

THE SEABORNE TRADE OF THE PRESIDENCY.—The total number of vessels which entered and cleared at all the ports of this presidency in the official year 1876-77 shows a large increase when compared with the previous year, but there is little difference when they are compared with 1873-74 or 1874-75; 7,244 ships arrived at and cleared from all parts of the presidency, against 6,866 in the previous year and 7,396 in the year before. The total of steamers has steadily increased from 145 in 1870-71 to 283 in 1876-77. The arrivals and departures of vessels of all descriptions were largest in Madura and Tanjore, but it is said that they consisted almost wholly of native craft and dhonies plying between the ports of those districts and Ceylon. As regards steam navigation, Fort St. George stands first, and then follow Vizagapatam and Tinnevely. In the year under report the trade in grain between the Northern and Southern districts was active, and hence a large number of vessels arrived from these ports. Of the large number of vessels that entered and left the ports of the presidency, 100 were French, sixteen American, and nine Turkish; 12,000 vessels, of an aggregate tonnage of 3,402,590, were employed upon the coasting trade, showing an advance of 2,000 ships over the number of the previous year. The figures given for Madras, Ganjam, Godavery and Tanjore represent to a large extent the steamers engaged in the transport of food grains. The shipping for Malabar and South Canara consist almost wholly of sailing vessels, which carry on an extensive trade with Bombay.

STATION TALK.

MUSCAT, Jan. 19.—The return of Colonel Miles from furlough has been the occasion of universal rejoicing. He assumed office on the 4th, and the same night, at the instance of his Highness the Sultan and by general accord, the town was illuminated, Seyyid Toorkee contributing largely by a liberal distribution of candles. An entertainment by the merchants early in the evening, and one on board H.M.S. Teazer later in the night was arranged, at both of which the popular Colonel was an honoured guest. Shortly after he landed on the 3rd deputations of merchants (each class sending one) waited on him and welcomed him back. He is a type of the old Anglo-Indian officer, whose hospitality is proverbial, now rapidly becoming extinct. His sphere of usefulness during the five years he has been in office in troubled Muscat has not been limited. Through the length and breadth of the land he is popularly known as the friend of the slave. It may be thought by some this would make him unpopular with the Arabs, since slavery is an institution in benighted Arabia; but his influence with the Sultan being weighty, and his warm sympathy with the people, has endeared him to the Arabs. Many of the Muscat nobles are sensible they owe their security to him. Though our policy is one of non-interference in the affairs of the country, unofficially his opinion and advice carry great weight with the Sultan and are readily adopted. And it is well that it is so in a land in which life and property are so little respected and the Government so unstable, otherwise we should see the country deluged with blood at every change in the dynasty. Though Colonel Miles has but just attained his majority in the army, he is reckoned a rising man amongst politicals, and Muscat must be prepared to resign her claim to its services any day. Troublous times appear to be in store for H.H. Seyyid Toorkee again. His brother, Seyyid Abdool Azeez, has left Jaalan, and rumours of war are again obscuring the political horizon. The policy H.H. has adopted of discarding his brother because he will not consent to be banished is, to say the least of it, questionable. Were he to place his younger brother under obligation to him by granting him a pension, and thus debar him from airing a grievance, the door of sympathy which is now open to him on every side would be the more effectually closed against him, and his attempts to sow sedition thereby frustrated. It is no secret that the Sultan's sympathies are with his misguided brother, and it is well known that it is the counsels of some of his officers alone which retards a reconciliation. Sala bin Ali, the wily chief who heads every insurrection, makes capital out of the differences of the brothers, and thus keeps alive the feeling of resentment in the breast of the younger brother, whose straitened circumstances allow of it.—H.H. Seyyid Toorkee's life is an insecure one, as he has once suffered from a paralytic stroke, and medical men are of opinion the seeds of the disease cannot be eradicated, owing to his irregular mode of life. It would be well, therefore, for the house of Seyyid if a reconciliation could be arranged between the brothers, since, according to Mohammedan law, the eldest male member of the family succeeds to the throne, and not the next of kin.—The Daphne and Arab are up the Gulf, the former at Busra, the latter at Bushire. The Teazer rides at anchor in Muscat cove.—Bombay Gazette Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

THE CHOLERA.—The following has been received by the Resident at Aden from the British Consul at Jeddah:—"Since addressing you on the 6th inst. I have the honour to inform you that cholera is reported to have disappeared with the pilgrims from Mecca, and that the state of public health at Jeddah is satisfactory."

UNEQUAL MEASURES.—A correspondent of the Bombay Gazette calls attention to an injustice connected with the Overland Book parcel post. While a book may now be sent from England to India for 6d. per lb., a book cannot be sent from India to England under 8 annas, or exactly double! The literature of a country is one of its great glories, and most Governments take a delight in making its dissemination easy and cheap, but it is reserved for the Indian Post-office to place a restrictive postage on the literary productions of India.

THE GOVERNOR.—On Wednesday, the 6th ult., the old institution of public breakfasts at Government House was successfully revived by H.E. the Governor. Some sixty or eighty gentlemen drove in the morning to Malabar Point and breakfasted at half-past nine with his Excellency. H.E. the Commander-in-Chief and a large number of officers, the Hon. Mr. Gibbs, the Hon. Mr. Ashburner, the Hon. Mr. Marriott, and many other officials were present; the non-official world was also well represented. The Hon. Mahomed Ali Rogay and Mr. Manockjee Cursetjee were there.

• MILITARY ITEMS.—We regret to hear that Lieutenant Deane-Pitt, aide-de-camp to his Excellency the Governor, met with an accident last week. While jumping he was thrown from his horse, and had one of his arms broken. Major-General Primrose, C.S.I., commanding the Poona garrison, will, it is stated, leave for Seroor on a tour of inspection. The Major-General, after staying at Seroor, will proceed to Ahmednugger.

DEPARTURE OF DR. WARD.—One of the best known of the Bombay Ecclesiastical Service, the Rev. Dr. Ward Maule, leaves India, probably for good, as the phrase goes. He departs whilst yet hale and hearty, so that we may hope to hear of his entering on some new career of usefulness at home; but his term of service extends over a period of seventeen years. Dr. Maule's name will always be associated with Colaba Memorial Church, which owes its completion and several finishing touches to his efforts. Dr. Maule has always been popular as a preacher; and, a favourite in social circles, he is an exemplar of the more lively and genial aspects of modern Christianity.

COFFEE.—The coffee trade on the west coast has not yet begun, though about this time last year shipments were steadily despatched to the chief markets in Europe. The present state of the coffee trade is attributed to the disturbed condition of affairs in the European continent, and to the want of supplies at the chief ports of shipment. It appears that owing to the late heavy rains in the Wynaad it was impossible for the planters to dry the berry, and that is one reason why shipments have not yet begun. However, in the interests of the coffee trade and all those engaged in it, it is hoped that when business begins there will be a steady and increased export.

THE GOVERNOR'S PRIVATE SECRETARY.—Mr. C. E. Buckland's successor in the office of Private Secretary to Sir Richard Temple is Mr. George Hart, of the Finance Department. Mr. Hart is a son of the Mr. Hart who was at one time Chief Secretary to the Government of Bombay, and is also nephew to Sir Bartle Frere. He was some years ago strongly recommended to Sir Richard Temple's notice by Sir Barrow Ellis, and was for three years Private Secretary to his Excellency while Sir Richard held the office of Finance Minister. On Sir Richard's leaving the Government of India, Mr. Hart was selected by Lord Northbrook to be his Assistant Private Secretary, and enjoyed the late Viceroy's entire confidence. He has also an excellent character with his departmental superiors. Mr. Buckland leaves by to-day's mail on three months' leave, and on his return to India proceeds to Calcutta to take up his new appointment of Assistant Secretary to the Government of India in the Home Department.

ACCIDENT TO SIR RICHARD TEMPLE.—As the Governor of Bombay was returning in his carriage and four from the meeting of the Grant Medical College, on Thursday afternoon, the 7th ult., one of the leaders fell. The two hindmost horses passed over the prostrate animal, upon which the carriage rested, and was actually lifted from the ground. Fortunately the carriage was not overturned, and so the Governor and his staff escaped unhurt. A trifling grazing of the skin on the hip was the only injury suffered by the horse. The accident occurred directly after the Governor and his retinue entered Obelisk-road, where an immense crowd speedily collected and lined the thoroughfare for a considerable distance whilst preparations were being made to renew the journey. Much satisfaction was evinced when it was ascertained that the affair was not more serious.

OFFICIAL ITEMS.—Two appointments at Ahmednugger will shortly be vacant, viz., those of Staff Officer and Cantonment Magistrate. No one is yet named for either.—A vacancy is likely to occur amongst the Aides-de-Camp at Government House, as one of the household staff has obtained an appointment in the Financial Department.—We (Times of India) understand that the Secretary of State has sanctioned the appointment of a separate Commissioner of Salt Revenue in Madras, on a salary of Rs. 2,000 per mensem, and has asked the Government of India for an early expression of its opinion on the important question of the substitution of an excise for the present system of monopoly.—Mr. Spencer Tyndall, First-class Collector in Sind, arrived by the last mail, and proceeded the same day by the British Indian Steam Company's steamer to Kurrachee. Mr. Tyndall will possibly be appointed to Jerick.—Mr. W. J. Ham, late Mail Agent between Bombay and Suez, now on special duty with the Director-General of Post-offices in India, is going to Europe on matters connected with the Postal Union arrangements.

THE UNIVERSITY.—Some surprise has been caused in Bombay medical circles by the nomination of Surgeon Waters to be a Fellow of the University of Bombay. He is a very young man who has had the fortune to be appointed Physician to the Governor. Attendance upon an occasionally sick Governor can scarcely be considered exceptionally distinguished service. Dr. Waters's colleagues are wondering why his claims have been considered superior to those of other surgeons of the Presidency. Dr. Langley has had twenty years' service, and been an examiner for four years; Dr. Partridge has had twenty-three years' service; Dr. Blanc, nineteen years' service, with an examinership of two years; Dr. Hughes has been an examiner for four years; and then there is the Superintendent of the Lunatic Asylum, Dr. Murphy, who has some claims to a Fellowship. Two of the gentlemen mentioned are Professors—namely, Dr. Blanc and Dr. Hughes. Certainly Dr. Waters is to be congratulated on being hoisted over the heads of all these old and experienced seniors in his department. For our own part, we question whether the nomination is undeserved, when we remember that Dr. Waters's journeyings through Persia and the northern Syrian Desert were of considerable importance in a political as well as a geographical sense. Some dissatisfaction is also felt at the nominations from among native graduates, several old and respectable practitioners having been passed over in the most mysterious way.—Bombay Gazette.

THE BOMBAY EXHIBITION OF 1873.—A rather peculiar suit has been before Mr. Justice Bayley at the Bombay High Court, in which Dr. Burjorjee Dorabjee, a medical practitioner in Bombay, and his wife claims Rs. 35,000 for damage done to certain pictures which were exhibited at the Bombay Exhibition of 1873, and which had been entrusted to the defendant, Mr. G. W. Terry, as Honorary Secretary to, and a member of, the Exhibition Committee. The Exhibition was held under the patronage of his Excellency the Governor of Bombay; and the suit is therefore defended under instructions from the acting Government Solicitor, Mr. H. Cleveland. Plaintiffs, it was stated, delivered to defendant, at his request, a large number of pictures of great value, including oil paintings, water-colour drawings, and photographs. The defendant denied the pictures were worth more than Rs. 3,500 in all, and stated that when delivered to him they showed signs of considerable wear and tear. Towards the end of April, 1873, he was ready to redeliver them, but allowed them, at the request of the plaintiff, Burjorjee, to remain in the Victoria Museum, in which the Exhibition had been held, and of which he (Mr. Terry) was then acting Curator. Due care was taken of them until 1st November, 1873, when he made over charge of the Museum and its contents to Dr. Wellington Gray, and he believed the same care was taken of them subsequently. Defendant had offered to repair the damage before this suit was instituted, and he brought into Court Rs. 150, which he said was more than sufficient to indemnify the plaintiffs. The case is still at hearing.

DRAINAGE SCHEME FOR BOMBAY.—The Commission appointed by Government to select a drainage scheme for the acceptance of the municipality of Bombay has sent in a Report recommending the adoption of Colonel Tulloch's scheme, as modified by Mr. Walton, for discharging all the sewage of Bombay into the sea at Worlee. The Commissioners are unanimously of opinion that, if this project be carried out, it will not affect injuriously the health of the city, as they think that, if the outfall be properly constructed, and the sewage discharged into deep water, there should be no offensive deposit on the western foreshore, or smell to taint the sea-breeze. They reject the proposal to take the sewage to Colaba on account of the evidence given by Captain Morland and other witnesses as to the probability that, unless the outfall were placed at least as far out as the new Lighthouse, the nightsoil would be carried back by the tide into the Harbour, while the great cost of constructing the main sewer through rocky ground as far as the position where complete security against the pollution of the Harbour would be attained makes the execution of such a project impracticable. With regard to the several proposals for utilising the sewage which were placed before them, the Commissioners unanimously recommend that no experiments of this kind should be tried in Bombay, as they certainly would not pay, and their effect on the health of the population might perhaps be disastrous. The conclusions of the Commission will, we think, find general acceptance, though for our own part we retain the conviction that the only absolutely safe outfall would be one placed to leeward of the island at the furthest extremity of Colaba, and that this advantage should have been secured at any cost. Bombay Gazette.

THE FIRST VOLUNTEER BALL.—The Bombay Volunteer Rifles gave their first ball on Friday night, the 8th ult., and gave it so pleasantly, and with such attention to every possible detail of comfort and welcome, as to prove that they have very quickly reached the age of military hospitality. For the last week tickets have been in eager demand, and this demand was scarcely lessened when it was known that H.E. Sir Richard Temple had expressed a willingness to attend with a party from Malabar Point. The Town-hall was of course chosen, as affording the largest possible room for dancing and display—and the Town-hall has probably never been so prettily decorated since it was first called into existence, and has certainly never been so worthily filled. Among those who came by special invitation were—his Excellency Sir Richard Temple and Miss Temple, and a numerous company of officials, and others with their wives and families. A large number of the friends and acquaintances of the Bombay Volunteers were present. The ball opened at nine, and many of the visitors arrived with fashionable punctuality. At half-past nine the Hall was already filled; in a few minutes more the Marine Band struck up the first quadrille, and H.E. Sir Richard Temple appeared with his notorious punctuality in time to lead off. In the first quadrille he led off with Mrs. Sexton vis-a-vis to Major Sexton and Miss Temple. There were twenty-two dances in the full programme, and before the last of the guests retired, at half-past five, several additional dances had been interpolated before the band struck up "Sir Roger." His Excellency said that next month he hoped to give the corps a sort of return entertainment—probably a dinner or a ball, as might be most acceptable to the regiment. The Volunteer Ball must become an annual institution, and one of the pleasantest social features of the year, if we still have Captain Tennent to undertake the responsibilities of management and decoration, and Lieut. Freeborn to look after the catering department. Times of India.

TAX ON ARRACK.—Lord Carnarvon has sanctioned a special tax on arrack towards meeting the interest on £350,000, the sum which, according to the revised estimate submitted to a committee of the Colombo Municipal Council, is required to meet the cost of a proper water supply to the town.

CIVIL.—Mr. Templer, it is announced, will take up his appointment as Government Agent, Central Province, and will be succeeded by Mr. Hume, whose place is to be occupied by Mr. Moir, now Assistant Agent at Trincomalie.—The Colonial Secretary will start for England early in February, on a six months' leave of absence. Ceylon Times.

THE WEATHER.—The weather, although showing signs of improvement, is as yet far from settled, and the accounts from the planting districts represent matters there as very far from encouraging, rain continuing to fall daily, more or less. In several districts a good blossom is making its appearance, but this, unless assisted by dry warm weather, must perish very shortly, and so far diminish the prospects of the forthcoming crop. The receipts of parchment coffee in Colombo are already declining, and this fact, added to the unfavourable weather for curing operations, will explain the falling off in our reports to date,—a decline which must continue to increase as the season advances.

THE GOVERNOR.—His Excellency the Governor has everywhere experienced an enthusiastic reception in the north. Leaving Manar on the 11th, his Excellency arrived at Jaffna on the 14th. Here addresses were presented by the Roman Catholics, the native and the burgher inhabitants, which Sir James Longden acknowledged in turn, remarking that he desired to govern without any distinction of creed, race, or colour, according to the principle that had characterised his action in every colony he had hitherto governed. At Trincomalie, where his Excellency arrived on the 18th, the reception was especially cordial. The party were detained there for several days, owing to the unfavourable weather, but were expected to leave on the 21st for Kandy, the visit to Anuradhapura having been abandoned. Ceylon Times, Jan. 22.

THE REV. B. MORRELL is appointed Chaplain of Berhampur.
